What They Say.

What does the brook say, flashing its feet
Under the lilies that brimming bowls,
Brightening the shades with its tender song,
Cheering all drooping and sorrowful souls?
It says not, "Be merry!" but, deep in the wood,
Rings back, "Little maiden, be good, be good!"

What does the wind say, pushing slow sails
Over the great, troubled path of the sea,
Whirling the mill an the breezy height,
Shaking the fruit from the orchard tree?
It breathes not, "Be happy!" but sings, loud and long,
"O bright little maiden, be strong be strong!"

What says the river, gliding along,
To its home on far-off Ocean's breast;
Fretted by rushes, hindered by bars,
Ever weary, but singing of rest?
It says not, "Be bright!" but, in whispering grave,
"Dear little maiden, be patient, be brave!"

What do the stars say, keeping their watch
Over our slumbers, the long, lone night;
Never closing their bonnie bright eyes,
Though great storms blind them, and tempests fright?
They say not, "Be splendid!" but write on the blue,
In clear silver letters, Maiden, be true!"

International Texts.

LESSON VIII.—MAY 21, 1876.

SUBJECT: "Christian Fellowship" Acts iv. 23 37.

Commit to Memory Verses 31, 33.

GOLDEN TEXT—"We being many are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Rom. xii. 5.

CENTRAL TRUTH—Christ is the center of union.

READING LESSON—Acts iv. 23-37

HOME READINGS—Monday, Acts iv. 23 37.
Tuesday, Acts xii. 1-17.
Wednesday, Eph. vi. 10-20.
Thursday, II. Cor. xii. 1-3
Friday, Rom. xv. 1-21.
Saturday, John xv. 12 27.
Sunday, I John iii. 1-18.

ANALYSIS.

1. CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP IN PRAYER.—Peter and John, as soon as released by the council, seek "their own company," and report what had happened to them; whereupon "they lifted up their voice to God with one accord"—that is, all united in prayer and praise (verses 23-31). 11. CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP IN WORK.—The whole company of believers "were of one heart and of one soul," "and with great power;" thus united, they bore witness, "and great grace was upon them all."

QUESTIONS.

1 What was the subject of the last Lesson?
2 When released by the council, where did the apostles go?—Verse 23.
3 What did they report?—Verse 23.
4 Of whom did they seek counsel? how?—Verse 24.
5 Who had foretold these times of trial?—Verse 25.
6 What four powers sought to destroy Jesus?—Verse 27.
7 For what did the disciples first ask?—Verse 29.
8 How did they ask to be sustained? —Verse 30.
9 How was their prayer answered? —Verse 31.
10 What is said of the number of believers at the time?—Verse 32.
11 How did they hold their property? —Verse 32.
12 What did they do with "great power?"—Verse 33.
13 Why were none of the Christians in want?—Verse 34.
14 How were they provided for?—Verses 34, 35.
15 What Christian is spoken of by name?—Verse 36.
16 By whom was he called Barnabas?
17 Where was he from? of what tribe?
18 What act of his is here noted?
19 For whom are we to hold our property?
20 Must we not give an account to God for its use?

BIBLE CLASS.

1 What is Christian fellowship?
2 How did the conduct of the disciples show it?
3 What is meant by "their own company?"—Verse 23.
4 What is meant by "lifted up their voice to God?"—Verse 24. Read Gal. vi. 2.
5 What three results followed their prayer?—Verse 31.
6 What is said as to the number of believers?
7 How many were converted by the two sermons of Peter?—Acts ii. 41; iv. 4.
8 What was laid at the apostles feet? —Verses 35-37.
9 In what spirit was this done?—Verse 32.
10 What was done with the money?—Verse 35.
11 Why is such a thing not practicable now?
12 Who are "God's poor?"
13 Is not the Spirit of Christ a spirit of liberality?—2 Cor. viii. 9; vi. 10.
14 What do the facts in this Lesson teach us?—(1) To spread all our troubles before the Lord. (2) The power of united, believing prayer. (3) The true way to gain boldness and firmness in Christian work. (4) How to use our property for the glory of God.
15 Repeat and explain the Golden Text. Read James v. 16; Acts xx. 36 38; Ps. cxxiii. Matt. viii 19, 20; Mal. iii. 10; Rom. xii, 13; 1 John iii 17.

LESSON-HYMN, 886.

Rural and Domestic.

STEWING DRIED PRUNES.—Wash them throughly, and let them soak in a little warm water on the back part of the stove for a few hours; then put them into a preserving kettle, with the same liquor—not pouring off the sediment at the bottom. Add a few sticks of cinnamon. Let them stew slowly for an hour, and then add a pint of good cider to every quart of prunes, and then stew for twenty minutes longer, adding sugar to taste; but only a small supply is needed, unless you want them very sweet. Cooked in this way, they make a delicious pie, and are always an excellent dish for the tea table.—Daisy Eyebright, in Country Gentleman.

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another.—Jesus.

Farmers as Business Men.

It is popularly supposed by a large class of farmers that none but business men need to acquire a knowledge of business forms and rules. To their mind the business man occupies a position similar to the lawyer and the doctor: he learns his trade and proceeds to get a living by it This class of men believes that business forms are unintelligible, whereas they are very simple. He is as respectful at the mention of the words "percentage," "drafts," "bill of lading," "invoice," etc., as he is when he hears his family physician talk Latin. But every farmer is a business man. He has crops to go to market; he wants to sell to the best advantage; he has to sell oftentimes on credit: and he is continually buying. To all intents and purposes he is a business man.—It would seem very desirable, however, that the younger men who are one day to fill the places of the present generation should learn how to handle with ease and accuracy the business forms and methods which commercial men by long practice and experience have reduced to a system.—American Farm Journal.

PEAS AS A FARM CROP.—The idea has gotton hold on the public mind that it is a good thing, but a costly one. It is true that, when considered simply as a preparation for wheat, wheat, without calculating on any immediate return except through the increase of the wheat crop, the outlay of money and labor might form a considerable item; but I am confident that a return much more immediate, and even, if possible, more valuable, may be realized. If farmers would give one field to the pea, to be drilled in with one hundred pounds of superphosphate to the acre, and, after maturity, fed down upon the ground to hogs, the pork realized would more than pay the entire expense of the pea crop, and leave the land almost if not quite in as good a condition as if the entire crop had been turned under, for everything would be left upon the land, except that carried away in the form of fat. I am satisfied that an acre of good peas will make at least one hundred pounds of pork, which will pay all the expense attending the crop twice over.—Correspondent of Southern Farmer.

THE RIGHT WAY TO BOIL EGGS.—There is an objection to the common way of boiling eggs which people do not understand. It is this: The white, under three minutes' rapid cooking, becomes tough and indigestible, while the yolk is left soft. When properly cooked the eggs are done evenly through, like any other food. This result may be obtained by putting the egg into a dish with a cover, as a tin pail, and then pouring upon them boiling water, two quarts or more to a dozen eggs, and cover and set away from the stove for fifteen minutes. The heat of the water cooks the eggs slowly, evenly, and sufficiently, and to a jelly like consistency, leaving the centre or yolk harder than the white, and the egg tastes as much richer and nicer as a fresh egg, and no person will want to eat them boiled after having tried this method once.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides the well known properties as a ready for indigestion and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anæmia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions.

Which shall I take?

This is often a serious question with the invalid. He finds the market flooded with proprietary medicines, scores of which are recommended as certain cures for his particular ailment. He reads the papers, circulars, and almanacs, and finds each sustained by plausible argument setting forth its virtues and specific action The recommendations are as strong for one as for another. The cures claimed to have been wrought by one are as wonderful as those claimed to have been wrought by another in his perplexity and doubt, the sufferer is sometimes led to reject all But it should be borne in mind, that this condition of things is one that cannot be remedied In land where all are free, the good—the truly valuable—must come into competition with the vile and worthless, and must be brought to notice by the same instrumentality, which is advertising. In such a case, perhaps the only absolute proof that a remedy is what it claims to be, is to try it. The "test of a pudding is the eating of it." Prove all things, hold fast that which is good," is the apostolic injunction There may, however, be stronger presumptive evidence in favor of one remedy than there is in favor of a other, and this should be allowed its due weight. A due regard to this may save a vast amount of experimenting and a useless outlay of money. As presumptive evidence in favor of Dr. Jayne's Family Medicines, the proprietor feels free to say, that they are prepared by a new and scientific process by which the virtues of the crude plants and roots are extracted without the use of a particle of alcohol. Not a particle of this destroyer of our race enters into the composition of either the Golden Medical Discovery or Favorite Prescription. This consideration alone ought certainly to rank them high above the vile nostrums containing alcohol, Jamaica rum, sour beer, or vinegar, which a e every where offered for sale. Again, they are of uniform strength, and their virtues are at once imparted by age. They are also made from fresh herbs and roots, gathered in their appropriate season, when they are flush with medical properties. Support of these claims, the following testimony is offered:

R. V. Pierce, M. D: NEWARK, N. J.

Dear Sir,—I have sold a great deal of your excellent remedies, and I prefer to sell them before others, because they give good satisfaction to those who use them. I hear such remarks as "Sage's Remedy completely cured me; it is a splendid thing;" or, "Pierce's Discovery is just what I wanted; I feel better than I ever did." One of our celebrated singers uses it for strengthening her voice, and says "there is nothing equals it;" and so I might give scores of remarks and speak your preparations. A colored woman was using your Discovery, and after taking three bottles was completely cured She, laking in the store, said to me, "I don't want no doctors round me as long as I can get the Discovery; it beats all your doctors." And so I might go on

I am most respectfully, yours,
ATHA B. CROOKS.

VALUABLE

Real Estate for Sale

— AT —

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Flat River, and containing 5,000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C.; unders high state of cultivation; fine cotton lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grapes grow luxuriantly on these lands. Mill, solid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of grazing and tillage. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, lying, fish, rowing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying I. the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 450 acres lying on Lovill's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 50 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 351 acres, lying on Rutledge and Sood Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a l of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles

CENTENNIAL HYMN.

BY W. W. HOLDEN

We hail the power that rules the year,
With riches of the seasons in its car;
The last bright link that binds to-day
To one full century of our race.

Along that century's vista I survey
Our thoughts and hopes all the way all the way,
Though free in Him, His vital force
Hath planted and led us on to-day.

Full-orbed, the roar of battle rolls
On land, on sea, to every shore,
Where Him high sceptre controls
That light which brings to take me to-day.

Sent forth by our ascended Lord,
Round the whole earth the gospel
Preaching the everlasting Word
To all who dwell below the sky.

The world is Christ's. Its kingdoms too
Are ruled by His all-quickening Word
Before Him every knee shall bow
And own Him Jesus, Christ, the Lord.

The Bridegroom comes! The last expired
All things are ready, come away!
The church ascends to meet Him in the air
In realms of the world to-day.

Because we saints! All angels and
The glorious Departed come!
Death and the grave no more possess
Since Jesus died, and rose again.

SKETCHES OF THE PIONEER METHODISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

BY REV. H. T. HUDSON.

NUMBER 8.

The memorable year of 1784—Organization of M. E. Church—Methodism marching Southward—Wilmington — Beverly Allen — Methodism planted in Charleston.

Before I follow up the progress of Methodism in North Carolina, it may be well to note briefly some of the important events occurring this year (1784) which pertain to the general history of our church. The year 1784 is one of the marked eras in the History of American Methodism. It was on the 24th of December 1784, that the first General Conference convened in Baltimore. Dr. Coke presided. A letter was presented by him from Mr. Wesley authorizing

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

In accordance with this document it was agreed," says Asbury, "to form ourselves into an Episcopal Church, and to have superintendents, elders and deacons." Dr. Coke had been ordained in England, first a presbyter by the Church of England, then afterwards bishop by Mr. Wesley "under the unpretentious but synonymous title of superintendent." Dr. Coke assisted by the presbyters, Vasey and Whatcoat, ordained As bury first deacon, then presbyter, and thirdly bishop. Then they proceeded to ordain ten elders and three deacons. So we see that if presbyterial ordination be valid, the Methodist ministry is in the regular line of apostolic succession, if the clergy of England be in that line. Mr. Wesley, who investigated thoroughly the validity and scriptural orthodoxy of presbyterial ordination, said in the letter read before the Conference: "Lord King's Account of the Primitive Church convinced me, many years ago, that bishops and presbyters are the same order, and consequently have the same right to ordain." Methodism now," says Dr. Stevens, "presented itself to the new nation, an Episcopal Church, with all the necessary functions and functionaries of such a body, the only one of Protestant denomination now in the nation, for the colonial fragments of the English Establishment had not been reorganized." "Their (Episcopalians) first general convention, for reorganization, was not held till the autumn of 1785, and the Episcopal consecration of Coke for America by Wesley was prior to that of Seabury by the Scotch nonjuring bishops." It appears then from this authority that the Methodist Church is about one year older than the Protestant Episcopal Church. The Church being now regularly and officially established proceeded to such legislative enactments as appeared necessary to work its machinery. A form of Discipline was drawn up.—The Articles of Religion abridged by Mr. Wesley from the thirty nine Articles of the English Church, dropping out those of Calvinistic and papal tendency, were received and adopted at this Conference. The salary of the preachers was fixed at $64 and no more," and the same sum to each wife of the preachers, and a small amount to the children under 14 years. A plan was devised to relieve the "superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of preachers." The preachers having been ordained were directed to administer the sacrament; "the people to receive it kneeling," and to baptize persons who were "to have their choice of immersion or sprinkling." "At this time," says Jesse Lee, "the prayer book, as revised by Mr. Wesley, was introduced among us; and in the large towns, and in some country places, our preachers read prayers on the Lord's day. . . But some of the preachers who had been long accustomed to pray extempore were unwilling to adopt this new plan. . . . fter a few years the prayer book was laid aside, and has never been used since in public worship."—The abandonment of the prayer book system was one of the wisest steps taken by our fore-fathers. Few Methodists now know that their church was organized with a Liturgical service, and that Bishop Asbury and Coke, and some of the elders appeared in the pulpit in the canonical dress of gowns and bands, "but it was opposed by many of the preachers and private members, and after a few years given up." Having briefly noted some of the important and cotemporaneous events connected with the general movement of Methodism, let us now come back to North Carolina.

METHODISM GOING SOUTHWARD.

It was not until the year of 1784 that Methodism began to move toward the Southern portion of North Carolina. Wilmington appears on the Conference Minutes this year with Beverly Allen and James Hinton as the preachers. The Society numbered eighty members at this date. In 1785, John Baldwin labored in Wilmington. After this year, Wilmington disappears from the Conference roll, and does not appear again till 1800, at which time preachers began to be regularly stationed there. It is supposed that the first society at Wilmington was taken into the New River circuits, which embraced portions of Onslow and New Hanover counties. This circuit was formed in 1785, and had the large membership of 575 as early as 1785. This was an interesting field of ministerial work, judging from the quick growth of its membership, and the fact that such able men as Philip Bruce and Henry Ogburn were its first preachers. The Society in Wilmington was feeble, and composed of colored people up to the year of 1797. "The first class," says Jesse Lee, "of white people that was formed in Wilmington, N. C., was joined together on the 24th of December 1797." "There were at that time a few pious persons among the white people in that town, and one man that joined with us was a young preacher. But the blacks were much more attentive to religion than the whites." "Mr. William Meredith who had been in connection with Mr. Hammitt (Hammitt was a renegade Methodist preacher who organized a new party in Charleston, S. C. in 1791) went to Wilmington, N. C. and built a meeting house, and collected a large society of black people, and brought them into good order, and many of them appeared to be deeply pious. Some difficulties arose between him and Hammitt, and they parted some years before either of them died. Some time in 1798 Mr. Meredith's meeting house was burnt down, together with his dwelling adjoining it. Not long after this, he built another larger meeting house.—He wished to be united with us, and requested in case he should die that we would take charge of his society. He died in 1799, and left his meeting house, dwelling house and society to us. Since then we have kept a stationed preacher in that town."—The Wilmington appointment remained under the jurisdiction of the Virginia Conference until 1801, when it was transferred to the South Carolina Conference, having at this date 24 whites and 300 colored members.

BEVERLY ALLEN,

the first stationed preacher in Wilmington, was a man of extraordinary talents, and was a leader in the day of his glory. He was chosen as the first man to introduce Methodism into Georgia in 1785, and the next year he reported 78 members gathered in that fruitful field. His influence rose to the point of being the most prominent representative of Methodism in Georgia and South Carolina, having an almost unparalleled popularity as a preacher." In the Minutes of 1792 his name stands as "expelled." He married in the community of Charleston "a fine, pious woman, a member of the church; but like David, in an evil hour, he fell into sin, violated the laws of the country, and a writ was issued for his apprehension. He warned the sheriff not to enter his room, and assured him if he did he would kill him. The sheriff rushed upon him and Allen shot him dead.—He fled from this country to escape justice, and settled in Logan county, Ky., then called "Rogues' Harbor."—His family followed him, and here he practiced medicine. To ease a troubled conscience he drank in the doctrine of Universalism; but he lived and died a great friend to the Methodist Church." It was charitably supposed that he was afflicted with partial insanity.

Methodism continued its march Southward, and established itself in Charleston, S. C. as early as 1785.—In February of this year, Bishop Asbury, Jesse Lee and Henry Willis went to Charleston and obtained the use of an unoccupied Baptist Church, and Lee preached the first Methodist sermon ever delivered in that city, except the one preached by Pillmoor as he was passing through that country. Mr. Lee's was the first one preached with the set purpose of establishing a society in that place. "At this meeting," says Lee, "Mr. Wells, at whose house we put up, was awakened and felt the need of religion. Mr. Willis preached in the afternoon, and I preached again at night, and again the next night, after which I left the city. Mr Asbury continued in the city a few days, and then left Mr. Willis there as a stationed preacher, by whose labors a society was soon formed, and has continued until the present day." Deep piety, amiable manners and inflexible perseverance made Willis eminently fit for this great work. Within two years, a comfortable house of worship was built in Cumberland street, which became the birthplace of many precious souls, and thus Methodism was firmly planted in Charleston. From this central point it radiated out into the interior of South Carolina, came North ward, and spread through the South western counties of North Carolina.

Living the Truth.

The one truth you live is worth a great deal more than the twenty truths you only profess to believe—Fidelity to objective truth has its uses; but nothing can take the place of the lived truth, the experienced verity, the soul transforming word of God. You are ready to kill other people for infidelity to the truth; are you willing to die a little in your personal self will for any truth of Jesus? You can see the lurking atheism in your brother's sermons; can you see in yourself the lurking of God's Peace? No creeds, no public professions, no solemn rites, are anything to you without the clean heart and the pure spirit, except they be helps to these actual fruits of religion. If they are ends woe to you; for you have mistaken the altar of the sacrifice, and the confession of sin for true faith in Jesus.

Live the truth. Begin to morrow with something you understand, with the near and demonstrable facts of religion, and live them. For instance: You believe in the power of prayer.—Pray, then. You tell us it can perform wonders. Show us these wonders in your own life. Get close to the throne, live there, and that life will shine through you. You attach much importance to right faith. So do we; but the best kind of faith is that which comes out of a man in words seasoned with grace, in deeds clothed in righteousness. The blessed end of right believing is right living: do not be satisfied when a man can say his catechism without faltering; lead him on to live his catechism with out stumbling. And do not disparage any more such choice fruits as common honesty, truth telling, and good neighborhood. They are all truths of life that are worth every thing as proofs that the kingdom of God is indeed among men.—The Methodist.

The Great Defect

The grand infirmity of family prayer, or of what is sometimes called family religion, is that it stands alone in the house, and has nothing put in agreement with it Whereas, if it is to have an honest reality, as many things as possible should be soberly and deliberately put in point of religion itself that by its very nature it rules presidingly over everything desired, done, thought, planned for, and prayed for in the life. It is never to finish itself up by words, or supplications, or even by sacraments, but the whole customs of life and character must be in it by a total consent of the man. And more depends on this, a hundred times, than upon any fervors, or passionate fights, or agonizings. The grand defect will in almost all cases, be in what is more deliberate, viz., in the want of any downright honest casting of the family in the type of religion, as if that were truly accepted at the first.

See just what is wanted, by what is so very commonly not found. First of all, the mere observance kind of piety, that which prays in the family to keep up a reverent show or acknowledgment of religion, is not enough. It leaves everything else in the life to an open space for covetousness, and all the gay lastings of worldly vanity. It even leaves out prayer, for the saying prayers is in no sense really the same as to pray.—Contrary to this, there should be some real prayer, for the meaning's sake, and not for the shell of religious decency, in which the semblance may be kept. This latter kind, looks indeed, for no return of blessing from God, but only for a certain religious effect, accomplished by the drill of repetitional observance.

[From Zion's Herald.]

Preach the Decalogue.

BY REV. E. DAVIES.

The constant disclosures of fraud and corruption in high places, and in places that are not so high, ought fully to convince the nation of the decay of public conscience. In almost all the walks of life we find men acting as if conscience were dead, and as if they had no fear of a life of sin. Who can tell what this state of things will lead to? "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse," and so repeated and terrible are the revelations of dishonesty in almost every form, and in almost every position of life, that it is becoming a serious question, whether we have honest men enough to carry on the business of the nation. Have we honest men enough in the Cabinet or in this Congress? Have we honest men enough to carry on the banking or commercial business of the nation?

But I write to suggest one effectual way to remedy this fearful state of things. It is that every pulpit of the land should preach on the Ten Commandments, and continue to preach on them, Sabbath after Sabbath, until men shall hear the thunders of Sinai and the voice of the Almighty and trembling before Him, fly to Christ. Let the law be preached in its spiritual application, showing that it is spiritual in its nature, and reaches to "the thoughts and intents of the heart." Therefore, "he that hateth his brother (has the spirit of murder) is a murderer' in his heart; "he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart;" and he that has the desire to be dishonest is a dishonest man in his heart, and God judges man by the state of his heart. Let every form of sin be exposed in the light of the law and of the public sanctuary, and then we should not have ministers and Church members put into State prisons for forgery. Let sin be made odious in public, and it will not be so easily practised in secret Then let us show men that their sins will surely find them out at the judgment day, if not in this world; and that all their secret sins are committed in the light of God's countenance, and they will all be exposed in the day of final account.

The conscience must be probed by the divine law, for by the law is the knowledge of sin;" and just in proportion as the spirituality of the law is kept out of sight, there will be the decay of the public conscience. Dear brethren of the ministry, are we clear in this matter? When I was preaching on this subject last Sabbath, and casting my eye over the fearful signs of crime and wickedness in every direction, it seemed to me that every minister should preach on the Ten Commandments for the next three months. If we mutilate the Gospel by keeping back the plain teachings of the law, then we shall find that our hearers will have but little conscience. We need men to thunder in the pulpit, and to flash the law like livid lightning through the souls of sinners. There was a different state of things under the plain preaching of the old Puritans. "Those stern, grand defenders of the government of God would have thundered and lightened until they had almost demolished their pulpits, if such immoralities had shown themselves under their instructions as are common in these days."

As a nation we have need to blush before the civilized world for the many abominations that are coming to the light, day by day. The London Standard says: "Happily the countries are few where so gross an abuse of trust (as that of Belknap) would be possible." The London Telegraph says: "Disclosures after disclosures have lately darkened the commercial, religious, judicial, administrative institutions of the United States, which bring the blush of shame and of anxiety to the face of every honest American, and make countless friends of the Republic in this country, silent and sorrowful."

We need to strengthen the public conscience from the pulpit, because the periodical press takes its tone from the pulpit, and it is well known that many of these are skeptical in their tone and tendency. Infidelity is becoming prevalent in many classes of society. Let us clear ourselves in this matter! When fascinating ministers become the favorites of infidels and wicked men, we need to inquire if the offense of the cross has ceased, and if we are clear of the blood of all men! An emasculated Gospel is no gospel at all. Let us hold up the law, showing the depravity of the human heart and life, and then the law will be the school master to bring men to Christ. The voice of the pulpit ought to be heard in the Congress of this nation. In the White House, and in every place. We should preach the whole Gospel till men tremble before God, and the nation is saved from impending ruin.

Old bells can be made as good as new ones. Old belles can't.

Courage at the Last.

The excellent Sir William Forbes, the biographer of Beattie, uttered this: "Tell those," said he, "that are drawing down to the bed of death, from my experience, that it has no terrors; that in the hour when it is most wanted, there is mercy with the Most High; and that some change takes place which fits the soul to meet its God." When the loyal Earl of Derby came to his execution, although he had said in previous times, that he could die in fight, but knew not how it might be on the scaffold, he now [illegible] his head on the block as calmly as on his pillow. "Let my patience now," said the pious Archdeacon Aylmer, that their pastor died undaunted, and not afraid of death I bless my God that I have no fear, no doubt, no reluctance, but an assured confidence in the sin overcoming merit of Jesus Christ." So said President Finley: "Give my love to the people of Princeton: tell them that I am going to die, and that I am not afraid of death." "Oh, do not fear to die," said Mrs East in dying; "you will find the word of God sure, all will be fulfilled, and you will find it so.' These were the words of Halibnrton: "I, a poor, weak, timorous man, once as much afraid of death as any—I that have been many years under the terror of death—come now under mercy of God and the power of his grace, composedly and with joy to look death in the face.' It often appears that those from whom constitutional courage or philosophic firmness could least be expected, go down to the valley of death with most complete triumph over their past apprehensions. In the recollections of many, some such example of a dying friend will occur with convincing power and tenderness. They tell us that this absence of fear is no fruit of nature, of habit, or of strenuous effort, but the gift of Him who gave to death its terrors when he made it the doom of sin, and who takes those terrors away when sin is blotted out through the blood of the Lamb.—George Burgess.

[illegible] PLACE.

A voice has called me to the wilderness
For quiet rest,
Far from the place which rapid footsteps press
In eager quest;
And here I lie and wait from morn to night
Till there shall be
Some marching order sent in words of light
To set me free.

But while I wait within the Achor-vale
I look away
To where the sunny joys of life prevail,
And hear One say,
"After the quiet and the rest of life
Thou shalt be strong;
And when has died away the noise of strife
Thou shalt have song."

And he shall teach me in these quiet days
Of peace and rest,
The old, forgotten songs of joyous praise
Which I loved best;
And so that he be with me while I stay,
And make me glad,
There is no hour of all the passing day
That can be sad.

And so I thank the Father-voice that bade
Me rest awhile,
Where visions of the future make me glad;
And in his smile
The quiet days shall pass, till once again
It is his will
That I should leave the vale of night and pain
And serve him still.

The Profit of Adversity.

It is good that we have sometimes some troubles and crosses; for they often make a man enter into himself and consider that he is here in banishment and ought not to place his trust in any worldly thing.

It is good that we be sometimes contradicted; and there be an evil or a lessening conceit had of us; and this, although we do and intend well.

These things help often to the attaining of humility, and defend us from vain glory; for then we chiefly trust God for our inward witness, when hardly we be condemned by men, when there is no credit given unto us.

And therefore a man should settle himself so fully in God that he need not to seek many comforts of men.

When a good man is afflicted, tempted, or troubled with evil thoughts, then he understandeth better the great need he hath of God, without whom he perceiveth he can do nothing that is good.

Then, also, he sorroweth, lamenteth and prayeth, by reason of the misery he suffereth.

Then he is weary of living longer, and wisheth that death would come, that he might be dissolved and be with Christ.

Then, also, he well perceiveth that perfect security and full peace cannot be had in this world.—Thomas A. Kempis.

The Illustrated Christian Weekly says that "many find peace in going to an altar or an anxious seat. There is no virtue in either; but there is a great deal of virtue in a simple, resolute decision, and in an act of public commital that emphasizes it. In spite of much contrary teaching, generally, doing something marks one's acceptance of Christ."

Baptized into Christ.

BY REV N SUMMERBELL, D. D.

There are thousands of people whose only hope of salvation is in the theory that by immersion in water they were literally baptized into Christ. Such persons should ever be left to enjoy their own opinions, were it not that they constantly contend that all others are lost unless they enjoy "like precious opinions."

1. That water baptism and immersion are meant by the phrase baptized into Christ," is only opinion.—The "thus saith the Lord," has neither water or immersion.

2. The word into is a translation of eis; and that into is a correct translation, is only opinion: therefore the faith of such persons rests only on human opinion.

3. If eis does mean into, then every man is in a Christ before baptism, as Jesus says, time and again, "He that believeth on the Son"—"these little ones which believe in me."—"And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him,"—"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.' And in all these cases the word translated on and in, is eis. therefore I say if eis means into, then every believer is into Christ by faith before he comes to immersion.

4. But eis does not mean into of itself. If it does, then woe unto the brethren who baptize in order to remission, as the Greek for for, Acts 2: 38, is eis.

The following are all the instances where baptize eis occurs in the New Testament:

Matt. III: 11.—Baptize—eis unto repentance.

Matt. XXVIII: 19. Baptizing—eis in the name of, &c., name, &c.

Acts II: 38.—Baptized eis for remission.

Acts XIX: 3. -Eis unto what then were ye baptized. Eis unto John's baptism, in order to, &c.

Acts XIX: 5.—Baptized eis in the name of Jesus Christ.

1 Cor. 1: 13.—Baptized eis in the name of Paul.

1 Cor. 1: 15 —Baptized eis in mine own name.

Rom. VI: 3.—Baptized eis into Jesus Christ. Procure, &c.

Rom. VI: 4. -Baptized into eis death.

1 Cor. X: 2.—Baptized eis unto Moses.

1 Cor. XII: 13.—By en in one spirit we are all baptized eis unto one body.

All persons can see that into is not the meaning of the word; but simply to or unto.

The highest Greek authorities say "Eis—into, or unto—is joined with verbs which imply rest in a place, when a previous motion to, or into it, is implied," and "is used in the New Testament to express the point arrived at, and consequence of anything without notion of purpose."—Liddell & Scott's Greek Lexicon.

Matt VIII: 33.—A whole city came out eis meet Jesus but surely not into him.

Matt. XII: 52.—They were instructed eis the kingdom.

Mark III: 29.—They blaspheme eis the Holy Ghost. See also 1 Cor. VIII: 12., Luke XV: 18-21. The prodigal sinned eis Heaven. So that if eis means into, there were many ways to get into Christ and into Heaven before we come to baptism.—But John XX: 4. The beloved Disciple came first eis the sepulchre but went not in; and so thousands who come first to Christ by eis immersion will find that "they went not into Christ." The truth is, that all this baptizing into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, is inscriptural twaddle, as into is neither in the translation or the original. There is no word which baptism uniformly admits after it, as a translation of eis but unto. Into is not a uniform or necessary meaning of eis in the New Testament, and should not be used by sectarians to shut the unimmersed out.

'Sweet Rare Lives.'

BY ROBERT TENER.

'There are sweet rare lives capable of great loves and great pains, which yet are kept so attuned by the life of Christ, that the cry in the garden comes scarcely less honestly from their lips than from his" Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in "Gates Ajar."

The books of greatest interest are those which lead us into new fields and among new people. In works of fiction, especially, we look for the novel element; and we are most pleased when we meet faces and characteristics to which we have been strangers. Too often, indeed, does a keen criticism pronounce unreal what his hitherto been simply unknown. For some characters in fiction may seem to us to be baseless in fact because we may never have seen them ourselves in life.—They may exist nevertheless. We do not read books to get a knowledge of such people as we meet day by day. We want to learn about out of-the-way people whose like we may never have seen, or else about those characteristics of everyday people which are hidden, when bad, by social masks, and, when good, by a rare and modest sensitiveness. Even if such characters are at times purely the creations of fancy, we are none the less pleased; for there are so many poor attempts made to idealize the real that we are charmed when an author realizes the ideal—making the idea or the word "become flesh and dwell among us." Reverently would we think of the first meaning of these words; but, in a secondary sense, is not the realization of any idea or precept in life an incarnation?

"SWEET, RARE LIVES," are the lives we love to meet, whether in the walks of fancy or fact. Rare, in proportion to the great mass of men they may be, and yet not rare, for they are the little leaven leavening the whole lump. Poets may sigh over "the rarity of Christian charity," and yet she stands greatest among the graces. Her presence may become as rare as the oil in the cruse of the widow, because scarce: and yet, like it, "Charity never faileth." The fittest, though it be the rarest, survives. What is best, though, like the soul, unseen, is yet immortal. We sometimes consider goodness as not existing, merely because it is not made conspicuous—because it is not written and not spoken, but simply lived.

There is much of this goodness—seemingly non-existing to many—wrought out by George Eliot, in "Middlemarch." It is a grand moral with which she closes the work, that "the growing good of the world is partly dependent upon unhistoric acts; and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been, is half owing to the number who live faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs." It is a peculiarly graceful, nay, more, a peculiarly useful, service, when an author so likely to be read as George Eliot makes historic these "unhistoric acts," reveals the hitherto "hidden life," and teaches men to reverently wend their way to these hitherto "unvisited tombs.' There are such acts—there are such lives, sweet rare lives—there are such graves. And when we become alike generous and just—when the quiet graves and the unconspicuous virtues have their just meed of honor—then it may be said with truth that—

"Silent graves as these are pilgrim shrines,
Shrines to no age or sect confined,
The Delphian vales, the Palestines,
The Meccas of the Mind."

It would be well if we thought more of such lives as these. Living exponents of love and sacrifice, they point us upward to a happier state; and, dying, the memory of their well spent years comes to us "like a perfume from beyond the gates."—Standard.

The Centennial Exhibition.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14, 1876.

Great anxiety has been expressed in certain quarters, in reference to the sufficiency of the accommodations to be found in Philadelphia for the great multitude of expected guests.—So far as we are able to judge, this anxiety is groundless. Many hotels of very large capacity have just been erected and opened, not only in the immediate vicinity of the Exhibition, but also in the central and other portions of the city. Some of these are very elegant in all their appointments. The older hotels have also been enlarged and their capacity greatly increased. An immense number of private dwellings are also ready to entertain guests or boarders. Those who are best informed, now state with confidence that there is not likely to be any general inconvenience from what of comfortable accommodations.

Reports have also been spread, far and wide, that fabulous prices are already demanded for rooms, and that many hotel proprietors refuse to fix any price in advance, hoping to extort unreasonably high rates after the arrival of the crowd. That individual instances of rapacity and extortion will occur, we may safely predict from a general knowledge of human nature. But a somewhat extended and careful inquiry satisfies us that such treatment of strangers will be exceptional. Some of the best hotels have resolved to maintain their former regular rates, and none, so far as we have heard, have added more than half a dollar per day to their common rates; an advance not unlikely to be demanded by the increased rates of wages and provisions. Various associations are actively at work endeavoring to prevent extortions. Among these it may be mentioned that the Presbyterian Annuity and Life Insurance Company at No 133 South Fifth street, has secured the control and use of a large number of rooms in the most comfortable and respectable boarding houses and with desirable private families, which they will furnish, especially to ministers and their families, at very moderate prices—This the company does entirely without charge for its intervention. Other arrangements having the same end in view, have been made by other parties. Strangers coming to Philadelphia, and exercising ordinary care and forethought, may therefore hope to escape from the clutches of harpies.

The two points at which the Centennial Exposition will most directly come in contact with morals and religion are Temperance and Sabbath observance. In regard to these the anxieties of the Christian people, not only of this city, but of the whole land, are already excited. Millions of watchful eyes are observing the progress and prospects of the Exposition in reference to these. We, too, shall watch and communicate to you the result of our observations. Meanwhile let all who love their fellow-men and the cause of morality and religion, pray earnestly that God may guide, strengthen and give wisdom to those who control the Exhibition.

Poor Princess Beatrice.

M. D. CONWAY, in his last London letter to the Cincinnati Commercial gives the following gossip relative to the royal family:

"It is well known that the main interest which the Queen had in the new title was the addition it would make to her grudeur in Europe, and Disraeli is at his wit's end to discover some way in which her ambition in this respect may be gratified, in consistency with his pledge that the word "empress" shall be suppressed in all state papers not relating to India. There is yet to be a scene at Windsor Castle. There has already been one, if gossip is correct. It is said that the Prime Minister found the Princess Beatrice pouting, and even moist-eyed, because he had certified Parliament that the new title would not affect the children of Her Majesty. Some of her friends had already addressed notes to her, inscribed "To Her Royal and Imperial Highness." And now she would have to correct them—it was too bad! Disraeli tried to console 'Trix' as well as he could, but at latest dates she was anything but happy. There is a serious side to all these ludicrous gossipy whispers about the royal family. They are talking about them as if they were a family of children crying for a new toy. There is a smile on every face as one and another repeat the stories of their furious sensitiveness about all the little forms and ceremonials of dignity investing a throne from which real power has ebbed away. An actual instance of this occurred on the occasion of the Queen's last Drawing-room. It is considered indispensable that ladies introduced at Court or received there shall wear very low-bodied dresses. Just before the last Drawing-room, Lady——, wife of a distinguished nobleman, wrote to the Lord Chamberlain, saying that she had recently been ill and her shoulders had become so thin that she was ashamed to show them! The Chamberlain, knowing how strict the Queen was, referred the matter to her, and a grand consultation was held. After a long and serious debate, the Lord Chamberlain was instructed to write to the petitioning lady that Her Majesty would for once give her consent to the innovation, but it was intimated that the dress must be a compromise, that is, cut down in front. The Court papers referred vaguely to this exception to the rules of Court dress, stating that it was by her Majesty's gracious and special concession in order that it might not become a precedent!"

Controversy---Is it Right?

There is a great diversity of opinion respecting the question of religious controversy. Some approve and some disapprove. Some engage in it while others shrink from and avoid it as they would the poisonous serpent.—The law of Christ should decide the matter. His law concerning controversy is learned from His own example, and from the precepts of his word. His example can but be a safe guide. He was often, during his ministry, in controversy with the most unreasonable men. But in no instance do we find him resorting to sophistry in defense and advocacy of the truth. He never seeks to silence an advocacy by appeals to popular hatred. He never indulges in ridicule. He never misrepresents the opinion of others; never puts a false construction on their conduct; is never guilty of deceit. Though he could not be deterred by fear from uttering the truth, he could not even speak the truth for the pleasure of inflicting pain by it. He came into the world on an errand of love; not to the righteous, but to the wicked; not to friends, but to enemies; and the opposition to Him, even to the shedding of his blood, never cooled the ardor of his charity. In this spirit only—the spirit of love—is it lawful for us to assume in the Church the word of controversy. In this spirit of Christ we should imitate the example of the Son of God. We should hesitate to employ in defence of His cause any weapon which he, in his integrity or wisdom, refrained from using. So far as his example has force as a law to us the path of duty is plain. But he has made it still plainer in his word. In second Timothy we find these words—"The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle to all men; apt to teach; patient in meekness, instructing them that oppose themselves, if God will peradventure give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." What a different spectacle from this do most theological combatants present to the world! One would judge from these writings that meekness was the last grace to be expected in controversy, and patience next to the last. Victory seems to be their sole aim. Any means, however dishonorable, of accomplishing the end, they appear to think, may with impunity be employed. Were we to accept the account which they give of each other as correct, we must consider both parties destitute, not only of Christian principle, but of common honesty. We have known intentional misrepresentation abundantly charged, and in some cases proved upon men, who in any office but that of defenders of the faith, would be esteemed worthy of all credit. To suppress this fact, especially if we were to deny it, lest it should reflect some dishonor upon religion, we should be guilty of the very crime which we condemn. The history of the Christian Church, if written as it actually passed under the eye of Omniscience, would probably reveal moral obliquities in good men that would overwhelm us with astonishment and shame. But it must be said to the honor of Christianity, that she extends no countenance to the wickedness of her professors. It is the dishonor of human nature, not of religion, that even the renewing grace of God does not at once raise man to a state of immaculate purity. We know of no other way of accounting for the particular obliquity of which we speak, but to suppose there is still lurking in the Protestant Church that most corrupt principle, that the end sanctifies the means. This we have been accustomed to regard as the peculiar corruption of the Church of Rome—yet Protestants are certainly sadly infected with it. This may be accounted for from the fact that good men are easily drawn by a desire to do good, into approbation of what seems to them the most efficient means. A measure of seeming utility, though unlawful, is seldom regarded with unmingled disapprobation.

Rev. L. Branson has for the past two or three years been doing most efficient missionary work in the western suburbs of this city. He has organized a flourishing Sabbath school, now in successful operation, and in addition to his labors in this department he has regular Sabbath appointments for preaching to the schools and to the citizens in that vicinity. He is doing a good work for the Church.

Bishop Marvin has been designated by the College of Bishops of the M. E. Church South, to make an Episcopal visit to China, after holding the three conferences on the Pacific Coast.

Decided Opinion

Men who are vaccillating in opinion and uncertain of purpose rarely succeed in what they undertake. When success is attained, it comes to them usually of itself,—falls upon them fortuitously—and though it may bring with it esteem of men, it entitles them to no credit. There are opposing forces to be met and overcome in every line of duty and endeavor, and without fixedness of purpose they cannot be vanquished Opinions are varied and conflicting and in the contest the weaker will be scattered and trampled upon, while the stronger, though full of error, will survive and triumph by the force and vigor with which they are upheld.

Truth, indeed, is strong in itself, but its champions must be strong also,—determined and unflinching in its advocacy. The "eternal years of God are hers," and "though crushed to earth she will rise again;" but it must be through the strong blows of her followers: Error will at last "writhe in pain and die amid her worshippers," but she must be pinned to the earth and her champions foiled by the trusty and strong lances of those whom God appoints and endows with strength and courage to fight Truth's battles.

Decided character is needed in advocating and establishing true principles and doctrines. We need it in the Church to face heretical and impious tendencies and doctrine; in society, to combat dangerous social theories and practices; and in politics to oppose and overthrow loose notions of obedience to law and of honesty in the discharge of public duty. If namby-pamby and milk and-water opinions are held by those who claim to represent true doctrine and principle, or if correct and unimpeachable views are advanced with timidity and caution, the onrushing tide of heresy and evil will easily break down the feeble barriers opposed to its progress in religion, society and government.

A Rare Opportunity.

Trinity commencement offers extraordinary inducements to visitors Not only interesting college exercises of the Alumni; the graduating class, fourteen in number; and the new chapel now fully finished; but one of the greatest men of the continent will have a prominent part. To know Dr. Talmage we must hear him both preach and lecture; in both positions he has few equals. After refusing solicitations from many places South, he comes at the call of Trinity and will both preach and lecture. Do not fail to hear him: all the railroads pass and return visitors for one fare Not to hear Dr. Talmage at Trinity will be to miss one of life's great epochs.

We were called to New Berne last week to unite in marriage two loving hearts. While there we were impressed with the fact that the "City of Elms" is looking up in a business point of view, and particularly so in a religious sense. In the Methodist Church is now in progress a gracious outpouring of the revival spirit. The altar is crowded with penitents at every service, and many have found peace in believing. There is, also, an extensive revival in progress at the Baptist Church. A deep religious feeling seems to pervade the entire community.

The committee of the General Conference of the M. E. Church to whom was referred the consideration of the differences between the churches, North and South, recommended the appointment by the Board of Bishops of a committee of three ministers and two lay men to meet a similar committee from the Church, South, and adjust all differences and establish a practical fraternity.

Bro. Robey writes that the revival at Davenport is still progressing. On May 14th forty penitents were at the altar. All the girls at the College are either penitent or converted.

Trinity Commencement.

The sermon before the Theological Society, will be preached on Sunday June 4th, by Rev. J. R. Griffith, of the N. C. Conference.

The Trustees will meet June 7th, at 9 o'clock a. m.

At 11½ o'clock, June 7th, the annual sermon will be preached by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D. of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Aniversary reunion of the Alumni at 3 o'clock p. m.

Annual address to the Alumni at 8 o'clock p. m. by Rev. W. C. Willson, of N. C. Conference. Other addresses will follow.

Thursday June 8th commencement exercises at 12½ o'clock, the literary address will be delivered by Dr. Talmage.

Return tickets will be sold on the Carolina Central Railroad; the N. C. Railroad, Raleigh & Gaston and Raleigh & Augusta Air Line, and the Atlantic & North Carolina roads will return visitors free on a college certificate, they having paid first class fare going.

Ample arrangements have been made for the accommodation and comfort of all visitors. Visitors should consult the Marshal in attendance at High Point for conveyance to the college. Trustees and Preachers should notify us of their intention to be present.

Shelby District.

The Shelby District Conference will convene in the Methodist Church in Hickory, on Thursday, the 8th of June, at 3 o'clock p. m. and organize.

CENTENNIAL PROGRAMME

Thursday 7½ o'clock p. m.—Subject for discussion—Methodism, The struggles and triumphs of its old Itinerants, by Rev. Sam'l Leard.

Friday 11 o'clock, a. m.—Subject—Methodism, The support of its Ministry, by Rev. J. W. North.

Friday 7½ o'clock, p. m.—Subject—Methodism and its Missions, by Rev. J. B. McFerrin, D. D.

Saturday 10 o'clock a. m.—Subjects, Methodism and its Founders, by Bishop McTyeire D. D. Also, Methodism, The grounds of its success, by Rev. L. S. Burkhead. D D.

Saturday 7½ o'clock p. m.—Subject, Methodism, Its Introduction and Growth in N. C. by Rev. H. T. Hudson

Sunday 3 o'clock p. m.—Subject—Methodism and its Sunday Schools, by Rev. W. M. Robey and others.

Messrs Editors: Please publish the above, and allow me to add, that all of us preachers and a goodly number of the laymen are working with our utmost zeal for the building up of the Church in this District.

The two new pastoral charges, formed at last Conference, are doing well. The pastor and brethren on Dysartsville circuit made a good financial report at their Quarterly Conference the other day, their Sunday schools were prosperous, several members had been received during the quarter, and four ladies joined on Sunday at the Quarterly Meeting. Altogether this young circuit is starting off well, and buds fair soon to become a desirable charge. It was formed out of the old South Mountain Mission with a few appointments from Morganton and Marion circuits. Rev. J. C. Crisp is pastor; he is popular, and is working with astonishing zeal.

Lenoir station is the other new charge. The talented Robey is pastor. He is in the midst of a gracious revival. About 40 penitents at the altar last Sunday night. They have had several conversions, the meeting goes on. In their Quarterly Conference there last Saturday the brethren made a financial report that largely overreached their quarterly assessment. The Sunday school cause is remarkably prosperous in their hands. O for a revival flame to blaze through all our borders!

Centennial services on the circuits will begin from the District Conference, the programme of which will be announced there and then. The brethren must help one another.

Come, Messrs Editors, to Hickory, and get new subscribers to the Advocate.

Address,
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.
Raleigh, N. C.

The bishops of the M. E. Church South have appointed Gen. Robert B. Vance, of North Carolina, to fill the place of Fraternal Commissioner, made vacant by the lamented death of Gov. Polk.

Notes on the Baptist Convention.

Messrs Editors: In a liberal notice of the Methodist Centennial in Raleigh, Dr. Pritchard, whilst bestowing due praise upon all the proceedings, declared emphatically that he "could not be a Methodist." Whilst much interested in reading the proceedings of the "Southern Baptist Convention," held in Richmond, Va., commencing last Thursday, I felt impressed with the belief that whilst there was much to admire in that large and talented body of Christian clergymen, I could never be a Baptist, and rejoiced that the vital connectional organization of the Methodist Church had so much force in it to give success to our efforts against the powers of darkness.

With your permission, I will state a few points of interest to all earnest, working Christians in the proceedings of that body.

In the first place, there is an evident lack of that perfect unity and harmony of action so happily secured in the Methodist Church by our connectional organization. This is, in some measure, supplied by the [illegible] but their [illegible] some of the [illegible] Richmond Rev. Dr. Curry (as reported in the Dispatch) discussing the manner of reaching immigrants with the gospel, candidly acknowledged "that the State boards are utterly inadequate to meet the wants of their own territory, far less of other destitute sections. He argued that we should do this work as patriots."—And in connection with the idea "that the gospel alone can unify our people," he related and happily applied the following interesting incident:

"In 1864, while he was temporarily serving on the staff of General J. E. Johnson, the Moltke of American soldiers, during a severe artillery duel, a little bird alighted on the branches of a tree which had been torn by shot and shell, carolled forth sweetest song, which rang out clear above the roar of the cannon, and seemed to speak of peace. And so he sometimes thought that above the roar of two conflicts between truth and error angel voices may be heard telling of that peace which shall come by the triumph of the gospel. Christianity is the great humanizer, and he eloquently argued that the patriot should do all in his power to christianize the people.—But we should do this work as Christians. He would have this Convention go back into active co operation with the American Bible Society, and he would meet these immigrants on the shore, not with fire and the sword, but with the precious Bible."

Rev. Dr. Helen, of Kentucky, [illegible] sustaining the report which he [illegible] from the Committee on [illegible] sions, stated some facts of interest to all Christians that feel a desire for the conversion of the Indians.

"He stated that it was a singular fact that before Christ was preached among them the Indians could not sing—the only music they ever made being the war-whoop—but that now they could outsing any people in the world; that he was charmed with their style of singing the songs of Zion, and would rather hear their simple melodies than all of the quartette choirs in christendom. Another singular fact was that while Indian men were never known to weep before, they are now melted under the power of the cross, and weep freely under the simple story of redeeming love."

Rev. Dr. Buckner, the missionary of the Convention among the Indians, "gave some deeply interesting details of the progress of the work among them. Only a few years ago men and women were whipped for praying, and they came to church secretly. Now all that is changed, and he had seen last winter one hundred Indians at one time bowing for prayer and seeking salvation beneath a brush arbor covered with snow."

Earnest appeals were made looking towards efforts to evangelize the freedmen of the South. The Rev. Dr. Montgomery, of Lynchburg, well said: "He honored the true men at the North who desire to do this work; but they do not know the character of the negro. They are utterly unable to do the work, and if it is ever done at all it must be done by the people of the South. He would welcome [illegible] help of brethren at the North who [illegible] willing to work through us; but would have us to distinctly remember that we must do most of this work."

It is well known in the South that the Baptist and Methodist Churches were the only churches that, before the war, made large efforts for the religious instruction of the colored race. The work in the Methodist Church, South, was an extensive one, and commanded the services of some of the most eminent clergymen of the Church. Nor did the Church abandon them when they became free, but as far as they had the ability, assisted them in completing an organization satisfactory to them; and stands ready to give them all the help it can.—Our Baptist brethren seem to be earnest and zealous in these enterprises, and the impression that a period of their proceedings has left upon us is favorable; and whilst we could never be a Baptist, we invoke God's blessing upon their efforts.

J. C. HARTSELL.

JOHN WALL LEAK

was the son of William Pickett Leak, and Ann Poythress Wall. He was born in the town of Rockingham in the year 1816, and died upon the spot where he was born, on the 6th of May 1876, being 60 years of age.

In attempting a biographical sketch of our departed brother, we feel an embarrassment, arising from the consciousness of inability to write of him as we would, and from fear lest the portraitnre of a life so pure, so noble, may appear, to some, overdrawn.

Col. Leak spent the larger part of his life in this town. Here he was known in his "public walks and private ways." Take this life, in all its relations, and we have our estimate of the man To those who knew him it will not savor of fulsome eulogy to apply to him the oft quoted words of the great dramatist: "His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him, that nature might stand up and say to all the world This was a man."

Nature had not been sparing of her gifts. He had a manly form, an open benignant countenance. His mental and moral qualities were of a high order. His was a practical, well poised mind, quick and clear in its apprehensions, far seeing in its reach, able to grapple with and disentangle the complications and perplexities of business, and sufficiently cautious to guard against false steps and reckless speculations.

His moral qualities were a rich endowment. The moral character of our brother was as solid and proportionate as his physical nature. From a child he was noted for his love of truth, his firm adherence to duty and right. His life has been marked with rigid adherence to principle—to probity, integrity, virtue and religion.

Col. Leak was educated at Randolph Macon College.

He was married, early in life, to Miss Ann C. Leak, with whom he lived for thirty seven years, enjoying much domestic bliss Four children were born to them, one survives him Soon after his marriage he removed to Cheraw, in South Carolina, where he remained about twelve years, managing prudently and successfully a landed estate.

Since his return to Rockingham he had been in mercantile life, and in addition, for several years past, had been the trusted and efficient President of the "Great Falls Manufacturing Company,"—an enterprise he managed with credit to himself, and entire satisfaction to the stockholders. He succeeded through diligence in business, in repairing the wastes of the war, and left a handsome estate. His was the leading business mind of our town, and more than one found in him a safe counsellor in matters of business. As a citizen he was one of the most public spirited men of this community, was ever the supporter of law, of order and good morals.

In no sense a politician, yet he exercised rigidly his rights as a freeman, and in that way which seemed to him most conducive to the interest and prosperity of that section where birth and residence placed him.

Col. Leak had such qualities as eminently fitted him for social life He was naturally a gentleman—possessed suavity and easiness of manners, was courteous, pleasant of address, condescending, approachable, obliging. He was fond of company, and "given to hospitality."

Above all, he was a christian—humble, earnest, exemplary, decided. His piety was simple and unobstrusive. Whilst but a youth he connected himself with the M. E. Church. Though too large of heart to be a bigot, and too sensible and pious to be a noisy sectary, he was a decided Methodist. He loved and honored the Church—the Church loved and honored him He held various official relations—was for years a member of the Quarterly Conference, was several times elected lay delegate to the Annual Conference, and once to the General Conference.

He made a liberal use of his means in supporting the Church and her institutions, and in answering the calls of charity. The extent of his benefaction was known to himself and his God. But each life closes with a similar record—"and he died." The sickness of our brother was protracted through months. He was attacked violently with Catarrh and Bronchitis. The anxiety of friends was lessened as the disease seemed to yield. We began to hope of his recovery. God willed otherwise, there was no permanent improvement—then he was not so well—then he grew worse. An anomic condition of the body baffled the best medical skill. Slowly, yet surely he sank and died twenty minutes past midnight. Then fell a prince and a great man in Israel.

His death was brave, grand, beautiful. He met the enemy and through Christ, was "more than conqueror." There were many incidents of interest connected with his last hours. On the Monday preceding his death, thinking he would die that day, he had his family called in. They stood around his bedside Looking at them with that loving, tender, lingering gaze peculiar to those who are dying, [illegible] them of his intensified love for [illegible] he was willing to give them for Christ. He gave words of counsel to relatives, friends and former servants, the deep pathos of his words moving many to tears. On Tuesday, during paroxysms of pain, he would exclaim "all for Christ."

The day before his death, he said, clapping his hands, "I could not have believed it would be so"—referring to the great peace and joy he felt.

The news of his death spread gloom and sadness over this entire community, and the words. "Col. Leak is dead," carried by passengers upon the railway, and whispered along the wires, spread the sadness far beyond this community.

He was buried on Sunday morning. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Church, which was filled with citizens of the town and country. Many followed the bier as he was borne to the family burial place. The pall bearers lowered the coffin, and his former servants, they so request ing, filled the grave. Gentle hands decorated it with fresh spring flowers; then we left him to long and peaceful slumbers, until Christ shall come to "awake him out of sleep.

One of the trustees of Wesleyan University, whose name has not been made public, has given $25,000 toward the $500,000 endowment fund of that institution.

The annual meeting of the American Bible Society was held in New York, May 11. The receipts from all sources for the year were $527,198 Expenditures for the same period were $539,281. Including the balance on hand May 1865, there is still a balance left of $8,980. During the year 876,770 Bibles were manufactured and 850,470 distributed by the Society. The Society has circulated the Bibles in twenty foreign countries during the year, and had it printed in nearly as many languages.

A new method of preaching to the poor is being tried in Philadelphia. A house has been built on Mervine street, near Diamond, where Sunday morning breakfast are given to the occupants of the station-houses. After the meal suitable religious services are held. Between three and four hundred poor persons are thus brought together every Sunday.

The arrangements for the Scottish Established Church missionary expedition to Lake Nyassa are being pushed forward, now that the Free Church expedition has reached its destination. A medical missionary and some artisans have been engaged, and a boat for the navigation of the lake is being built in London. The requisite funds are not yet subscribed.

Rev. Dr. H. M. Field writes from India of the decline of the power of caste, and says: "If the movement should continue to increase in the future in the same ratio as in the past fifteen years, the whole population of India—more than 200,000,000 of people—would be converted to Christianity in the next 200 years." But in Buddism itself he sees nothing but what appears to him inexpressibly repulsive.

The next anniversary was decided to be held May 16th, in Philadelphia.

A CENTENNIAL hymn, not in honor of the Centennial, but a hymn a hundred years old, is the well-known hymn, "Rock of Ages."

Toplady wrote it in March, 1776. We believe that it will be sung down to the Millennium, and sung in the Millennium, and sung wherever a heart, touched by a sense of sin and the mercy of Christ, is to be found.

METHODIST PICNIC.—The teachers and scholars of Edenton Street Sunday school, with a large number of invited guests, had a delightful time on their pic-nic excursion to Kittrell's on the 18th inst. It was not the good fortune of either of the Editors of the Advocate to be present but we have had the joys and pleasures of the day detailed to us by several who were present. A train of nine coaches conveyed the happy gathering of six or seven hundred persons to the beautiful spot at Kittrell's, leaving the city at 8 o'clock in the morning and returning at six in the evening. R W. Best, Esq. of stately form and commanding voice, was chief marshal and so directed the movements of the day that no disturbance and confusion, or accident occured to mar the harmony and enjoyment of the occasion. At the Springs Hotel Rev. Dr. Burkhead and Rev. Mr. Norman made short but appropriate speeches to the large throng after which feasting and general enjoyment ruled the happy hours. The Citizen's Cornet Band attended and added the charms of music to the other pleasures.

We call attention to the 3rd Annual Statement of the North Carolina State Life Insurance Company in to day's issue, and to the certificate of the Executive Committee relative to the security of its assets. This committee is composed of gentlemen well known throughout the State. One was formerly Treasurer of the State, two are Presidents of Banks in this city, and the other Cashier of the other Bank. These names alone would inspire the uttermost confidence in the management of the company: but the figures speak for themselves. The ratio of assets to liabilities shows that for every dollar for which it is liable it has $3 well invested with which to pay. Surplus, as to policy-holders, $197.000.

It has issued over 2,000 policies—its risks being scattered over three States, having complied with the rigid insurance laws of those States. Its interest receipts have more than paid its death losses every year. Its success has been remarkable, and taking into consideration the general and continuous depression in business circles since its organization, it is almost without precedent, and for this success it is largely indebted to the zeal and untiring industry of its very efficient Vice President, Maj. Cameron.

At a recent meeting of the Stock holders and Directors of the Company, a handsome dividend was declared to participating policy holders, as well as to stock holders. All the officers were re-elected, thus being endorsed as faithful guardians of important trusts.

Nearly $1,000,000.00 are annually paid to foreign companies by the citizens of this State for insurance, and we cordially recommend the North Carolina State Life Insurance Company to our people, as being entitled to a fair share of patronage.

Dr. C. D. Rice of Raleigh, connected with the company, as agent, and being energetic and well informed in Insurance matters we look to see the business of the company greatly increased in the future.

The editor of the Ansonian, Col. Polk, says that 343,661 lbs of bacon, 10,350 bushels of corn and 872 barrels of flour were imported by railroad into Anson county during the first four months of the year; and then proceeds to say:

"Now we assume, that the Bacon has cost the consumer fifteen cents per pound, and the Corn one dollar per bushel and the Flour eight dollars per barrel, footing up, for the first four months of the year, the sum of $68,833,65.

Now if this data be correct (and it is certainly small enough) we have spent for bread and meat in Anson, during the past four months, for every man, woman, and child, black and white, in the county, five dollars and fifty cents per head. That amount would pay on every acre of improved land in the county, one dollar and twenty six cents. That amount would pay our entire State and County Tax for two years and ten months. But the people will run the figures double that amount, by the time crops come in. Then we find that during this year we will have spent for bread and meat alone, in Anson County, the neat little sum of $140,000,00 to pay which, it will take about 2400 bales of cotton, averaging in value $60,00 each-over half the crop raised in the county.

Assuming that we produce as much cotton this year, as we did in 1870, then after paying for these three articles, bacon, corn and flour, we have left 1600 bales of cotton, with which to buy other groceries, clothing, guano, farming implements, stock, pay hire, &c. &c.

Remembering that we sell nothing but cotton, will our readers look at these figures and still wonder "where all the money has gone."

Will they still try to guess what has brought on the hard times?

When we pay for bread and meat in one year the sum of $29,10, on every man, white and black over 31 years of age, and depend on one uncertain crop for which we are to receive a more uncertain price, how can we prosper?

The Arts a Hundred Years Ago.

A hundred years ago what a man discovered in the arts he concealed The mysteries of every craft were hedged in by the thickest fences of empirical pretensions. And although we boast of the enlightenment of the present day the same hidden empiricism exists. Especially is this the case in numerous cases in the "healing art." It is true that many of these vaunted nostrums are worthless, and it is better that they are not known. If they were, unscrupulous mischief would be the result. The great recommendation of DR TUTT'S MEDICINES is that he does not keep their composition a secret. Any one acting from pure motives can know it by application to him. The reason is, the better they are known, the more they are appreciated as soon as it is say that every ingredient composing his LIVER PILLS is harmless, yet powerful and when combined, they form the most powerful antibilious medicine ever known.

Rev. Michael C. Dowd, died at his residence in Forsyth county on the 8 inst. at 9 o'clock A. M. aged 84 years 5 months and 9 days. He professed conversion at Wards camp ground in Rowan county, now Davie, a few years since with his brother Peter Dowd and Moses Brock says in the year 1817. On the 20th day of August, 1817 he was licensed to preach and on the afternoon of the next sabbath he preached at Johnston Church's iron. March 6 12 "and they went out and preached that men should repent," and how commenced a ministry that extended through a period of almost forty nine years.

He went far and near to regular appointments, campmeetings and funeral occasions. What a life of gospel labors for a man in the local ranks! He preached in an 2 150 sermons, five or six funeral services, he baptized 753 adults and infants together with a large yield in performance of these services, among all I visited an unusual number of sick people both by day and by night and many impressive of race or color creed or denomination, riches or poverty. He set with a naturally good mind and having none before and means than most of our local preachers, he gathered a very good library on that by close application he became even lively read well acquainted with our standards as Wesley Clarke Fletcher, Watson and others and began early to preaching above ordinary, very acceptable and greatly useful. He labored much in the revivals by which Methodism was spread over the Partion of the State.

His social and christian qualities were such that he delighted in good company and his home was always open to preachers of his and all denominations. No where did they receive a heartier greeting or a nobler welcome and hospitality, the last sermon was preached at Parsons Hill, near his home on the 2nd Sabbath in March, from "Children obey your parents in the lord."

He was taken with his last illness on Saturday before the 1st Sabbath in March and lingered in pain and patience till the 8th of May 1876. He said many cheering things during his sickness. The last moment came he called his children and began to bid them adieu one by one, but too weak to do this he raised both his hands as if pronouncing a benediction, said "nothing more" I can breathe no longer, let me rest." He slept.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Being appointed by the Quarterly Conference of the Forsyth circuit, held at Kernersville the 13th of May 1876, to draw up resolutions of respect to the memory of the Rev. M. C Dowd, L. E. a member of this official body for more than fifty years, beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas it hath pleased the great Head of the Church to remove from our midst the Rev. M. C. Dowd, an old and well tried veteran of the Cross and an able minister of Jesus Christ

Resolved 1st, That we submit to the painful dispensation with which we have been visited with a full assurance that God always does right

Resolved 2nd That as our departed father in Christ, has gone in and out among us as a shining light for so many years that we will be thankful to the Lord for the great blessing we have had in him and will try to follow his godly teaching and imitate his pious example.

Resolved 3rd. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the R. C. Advocate for publication, also to his family, and that they be spread on the records of this Conference.

A CARD.

OFFICE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Raleigh, N. C. May 10, 1876.

Under continued aspersions from a portion of the press, I feel compelled further to address the public in my own vindication.

MY PRIVATE AFFAIRS.

My private affairs have been made the subject of unjust criticism. My personal character has been assailed My family circle has been invaded, and vilified in my household was wantonly insulted in the columns of a newspaper. Thus it seems there is no consideration even for the feelings of the ladies of my family, or my children, since their teacher, an orphan child and my near relative, is made the victim of sneering remark and insulting comment. I presume no general public is not interested in my individual affairs, or the details of my former private business transactions. My character has been amply testified to by many of the best men in Rowan county and other sections, themselves my political enemies. I can satisfy any gentleman who may desire specific information as to my personal conduct and affairs, that I have been guilty of nothing incompatible with the character of a gentleman, as I shall show in this card. I have done nothing unbecoming an officer of the State of North Carolina.

THE CARPET FOR THE SUPREME COURT.

As I was about leaving for New York last Fall to purchase stationery supplies for the State, Maj. Wm. A. Bagley, clerk of the Supreme Court, requested me to buy a carpet for the Supreme Court Rooms. His requisition approved by the board of State officers, as required by law, did not reach me while in New York.

After I had made the purchase of stationery, I stated that I wished to look at some carpetings, when Mr. George E. Brown, of Brown & Warner, offered to show me a house, and did take me to a carpet house on 22nd street; a salesman showed me a number of carpetings, and I requested of Brown to take the number of a certain piece, which I believe is the one now on the floor of the Supreme Court Rooms.

On my return I reported the matter to Maj. Bagley, and the board made the order for the purchase as early in secretary's duties for that article.

Very respectfully,
Wm. H. HOWERTON,
Secretary of State.

By due course of freight the carpet arrived, and by mail I received the following bill therefor, rendered on a regular printed bill-head, now on file in the office of the Auditor:—

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 8, 1875

GEO. F. BROWN Esq., New York.

Dear Sir:—Please send 120 yards of the carpet we were looking at for the State of North Carolina. The money will be paid as soon as the carpet is received.

Wm. H. HOWERTON,
Secretary of State.

By due course of freight the carpet arrived, and by mail I received the following bill therefor, rendered on a regular printed bill-head, now on file in the office of the Auditor:—

NEW YORK, Nov. 9, 1875.

Hon. W. H. HOWERTON,
Secretary of State of North Carolina.

Bought of Geo. Brown & Co.,
Carpets, Oil Cloths, &c.,
271 Canal street.

To 120½ yds tapestry Brussels $2.25, per yard, $127.50

Approved. .

Wm. H. HOWERTON,
Secretary of State.
S. D. POOL,
Supt Public Instruction.
C. H. BROGDEN,
Governor.
D. A. JENKINS,
State Treasurer.

A true copy from the original on file in my office
JOHN REILLY,
State Auditor.

Along with the bill came power of attorney purporting to be from Geo. Brown & Co, authorizing me to receipt for the money and remit, which I did, sending the money to the party through whom I ordered the goods, (Mr. Geo. F. Brown) as per this copy of receipt:—

SOUTHERN EXPRESS Co.,
RALEIGH, Nov. 27, 1875.

Received from Dr. W. H. Howerton, one package, four hundred and twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents, addressed Geo. F. Brown, New York.

For the Company:—
W. HAUSER.

Here ended my connection with the carpet transaction, which was to select, order and remit the money for it.

The purchase was approved by the board authorized by law, the bill properly audited and paid. The carpet is now on the floor of the Supreme Court Rooms, and may be examined by any one, as to quality and the price paid for it. I did not charge Company with the name or number of the house which I found the goods. I was waited on by a Brown; and whether there be such a firm as George Brown & Co on Canal street, I do not myself know. The public is now in possession of all the facts in the case. I have given all the information I have possessed on the subject.

FRANK STRONACH.

Vs. UNSIGNED LETTER HEADS AND ENVELOPES, TAX LIST PAPER, &c.

Repeated attempts have been made to create the impression that I have used the State's stationery for my private purposes. Such charges are false. I have used no stationery except for official purposes. Every letter head and envelope I have used bears the name of the office to which it belongs. Every sheet of tax list paper I have used has been for official purposes. Every envelope I have used has been for official purposes. Every letter I have written has been on official business. Every letter I have received has been on official business. Every letter I have written has been on official business. Every letter I have received has been on official business. Every letter I have written has been on official business. Every letter I have received has been on official business

ANALYSIS.

THE CRIME.—Ananias and Sapphira sold their possessions, or a part, and professed to place all the money they had received for it in the hands of the apostles, but clandestinely kept back a part. 11. Punishment.—The falsehood and fraud are discovered Peter rebukes them severely for their wickedness. They fall down dead "Great fear came upon all the Church."

QUESTIONS.

1 Here is a warning against the common sin of lying. All lying is a sin against God, and he will punish it.

2 Give the title of this Lesson, and the names of those who told the lie.

3 What did they sell?—Verse 1.

4 How much did they profess to bring of the price?

5 How much did they bring?—V. 2.

6 Were they obliged to bring any part of the price?—Verse 4.

7 Who is said to have prompted the lie?—V. 3.

8 To whom had Ananias lied?—V. 3.

9 How did Sapphira repeat the lie? Verse 8.

10 What followed Peter's reproof of Ananias?—Verse 5.

11 What effect did his sudden death have on all?—Verse 5.

12 By whom was he buried? Verse 6.

13 How long after this did his wife come in?—Verse 7.

14 How did Peter rebuke her? what followed?—Verse 9.

15 How was she buried?

16 What effect did this have upon all who heard of it.

17 What does this teach us as to God's hatred of lying?

18 What does it teach us as to the danger of this sin?

19 May we not lie in act as well as in word?

20 Read Ps. ci. 7, Prov. xix. 5,—9: Rev. xxi. 8.

BIBLE-CLASS.

1 Why did many of the disciples sell their possessions?

2 Why do you suppose Ananias sold his?

3 What four questions did Peter ask him?

4 How can Satan fill a man's heart? Luke xxii. 3.

5 To whom was the lie told?

6 In regard to Peter's second question, see Deut. xxiii. 22, 23.

7 What answer must be given to his third question?

8 What answer to the fourth question?

9 How did Peter know that Ananias had kept back part of the money? [illegible] severely?

11 In what did the sin of Ananias differ from that of his wife?

12 Why was she so terribly punished?

13 Why should fear come upon all who heard it?

14 Why does God not punish all liars thus?

15 Are not all our secret sins known to God?

16 What constitutes the sin of hypocrisy?

17 Explain how the love of money is the root of all evil.

18 What proof have we in this Lesson that the Holy Ghost is God?

19 Read and explain, in reference to the last question. Matt. xxviii. 19; 1 Cor. ii 10-11; Heb. ix. 14. Christ is the Truth; Satan is the father of lies.

LESSON-HYMN, 689.

Mamma—"Do you know it is very rude to say 'shan't?' Little girl—"Is it very rude, ma? I think I can be much ruder than that."

Rural and Domestic.

THE MUSKMELON WORM.—Its depredations can be greatly checked by keeping the soil perfectly clean and free from grass, and the leaves kept well dusted with powdered lime; also keep the soil, as far as the vines extend, well sprinkled with the lime. In rainy seasons, when the grass cannot be kept down, lime should be used as often as it is washed off by the rains.

I have found the old English system of growing the muskmellon the best—that is, the ridge system. It can be done much easier than making hills. The ridge, or at least a furrow, is made with a turning plow; in this furrow the manure is spread, and bedded up like cotton or corn. The furrows may be laid off six feet apart, and the seed planted from five to six feet on the center of the ridge. I have succeeded in this way much better than by planting in hills. It is a good plan to put a flat chip or a piece of a broken pane of glass under each melon and as they advance in size to keep them turned over once a day; this should be done without twisting the stem or injuring its growth.

I find lime to be good also for the cabbage worm, and tomatoes will last much longer if the soil and leaves are kept well sprinkled with lime. I have used it, and it always resulted in success. A little labor and careful attention in both the preparation of the soil and killing out noxious grass and weeds will overcome the various difficulties.—James Parker, in our Home Journal and Rural Southland.

TO COOK BEETS.—The true way to cook a beet is to bake, not boil it. Thus treated, and sliced either in vinegar or in butter, it is exceedingly palatable and nutritious. Boiling extracts the most valuable part of this vegetable.

COTTON AS A RENOVATING CROP.—In the upper part of this county (Mecklenburg) are six acres that have been in cotton the last ten years. Yield, first year, two bales; the last year, six bales, or fourteen hundred and fifty pounds seed cotton per acre, accurately weighed. The land is tolerably level, of a chocolate color, and rather waxy. It has had each year from twelve to eighteen two-horse loads of stable manure applied to the poorer spots: and, excepting 1866, 1867 and 1871, the remainder of the field has been treated with commercial fertilizer, at the rate of three, four and sometimes five dollar's worth per acre. There has been yearly a gradual increase in the yield—last year the greatest of all, though not accounted a good year for cotton in this region. Year before last, after paying for fertilizers, ginning, bagging, tier, transportation to market and cost of selling there was left to the farmer something over $40 per acre; and last year, despite the low price, about $43.

These facts don't chime with the rotation theory about which some are so clamorous. They show, too, that for the improvement of that kind of land there is nothing like King Cotton, as much as he has been abused.

On the same little farm, wheat, oats, corn, clover and millet have been grown; and every acre cultivated is more productive now than it was ten years ago; but the increased productiveness of those fields has been far behind that of the cotton land. Commercial fertilizers have not yet paid near so well on anything else. Perhaps I should except clover Last spring I sowed on a clover patch plaster and Soluble Pacific, leaving a rod or more space between them The effect of the plaster is only perceivable—not more than ten per cent. The Soluble Pacific increased the yield at least one hundred per cent.—Correspondent of Southern Home.

BAKER'S COD LIVER OIL AND PHOSPHATE OF LIME is a really palatable preparation of this truly valuable remedy for Pulmonary complaints, Debility, etc. By its use the breathing becomes free, the pulse strong and full, the appetite regular, the strength increases, and the animal spirits grow light and buoyant. Druggists have it. JNO. C. BAKER & Co., Philadelphia.

The Western Rural says: "Where meat-smoking is practiced on a large scale, a house adapted for the purpose should be erected. A very good substitute is obtained by means of an empty sugar hogshead. In the inside bottom fix a sufficient number of hooks to suspend the hams. Get a quantity of sawdust (oak is best,) lay it on the ground in a circular form, so that it may be covered by the [illegible] hogshead, so that the mouth is on the ground. Hang up the hams on the hooks, set fire to the sawdust, and, if a little draft of air is required, prop up the side of the hogshead about an inch with a small stone. The sawdust will smolder, and the hams may be used as soon as smoked." This method has been followed in Pennsylvania for more than half a century, and answers very well when the hams are few in number.—Germantown Telegraph.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderful tonic, prevailing effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming anæmia, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physic al functions.

VALUABLE

Real Estate for Sale

—AT—

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5 000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with spleads, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and of cular saw mills are situated on the farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In act it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,000 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, lies well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying [illegible] the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 450 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouting and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 350 acres, lying on Rutledge and Isreel Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a lot of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered in a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and in one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles

Reception of Fraternal Messengers from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We copy in full below, from the Daily Christian Advocate of May 13, the proceedings, addresses, etc., in connection with the reception of our Fraternal Messengers by the General Conference of the M. E. Church:

The great feature of the General Conference session yesterday was the reception of the Fraternal Messengers appointed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

As the hour (11 a. m.) fixed for the reception arrived, Bishop Peck, who had presided thus far during the morning session, gracefully gave place to Bishop Janes, senior Bishop. — Four large baskets of elegant flowers, contributed by a well known Baltimore Methodist family, were brought forward, and amid the cheers of the audience were placed upon the table on the front line of the platform—two on the Presidents table, one on the table of the Secretaries, and one on the table of the reporters of the Daily Christian Advocate. This beautiful floral tribute to the sentiments and purposes of the hour gave great pleasure to the members of the Conference and to the immense number of visitors present.

It is not necessary that we comment upon the several addresses made. — They were fitting, able, eloquent, and the universal expression at the close was that of approval. We print them in full, even to the omission in the number, of much other matter prepared for it.

The absence of the venerable ex-Book-agent, Dr. Lovick Pierce, was sincerely regretted by all present; but the written words of love and fraternal counsel, presented by his associates of the Commission, and distinctly and impressively read by our Secretary, were gratefully listened to and most fully reciprocated. But we proceed to report in full the addresses and papers.

INTRODUCTORY ADDRESS OF DR. FOSS

C. D. Foss said:

MR. PRESIDENT.—To this hour myriads of Methodist Christians, scattered from Plymouth Rock to the Golden Gate, and from the fountains to the Delta of the Father of Waters, and others in distant continents and islands, have long been looking forward with eager hope and joy; glad, so far as may be, to put behind and to cover with the veil of oblivion, every painful recollection of the unnatural events which have, alas! too long separated fellow Christians who rejoice in the same history, doctrines, literature, hymns, and experience, and in a substantially identical ecclesiastical polity.

We hail our honored guests this hour not only as brethren beloved in the Lord, but also as bearers to us and to the Church we represent, of the Christian greetings of a sister Church with more than 3,000,000 adherents. We hail them just now, in the first outburst of the Centennial rejoicing of our common country trusting that the denominational fellowship and healing of which their arrival is at once the index and the promoter, will be largely helpful to that perfect national healing which shall, in the near future, transform our National Union into a complete and perpetual national Unity.

The deep joy of the greeting we give to them is indeed chastened by the absence of that venerable man, their co delegate, the Rev. Dr Lovick Pierce, whose honorable career has been coeval with almost the entire history of American Methodism. He is detained from our fraternal festival to day by physical infirmity. But though absent in body, he is present in spirit; and if we cannot hear his voice, we shall feel the pulsations of his heart through the medium of his pen.

I have the great pleasure, Mr. President, to present to you for introduction to the Conference, one of the two other Fraternal Delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; a man eminent among the very foremost of his brethren for his natural endowments, his varied culture, his lofty character, and his impressive eloquence, and who has rendered very distinguished service to the Church in three great departments of its work—as a pastor, a religious journalist, and a laborer in the cause of the higher education, the Rev. Jas. A. Duncan, D. D, President of Randolph Macon College, Virginia.

Dr. Duncan was introduced, the entire Conference rising to receive him

INTRODUCTORY ADDRESS OF DR. J. P. NEWMAN.

MR. PRESIDENT—Is it too much to say that the chief interest and the highest pleasure connected with the reception of Fraternal Delegates by this General Conference, have their culmination in this hour? We hailed with unfeigned delight our brethren from beyond the seas. We reciprocated with sincerest joy the hearty congratulations from the Canadas — We responded joyfully to the kindly greetings of other Methodist bodies in the United States. And other representatives, yet to come, will be received with Christian cordiality. But the delegates of this body, our people of time-honored Baltimore, and more than two millions of Methodists North and South, have awaited with prayerful anticipations the coming of this day when words of love and peace will be spoken that will be borne in accents of gladness to the savannahs of the South, to the snow-capped hills of the North, and to the green prairies of the West.

After the storm of strife and passion through more than three decades, the bow of promised peace spans the heavens of our love. And to-day the angels sing: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments. As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded His blessing, even life forevermore."

Sir, there is a manifest propriety in the appearance of a layman on this platform, as the co fraternal delegate to Dr Duncan is to speak for 4,000 ministers to our 10,000 pastors, Dr Conard is to speak for more than 700,000 laymen, to our membership of more than 1,500,000. If the former is to represent the sons of Aaron, the latter is to represent the commonwealth of Israel.

This eminent layman comes from classic halls. From earliest manhood he has been identified with schools of learning in Georgia, in Alabama, in Virginia, and is now the Chancellor of the Vanderbilt University, whose ample endowments are the munificent gifts of an American citizen.

Himself a Methodist from his youth, loving peace and pursuing it, he is a garland of beauty from the sunny South,—the chosen bearer of Heaven's olive-branch of fraternity. Sir, it is my distinguished privilege to present to this reverend body through you its honored Senior Bishop, a layman, Mr L C. Garland, Doctor of Laws.

Bishop Janes then presented Dr. Garland, who was most cordially received by the Conference standing.

The Credentials of the Delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were here read by the Secretary

Bishop Janes then said: I hold in my hand the address of Dr. Lovick Pierce. I am sure that every member of this Conference shares with me in great disappointment and regret at his inability to be present at this time.— We have all heard of him by the hearing of the ear, and we came here seeking that to see his genial face, and shake his hand, and hear his kindly words, would be one of the greatest among the privileges of this General Conference. This disappointment and regret are not felt because the honored messengers who are with us do not fully comprehend the character and importance of their mission and work, but Dr. Pierce has been, in his able, faithful, and spiritual ministry, for more than two generations the common inheritance of Methodism, and, when in the days of his strength, he had few equals, and perhaps no superiors, in the Church—when such men as Longstreet, Winans, Capers, McClintock, Bangs, and Olin were in our pulpits and our counsels,' So deep was his interest in this cause, and so heroic his spirit, that though more than ninety years are upon him, he commenced his journey toward this place, but his strength failed and he was obliged to stop on the way and to give up the performance of this mission We can understand how great was his disappointment; and I know he is entitled to, and I know he will receive, our profoundest sympathy, and our earnest prayers that the blessing of God may be with him.— Your will all be glad to hear in another form the message which he would have brought to us if he had been permitted to be present and speak to us. The Secretary will now read the address of Dr. Pierce.

Preliminary Note of Explanation concerning Dr Pierce's Address.

The Fraternal Messengers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are present, beg leave to explain: that although the General Conference very kindly and cordially consented that Dr. Pierce's address should be read, yet the messengers present, on examining it with a view to its being read, find that some of it depends so largely, if not indeed wholly, for its force and interest, upon the personal presence of their venerable colleague, that they have taken the liberty of presenting only that portion of the address which seems entirely appropriate to be read in his absence.

While this will not needlessly trespass upon the valuable time of the Conference, it will, nevertheless, give to Methodists both North and South, the most interesting part of this address, which its venerable author characterizes as his "last will and testament" concerning his "estate in Methodism."

JAS. A. DUNCAN,
L C. GARLAND,
Fraternal Messengers of the M. E. Church, South.
Baltimore, May 12, 1876.

ADDRESS OF REV. LOVICK PIERCE, D. D.

To the Bishops and Delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Conference Assembled:

DEAR BRETHREN—

It affords me unspeakable pleasure to address you to day in the presence of what I suppose to be the largest assembly of Methodist ministers and laymen ever present at any General Conference before. And this pleasure is greatly intensified because I am one of the three Fraternal Delegates sent from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to bear you the Christian salutation and greetings of more than seven hundred thousand of as loyal Methodists as the sun rises and sets upon.

I beg your indulgence while I mention a few things which crowd in from the memorial past.

I am addressing you to day, by the blessing of God, with a past history, partaking in a large degree of the wonderful. My official activity is perhaps a rare instance of human longevity. As a regular appointee in this Fraternal delegation, I furnish an instance to the history of American Methodism such as I think it likely was never known before in one sent abroad on any diplomatic ministry; a man in the ninety second year of his age, and in the seventy-second of his effective ministry.

When this appointment was made it took me greatly by surprise, as our College of Bishops knew me to be, at least physically, unfit for such onerous duties as it involved. But it was because, as I was still a live man, there were special reasons why I should be one of the present Fraternal delegation.

I had been sent as a lone fraternal messenger from our first General Conference, after the division in 1845, to arrange for and settle on a basis of intercommunication, so that two General Conferences instead of one should be all the difference between us.

To bring about this state of things we were so deeply anxious that we lost no time, but sent a fraternal messenger with peace powers to establish a fraternity of intercourse between us that the wood might see it had not fallen out and parted, but simply divided in order that we might carry out our great work with less difficulty and greater success.

But the General Conference of 1848, for reasons satisfactory to themselves, at that time, rejected the fraternal messenger; whereupon our fraternal messenger left, after having apprized that body that as things then stood, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, could have no fraternal messenger to them; but pledging his Canon that if ever the Methodist Episcopal Church reconsidered its act, and sent to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a fraternal delegation, we or they, as the case might be, would be received and treated with true Christian courtesy. And he now respectfully appeals to this enlightened body to answer whether the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church has not redeemed the pledge of Christian courtesy to the extent of the opportunity afforded her.

With a sad heart the messenger left, foreseeing, as he feared, years of alienation and demoralizing dissatisfaction; and, accordingly, it was followed by a wintry night of twenty one years before any morning star, foretelling the approach of a better day, ever rose above the gloomy horizon that encompassed our beloved Methodism. This star of hope appeared in the voluntary visit of Bishop Simpson and Dr. (now Bishop) Harris to the meeting of our Bishops in St Louis, May, 1869.

This move was in the right direction, and was followed by another in May, 1870, when Bishop Janes, accompanied by the same warm hearted brother, visited us at our General Conference in Memphis, Tenn. They came with hearts brim full of loving favor, and made speeches with cordial affection. And when your General Conference, in Brooklyn, May, 1872, took up the matter in good earnest and sent to us a noble delegation of three fraternal messengers at our General Conference in 1874. This action of your General Conference, in Brooklyn, we regarded as the official recognition of the M E. Church, South, as a legitimate organization of the M. E. Church, into a second General Conference jurisdiction as provided for in 1844 by the last Ecumenical General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Here began our official intercourse on this fraternal relation These brethren came to us in love— We received them with loving heart they did their work nobly and well. Then General Conference determined to send to you, at this meeting, a like delegation, and by the blessing of God we are here How we may do our work will be for you to say. We will never be outdone by you, in this good work, in as far as Christian enmity and effort are involved Neither can we, in this good work, ever come in ahead of you. Your delegates were sent to us without plenary powers, in the pending issue So, likewise, here we come to you On both sides it seems that we, in our humbler sphere, like John the Baptist, have been sent to prepare the way of the Lord, in this important fraternal embrace.

Besides these winning ways, there have been other mighty agencies at work, and foremost among them has been your Round Lake fraternal camp meetings. All that go there come back thoroughly imbued with the spirit of immediate fraternization. — And, but for poverty and our College commencements, hundreds of us would have received its fraternal baptism. But the leaven of fraternal peace and harmony is in both measures of meal, and the whole lump will be leavened.

As we could not come to you as fraternal messengers, clothed with power to consummate this desirable end at once, by the direction of our General Conference, our Bishops have appointed a Board of Commissioners, consisting of three clerical and two lay members, all select men, to whom we desire to submit the work of adjusting all difficulties between us, whether real or imaginary, and earnestly ask your concurrence. There are difficulties of both kinds in existence, over which, without honorable adjustments, it will be impossible to proclaim fraternity. And we appeal to this measure as proof of our anxious desire to settle all difficulties and disputes between us in a way alike honorable and creditable to our common Methodism

We protest against any longer use of the popular phrase "two Methodisms," as between us. There is but one Episcopal Methodism in the United States of America, and you and we together make up this one Methodism. So deep rooted was this time honored and heaven-sanctioned denominational title, Methodist Episcopal Church, that when we organized a second jurisdictional boundary of it, no other title could be endured. And for both divisions to call themselves the M E Church, would have been ridiculous. And since to you belonged the right to keep the old title without any affix, if you so determined, we made ourselves the M. E. Church, South. The affix is derived solely from our southern locality, and leaves us as actually the M. E. Church, as you would be, if you had called yourselves, which by locality, you are, the M. E. Church, North. It is a mighty theme, and we are here to-day in the Centennial year of our National history, and in the morning of our tenth decade, as an organic Church of Christ, to celebrate the grand achievements, so gloriously won in the nine decades just past. And I am here, perhaps as the last living working man of the pioneer class of itinerant Methodist preachers, and glory be to God that I am alive and here.

We do not believe that these difficulties ought ever to be discussed in either General Conference at large — They are delicate, sensitive things, never to be settled by chaling speeches, but, as we believe, can be easily and speedily prayed and talked to death, by a joint Board of discreet brethren, intent upon Christian peace.

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," since unity, without formal union, is what constitutes Christian fraternity indeed.

And now let us dwell a moment on the triumphs of Methodism in our day and country.

When I was received on trial as a traveling preacher, in the winter of 1804, there were only seven little Annual Conferences in the United States and their territories Now there are about one hundred and twenty, many of them with nearly as many names on their annual Minutes as were in all the seven infant Conferences In my Alma Mater Conference, when I manumitted, there were only twenty members, and out of it have grown three others, and the four enroll at least five hundred robust names. And as to members, there are as many Methodists in Georgia to-day as there were in the whole Methodist Episcopal Church in America, when I joined it in 1802

Our entrance upon this field was ominous, in this respect, that we had to fight our way into notice and approval, more lonely through embattled hosts of infidels and common unbelievers, but especially to lay siege against the old forts and castles of venerated dogmas and doctrines. In a word, we had to preach against much that was considered the faith and the religion of the Church. This we had to do among what was considered the Christianized population of the country.

And yet, notwithstanding all these disadvantages, although we are the youngest of the four leading denominations, by the blessing of God we are to-day, numerically considered, the largest body of church members in America.

And what is still more noteworthy is, that there is not a Church, in all the land, that is sound in the faith of Christ, in which is not to be found the indoctrination of Methodism in faith and Christian experience. Through [illegible] Indians and 2 663 colored members. As you are a vare, most of our colored members, since the war have been, by their own preference, formed by us into an independent Methodist Episcopal Church. They have now a flourishing Church of 74.799 members, 15 Annual Conferences, 607 traveling preachers, and 518 local preachers. They have a self-sustaining church-paper, and 219.955 Sunday school scholars. Their College of Bishops, addressing our Bishops in 1874, expressed the highest gratitude for this fraternal organization of a Church for their welfare, and the result of the experiment has been most gratifying.

of Christ—the Christian Church—which is his body—may be heard, now, the responsive notes of salvation from all sin.

In ninety two years of our Church existence, we have increased from a mere beginning to a large fraction over two millions of Episcopal Methodists. Then add to these all other types of Methodists, though still Methodists, and we closely approximate three millions. And then, again, when we count in, according to the law of mortality, all that have died, our Methodists, in these ninety two years, we may well say, Behold and see what God has done by us, as well as for us Our record is in Heaven great as well as in the earth

Brethren, our indebtedness together and our responsibility, at this point in our beloved Methodism, ought to become our sole burden. For to us united has been given: given, too, in trust.

As between us, the two great bodies of Episcopal Methodism, there is never to be a doubt as to which of us shall be the greatest, in this proud sense. But as the Apostle requires it there is a sense in which we may strive to excel And I move that it may be in the following things: First, in the strictest and closest adherence to our distinctive commission as ministers of Christ, "the spread of Scriptural holiness over these lands"—always remembering this well chosen definition, "Scriptural holiness." To preach it and insist on it as a pastoral minister's duty will soon satisfy us that we can not successfully preach holiness unless we ourselves are leaders in the experience of holiness. Whichever wing of this over shadowing Church would be the wisest must know that, whenever the Methodist Church ceases to feel that this is her special ministry, she ceases to be God's elect body as a Church; and that to avert such awful repudiation, she must watch most carefully, preach most earnestly and scripturally, and live most faithfully, according to this distinctive doctrine of our beloved Church.

That division of this great Church that excels in this grand Mission will be the chosen bride of Christ as between the Northern and Southern Methodist Churches.

And I am glad to say, the buds, blossoms and fruits of holiness, show beyond denial, that the spring time of a revival of religious is upon us.

And, finally, let us, as two companies of brothers entrusted with a most precious patrimonial estate, to enjoy as trustees, and enlarge and increase as guardians for an indefinite posterity, see which of us can so use our portion of this Methodist capital as to make its per centage of income the test of comparative fidelity, industry, and devotion to its polity and its principles of operation as its founders and its fathers turned it over to us. Let us do this as brethren of one heart and one mind, o. one great aim and end. And the future will prove that our division into two General Conference jurisdictions was a benediction instead of a deprivation. We will watch each other only with Godly jealousy for a faithful propagation of one undivided Methodism. This, in as far as it can be so, is my last will and testament, turning over to my successors my estate in Methodism. "Finally brethren, farewell, be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

L PIERCE, Del.

The reading of Dr. Pierce's address was interrupted with frequent and hearty demonstrations of approval. At its conclusion Dr. Duncan came forward to address the Conference, and was greeted with great and prolonged applause. He then spoke as follows:

ADDRESS OF REV JAS. A. DUNCAN, D. D.

Mr. President and Brethren:

As I stand in your presence to-day, a solemn joy in my heart takes precedence of all other emotions.

The responsibility of my mission and of this hour, is solemn, but its hope [illegible] of joy.

Around me I behold the venerable and distinguished representatives of a great Church; beyond them are millions of Methodists in America and Europe, who feel deeply concerned in the issues of this hour; beyond them, in still more distant circles, stand a great cloud of witnesses, composed of all who care for the peace, the unity, and the prosperity of the Kingdom of Our Lord Jesus. And, sir, above us is "the General Assembly and Church of the First Born, who are written in heaven;" and among them, high seated in their own radiant places, are our sainted fathers, and over all, upon that eternal throne before which we all reverently worship, reigns "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named." In such solemn presence, where all dissensions seem profanities, where all temporal and sectional distinctions disappear, and "there is neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free, neither male nor female, but all are one in Christ Jesus, through whom all have access by one Spirit unto the Father, and are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." As an humble citizen of that kingdom, and member of that household, in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and by her authority as a fraternal messenger, with brotherly kindness in my heart, and words of peace upon my lips I salute you this day as brethren in Christ Jesus, our Lord. [Great applause.]

MR. PRESIDENT—The Church which I have the honor to represent is, as you are aware, next to your own, the largest body of Methodists in the world. By our statistics of 1874—the latest I could obtain, and I may explain that I presumed upon the presence of Dr. Pierce, and that he would sufficiently set forth our latest statistics; and when I found he would not be here, [illegible] the latest I could obtain [illegible] Indians and 2 663 colored members. As you are a vare, most of our colored members, since the war have been, by their own preference, formed by us into an independent Methodist Episcopal Church. They have now a flourishing Church of 74.799 members, 15 Annual Conferences, 607 traveling preachers, and 518 local preachers. They have a self-sustaining church-paper, and 219.955 Sunday school scholars. Their College of Bishops, addressing our Bishops in 1874, expressed the highest gratitude for this fraternal organization of a Church for their welfare, and the result of the experiment has been most gratifying.

Notwithstanding the loss to our membership occasioned by this measure, we have since then, by God's grace, added to our Church 207 664 souls.

In respect to Education, we are doing all our means will allow. We have in all, male and female, 61 Colleges and Universities.

By these facts, sir, it appears that as we join hands this day with you, more than two million Methodists in our lands salute each other in fraternal Faith, Hope, and Charity. (Applause.)

If individual members of these Churches shall, at any time, indulge in tempers, words and actions, inconsistent with this fact, they should bear the responsibility of it. [Voices, "Hear, hear!" and applause.] But it should be distinctly understood that officially, by solemn act of the highest legislative and judicial authority of both Churches, a declaration of peace and brotherly kindness has been made.

Mr. President, you will agree with me that a sound, healthful fraternity, between Christian Churches ought to rest on no uncertain ground, but should give an intelligent and explicit account of itself.

It has been well said, "the amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie" I trust, sir, that wisdom may knit the fraternal bonds between our Churches, and that it may be the "wisdom that is from above," that is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy"—so shall we prove that "the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace."

The grounds on which fraternity may rest safely and firmly, the tests to which it will be naturally subject ed, and the obligations that both Churches are under to respect its legitimate conditions, are matters concerning which it becomes us, as Christians, to think soberly, speak calmly, frankly and candidly. But,

WHAT IS FRATERNITY?

Is it only a quadrennial ceremony—a social ecclesiastical court formality—a specious parade of public addresses? Is it a mere form?

Sir, I humbly conceive that Christian fraternity is something more than such a solemn mockery—something deeper, more vital, and more sacred. It is a great Christian movement, giving concurrent expression to the brotherly kindness of more than a million hearts It is a sublime Christian alliance, in which Charity becomes supreme over all disputations, and reaffirms its meaning, its power and its consequences.

The essential conditions of fraternity are provided, not by accident, not by a combination of fortuitous circumstances, not by an affected oblivion of all differences of opinion, but by the Spirit of Christ.

Peaceful associations of men are incessantly deranged by conflicting currents of multiform prejudices and heterogeneous tastes, as well as by narrow views and honest misapprehensions. But the reconstructive power of the Christian Spirit which rules the advancing intelligence of mankind, tends to bring about that higher generalization that diminishes minor specific differences, and organizes even moral discrepancies under one great law of love.

How to blend all sects into one denomination and obliterate all formal distinctions in Church governments will, perhaps, continue to be an unsolved problem until the millennium Schemes for realizing the enchanting vision have been projected repeatedly, but it still remains only a beautiful chimera, a brilliant castle in the air, which good men of fine fancy occasionally create for their own delectation.

And yet, while weak, mortal and corruptible men, may never, perhaps, be able to find a concordant expression of all their religious plans, let us at least hope that the penetrating spirituality of our holy religion, is more perfectly diffusing itself through all the branches of the Christian Church, vitalizing them with such grace that, presently, they shall, together, sweetly bloom with the same beautiful lines of divine life, and become richly fruitful upon that heavenly vine to which they all belong.

The true and inviolable terms of fraternal grace, which ought to be glorified in the Christian name, and concentrate the united energies of the Sacramental Host for the last and mightiest conquests, are not the inventions of diplomatic ingenuity, but old and very simple principles; the love, courtesy confidence and good will which the Holy Scriptures require all God's people to illustrate in their intercourse with each other, furnish the simple and solid basis for fraternal relations.

Especially, I would say that a healthful fraternity requires Christian candor.

Distrust, suspicion, doubt, all lack of open, honest, candid behaviour, will always coldly relegate men to independent and hostile attitudes. A heathen poet said:

Woe were the kings who never chose a friend,
Till with full cups they had unmasked his soul,
And seen the bottom of his deepest thoughts.

The poet was right in his philosophy, if wrong in his expedient.

But Christians need no wine cups to unmask their souls. As one has [illegible] Christian virtue, consists not in fairness of speech but in fairness of heart

It is charity that thinketh no evil

It is more than the blandishments of formal courtesy; more than smiles and smooth words; and it is nobler than the worldly prudence which, while it avoids offensive epithets, cherishes secret ill will.

It rises above infirmities, pities weakness, expects human imperfections; is quiet and moderate in temper, honest and manly in word and deeds.

How often would such candor dissipate, in a moment, the ill will whose false foundation it would instantly expose! Alas! that human pride should so frequently be too stubborn for such generous behaviour! It is so humiliating to confess faults, acknowledge and explain errors, and retrace steps boastfully but falsely taken. And then, sir, there seems to be in many people an instinctive papal longing after the reputation for infallibility.

But we have to learn to respect the rights of private judgment. Let us remember that we must credit intelligent people with rationality and good people with sincerity. And let us also remember that there are honest and honorable differences of opinion which divide men into classes when compromise and unity would dethrone reason and principle.

These centrifugal forces in the highest and purest regions of human thought should be candidly recognized, and Christian charity, which is the bond of perfectness, should supply the centripetal attraction by which all these seemingly repellant social elements may move peacefully in lucid circles around a common centre of eternal truth. [Applause.] For so is it true, that charity is a provision, not for unity, but for diversity.

Now, "seeing," says the Apostle, "ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently."

This cannot be too earnestly insisted upon. The world's code of honorable intercourse may countenance enmity concealed under compliments. But we have not so learned Christ. On this point the Apostle is especially bold and plain spoken. He cries: "Let love be without dissimulation. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of Him that created him; where there is neither Greek, nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free: but Christ is all, and in all. Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering; forbearing one another, if any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness, and let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful"

This, sir, is the Scripture ground for fraternity, and on this holy apostolic foundation it may be firmly established But some may say they are not so much concerned about the theory of fraternity as they are about its practice. If they can, they will enjoy its practical benefits, and leave to others, who may enjoy such abstractions, the discussion of its principles. Sir, such a position, on a grave Church question like this, is neither sound nor safe. The practical value of fraternal relations will entirely depend upon the character of its principles, and the respect which they command. Let us then clearly understand the exact ground we occupy, so that we may not be easily moved from it.

Here allow me to specify a few points. 1. I will say we do not establish fraternity between these two Churches for secular or worldly ends. I am frank to say this, because it has been intimated that the Methodists are seeking a closer union in this country, merely to give them greater political influence. We dare not lower the dignity of the Church of God to the government of secular motives. Secular blessings will always, of course, attend the progress of Christian truth, and secular peace be promoted by the extensive diffusion of the charitable sentiments of religion. But important as we regard the peace of civil society, and the secular welfare of States to be, we must look higher than to these temporal and political considerations for our principles of action

Above, beneath, and around all the best political interests of a State, their preservation and strength, we behold the obligations of Christian character. The law of duty for Christians is, first of all, God's law. We ascend above the plane of earthly kingdoms, to receive our decalogue from Divine hands. Our master, a teacher come from God, is the King we must first honor. He said, "My Kingdom is not of this world. If my Kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." To the Herodians who tempted him respecting his return to earthly governments he said: "Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." To all men he cries: "Seek first the Kingdom of God!" And "the Kingdom of God is righteousness peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." [Applause.] Now, because we belong to this Kingdom and are bound by these principles, we are bound to maintain, as far as we can, a righteous, peaceful, and joyful brotherhood in the Holy Ghost.

I am careful to state this point distinctly, because these two Churches have been for thirty years past regarded as respectively representing two different political sections of this country. But the well of separation between these two sections has been broken down forever. [Tremendous applause.] Now, the point I wish particularly to make is this: that while the political representatives of the South can and do truthfully assure the world that a true, brave, and firm devotion to the Union of these States animates the whole Southern people, [applause,] we, as ministers of Christ, take still higher ground, and offer you our hands, not in the name of those political interests, but in the name of Christ. [Applause.] Not that we love secular peace less, but that we love God's peace more; not that we lack loyalty to the government under which we live, but that our highest and holiest loyalty is to Jesus Christ and Him crucified! [Applause.]

2. We do not establish fraternity merely as a judicious measure for ending unhappy controversies. But we hope it will end them. [Voices: "Amen."] We do not underrate such sweet fruits of it. They are attractive and palatable. But what we are especially concerned to secure is such an understanding as will be permanently productive of these fruits. The tree that bears them must be a good tree, or the good fruit will soon fail. A tree not rooted in love—a barren fraternity bearing nothing but leaves—a Quadrennial General Conference pretension—would merit not the Master's blessing, but His curse.

Let our fraternity rather be a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth its fruit in its season, whose leaf also shall not wither, and from whose living branches our children's children shall gather good fruit till the end of time. [Applause.] And then, sir, let me add, if in this sort of Paradise restored, that "old serpent" should enter and entwine his folds among those mystic branches, we would pluck him hence and crush him beneath our feet. [Great Applause.]

Mr. President, I am sure that you will join with me yourself, for I have been an editor, and even the editorial staff will join with me, I have no doubt, when I say, Heaven send us rest from that pen and ink warfare which has so long fatigued Christian patience, and blotted the fair pages of the extensive family of Christian Advocates! I am aware, Mr. President, that some persons will not cease from that kind of warfare in which they have so much pleasure, and which we technically term logomachy. But, sir, harmony with such people is simply impossible: the only harmony they ever know is of some unhappy tune that they alone can sing [Laughter.]

Perhaps they were converted once—a good while ago. [Laughter.] But if then, in their first love, they were ready to pluck out their own eyes for their brethren; now, they seem only anxious to pluck out their brethren's eyes for themselves. [Laughter]

Some people have great talent for making mischief. An eminent Frenchman once said: "Nothing is more dangerous than a friend without discretion; even a prudent enemy is preferable." If we cannot manage such people then we must not mind them. The quickest method of reducing them to decent silence is not to listen to what they say. Our proposal is: let us appoint wise men to adjust all questions of real conflict between these two Churches; let us pray the God of wisdom and peace to direct them to right conclusions, and then bury forever the weapons of war and move on to the better, brighter conquests of peace!

3. We do not establish Fraternity merely as a policy measure.

We should always be mindful that the Christian standard of action is higher than policy. Less noble considerations should not be allowed to subordinate or supersede true ideas and imperative principles. In these days when we have to lament the prevalence of low motives and loose morals, I think the Church ought to be specially careful, in all her actions, to give pre-eminent distinction to the purest and loftiest sentiments.

It is that Christianity has questions of expediency as well as questions of law: and yet all its expedients must be sanctioned by sound principles. Mere policy, as such, is wholly an earthly thing. It lives and dies on the earth. "Not only its Kingdom is of this world, but this world is its Kingdom." But in Christian economy let it be always manifest that the Church of Christ has no policy that is not first piety.

4. We do not establish fraternity as a measure of Sectarian ambition as Methodists.

No Church, in America, perhaps, has greater temptation to sectarian pride and ambition than that which comes to Methodism in the name of its rapid and marvelous growth.—Success has its own perils. Prosperity sets its own peculiar snares.—Triumphs often contain elements of subsequent defeat. How to succeed wisely is a profound philosophy we need to study diligently and continually.

History tells us how Churches, as well as individuals and nations, become sad victims of their own prosperity

When once wealth, numbers, and power, become objects of Church pride, and sectarianism fights chiefly for its own aggrandizement, bigotry banishes charity, partisan zeal prefers Church to Christianity, the standard of piety degenerates into loyalty to a creed, and a scarlet robed ecclesiasticism enthroned in pomp, pride and power, worships its own image, and disgraces the name it bears. [Applause.]

Not, then, for sectarian purposes do we seek a more cordial alliance between these two great divisions of American Methodism, but because we believe that brotherly kindness is right in itself, and because to be devoid of it, Methodists, among ourselves, would add inconsistency and unnaturalness to an obvious fault.

And yet, sir, we are not without Methodist feeling in this movement. We are not indifferent to Methodist history, not unappreciative of the present power and glory of our Church, and not unconcerned for the future achievements.

That banner which, at the head of a little company of believers, John Wesley, in sublime faith uplifted in the name of the Lord, has become venerable with historical associations and resplendent with world-renowned conquests.

It is now the honored standard of a vast army of Methodists, numbering millions, containing representatives of every nation and people and tongue under heaven.

What Methodism has already accomplished in these States is now known and read of all men. What it shall accomplish in futuro depends upon our fidelity to the spirituality that gave it birth, the courageous zeal that conquered for it a high place of honor among the Churches, and a proper comprehension of those conditions which will most wisely fit it for prolonging its own peculiar mission among men. And, sir, I say it with emphasis: in my humble judgment, not the least among the forces now shaping the future of American Methodism is the issue of the fraternal movement in which we are concerned at this hour.

Brethren, what an opportunity is ours! Well for us if we can discern the signs of the times to know the things which make for our peace!

Our glorious land that blooms between the seas is a magnificent field for Methodist work. I pray God we may have wisdom to cultivate it in the spirit of peace and Christian fellowship. [Applause.] Shall we show ourselves worthy of such an inheritance?

From the northern border of it, where God's perpetual bow of peace glorifies Niagara's cliffs, to the sea-girt southern line where God's gifts make earth almost an Eden of fragrance and beauty; and from the rock bound Atlantic, where the Eastern song of the sea begins its morning music, away to the far off Pacific, where the Western waters murmur their evening benediction to our land as the tide goes out beneath the setting sun, everywhere we feel the inspirations of our country, and devoutly pray: "God bless our native land!" [Great applause] God give it "the glory of Lebanon, and the excellency of Carmel and Sharon; and may all the inhabitant's thereof see the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God!"

Ah, brethren; in our fraternal fellowship I pray God we may uplift the banner of Methodism to a still higher summit of honor in this land, and make it everywhere the welcome signal of a zeal for Jesus worthy of our heroic ancestry, and worthy of that posterity, who shall receive it as something sacred from our hands if we shall transmit it to them uncorrupted in principle and in doctrines, pure in faith, humble in spirit, powerful in method, and having for its highest distinction, God's shining seals to its Gospel preaching.

And now, sir, again I ask, what is Christian fraternity? and on what grounds do we establish it? I answer explicitly:

Christian fraternity is the reciprocal recognition of Christ in each other. Fraternal relations are the relations we sustain to each other through Christ.

Where no such relations to Christ exist, there can be no fraternity. Where such relations do exist, we are bound to recognize them; and when we recognize them, we are under solemn Christian obligations to maintain them and provide for them.

It is no matter of discretion whether Christians shall live in proper fraternal relations to each other. It

Our Fraternal Messengers at Baltimore.

We surrender the entire space for reading matter, on the first and fourth pages of this issue of the ADVOCATE, to an accounnt of the reception, together with the addresses, of the Fraternal Messengers appointed by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, Sonth, to visit the General Conference of the M. E. Church, now in session in Baltimore. We make no apology for the large space we surrender to that matter, believing that nothing could be of greater interest to our readers. The reception was warm and cordial, evincing a growing good feeling on the part of our Northern brethren towards us of the South: while the addresses of our delegates were able and eloquent, dignified and cordial. The speech of Dr. Duncan, the silver-tongued, was read by us with especial pleasnre, and we are sure our readers will likewise enjoy it.

We join in the regrets caused by the absence, in person, of the venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce, who had commenced his journey to Baltimore, by easy stages, bnt found traveling so exhausting and painful that he was compelled to forego the completion of his journey and the delights that his presence at Baltimore would have afforded. His address, however, was forwarded and read to the Conference, receiving the warm approval of its members. We trust that its warning words of wisdom, its admonitions and imprecations will be heeded by all who are interested in the fulfillment by Methodism of the grand and glorions mission belonging to it. We cannot hope that the Church will much longer enjoy the presence, effective work and counsels of the wonderful and beloved old man in Israel. His address is no doubt, as he terms it, his last will and testament of and concerning his estate in Methodism. He has employed his said estate to great advantage, increasing and strengthening it year after year and adding to the store of others as well. May those upon whom the inheritance falls nse the estate as wisely as the testator has done for the past sixty years!

We cannot think that the visit of our Fraternal Messengers and the character of their speeches will fail to produce a good effect on the Northern Church, dispose them more kindly toward us and be followed by some practical fraternity between the Churches. Organize union is out of the question—it would be undesirable if it were practicable. The two Churches, united in one, would be too unwieldy to be easily and wisely managed, and there would be constant danger of exciting sectional feeling and arousing the spirit of the old controversy whose ghost has been, or will be, laid by the wise and christian action of representative men of the two Churches.

The Right Way.

A snit had been instituted in the Superior Court of this connty by a member of one of the city churches for the recovery of very valnable real estate on Fayetteville Street. The defendant is a member of the same church to which the plaintiff belongs, and it was feared that dissension in the church might grow ont of the controversy at law. The defendant, willing to do justice and anxious to avoid the unpleasantness of the law suit, proposed to the plaintiff to select one of two prominent lawyers, members of their church, who should act as judge and decide upon the law involved in the case, while three disinterested members of the church shonld be selected, by lot, to decide upon the matters of fact—both parties to abide by the result of the arbitration. To this the plaintiff agreed and the matter is now pending where heated feeling cannot arise and be fanned into fiercer heat by the quibbling of lawyers and the prejudices of by-standers. We cannot too strongly commend this mode of settling difficulties between members of the christian church. If it can be avoided, they have no right, as christians, to carry their controversies into the courts of law and wrestle and contend over matters that could be more easily and satisfactorily settled out of court

The Commencement exercises at Thomasville Female College take place on Tnesday the 6th of June, instead of Thursday 8th as stated in the ADVOCATE not long since.

Commencement Exercises.

The Senior was absent a part of last week to meet an engagement to deliver the literary address before the Graham High School. He was prevented from being present at the beginning of the commencement exercises, and returns too late to write up a full account of what he saw and heard. Suffice it to say that he was highly gratified with his visit and was pleased at the evidences of the noble work this institution is accomplishing in the canse of edncation. Located in Graham, a pleasant little town on the N. C. Railroad, (having derived its name from the lamented Hon. W. A. Graham)—in the midst of refinement and intelligence, salnbrious climate and excellent water, with Rev. D. A. Long as President, and a scholarly and accomplished faculty, this institution of learning can but be liberally patronized and crowned with abundant success. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Smith of Greensboro. The average attendance during the past session was about eighty. This speaks well for these panic times. The senior speaking on Friday evening was of a highly creditable character, and reflected honor upon both the faculty and students. They compare favorably with the original speeches of the young gentlemen of any of our literary institutions. Their matter, manner and delivery was good.

We were impressed with the fact that the whole commnnity felt a lively interest in the school. With this stimnlus, and with the indomitable efforts of the President and his assistants, and with the numerons advantages which clnster around the Graham High School, we bespeak for it a bright and prosperous career.

Death of Rev. T. L. DeVeaux.

The last nnmber of the N. C. Presbyterian came to us draped in the signs of mourning and announcing the death of its Editor, Rev. T. L. DeVeanx, who had been in charge of the paper for the past three years. He died on Tuesday the 23d inst. in great peace, having suffered long and severely with a painful form of bronchitis or laryngitis.

He was a man of talent and culture, pleasant in social intercourse, and a good writer. We cordially regret his departure from our midst; and sincerely sympathize with his family and Church who have been so sadly bereaved.

Mr. DeVeaux was a native of South Carolina, having been born in the city of Charleston on October 6, 1835. He was educated in his native city and was afterward graduated in Columbia Theological Seminary. He was licensed to preach the gospel by Harmony Presbytery in 1851. His first charge was the churches of Lowndesboro and New Hope, Alabama

Dr. Closs was in the city last week and favored us with a call. He has not entirely recovered from his recent severe illness, being still weak and troubled with coughing spells and indigestion. He is slowly recuperating, however, and hopes to be able to attend and conduct the third round of Quarterly Conference on his District. He has been visiting his daughter, Mrs Boshamer, at Ridgeway, and came to Raleigh on a special mission to baptize a young lady, in the fulfilment of a promise made a year or two ago and which he had been prevented from fulfilling by divers causes. Dr. Closs will visit Western North Carolina dnring next month and we trust that by the invigorating air and pure water of the mountains he will experience speedy relief and be fully restored to health.

In a recent sermon on the Evangelist's office, Dr. C. R. Vaughan, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Raleigh, paid the following high tribute to John Wesley and the Methodist Church: "The glory, and one of the prime elements of snccess, of the Methodist Church, is that its founder more fully conceived the power and efficiency of the Scriptnral office of the Evangelist than any of the religious reformers. The Church is built mainly upon this idea, its itinerant ministry being a regularly organized Evangelist." The eloquent divine then descanted npon the great work accomplished by the followers of Wesley and culminated in the following imprecation: "God bless the Methodist Church! the Devil could well afford to give his cohorts a furlough of ten years if the Methodist Church could be blotted ont."

We have on hand several interesting commnnications which will appear in due time. The admirable articles of Bro. Hudson will be resumed in our next.

The commencement at Greensboro Female College takes place this week. The Railroads will pass visitors for one fare.

All visitores attending the commencement at Trinity College next week will be passed over the several Railroads in the State for one first class fare.

We ask attention to onr new advertisements which appear in the advertising department

It is related of Sydney Smith that once, on entering a drawing-room in a West End mansion, he found it lined with mirrors on all sides. Finding himself reflected in every direction, he said that he "supposed he was at a meeting of the clergy, and there seemed to be a very respectable attendance."

Letter from Concord.

DEAR BRO. Believing that it is a gracious privilege and duty to make public acknowledgment and thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father, when we receive such precious blessings from His almighty hand as has been our happy portion recently to enjoy, I have concluded, through our organ, to make a brief statement of our workings and that of the Divine Spirit with us, thus far during this year, that yon and our Church at large may rejoice with us for good already accomplished and pray with us that His good Spirit may abide with us and continue to accompany the Gospel as it is preached in earnestness and power by our zealous and faithful Pastor, Rev. C. M. Pepper, from Sabbath to Sabbath, to the hearts and consciences of the people.

Brother Pepper entered upon his work immediately upon his arrival in Concord.

The first prayer-meeting conducted by him served to inspire confidence in the hearts of our people, that our charge was placed in the hands of a pastor whose whole soul was in his work; that to do the work of Him that sent him, to strengthen believers and convert sinners, was the sole aim of his life. With each successive service he has conducted and in his daily life, our first impressions have been strengthened. He has by the assistance of God, who seems to be in all and with all that he does, worked our Church up to the happiest state of religious experience that I have ever seen it; and the most perfect harmony and goods will prevails throughout the entire congregation. Our prayer-meetings are largely attended and are peculiarly interesting; they are more like the old-time "religions experience meetings" we read of, than the cold, formal prayer-meetings too common in this enlightened and refined age. Our laymen participate largley in the public exercises of these meetings, talking, exhorting, and praying, and we have frequently called for penitents and rejoiced to see happy converts at prayer meeting Indeed the interest became so great in our prayer meetings that they were kept-up regularly, interspersed with an occasional sermon, for near three weeks, dnring which time there were some seven or eight happy conversions and twelve or fourteen additions to onr church,—some upon certificate, the others upon profession of faith. We receive constant and valuable aid from the Rev. J. C. Thomas of the Concord circuit who is getting on smoothly and successfully with his work.

We are striving hard for the mastery and hope by the grace of God to accomplish good, great and lasting good, in His great name and for our glorious Redeemer's sake. Pray with us and for us, for there are many precions sonls here, still ont of the "ark of safety," yonng men and yonng women for whom the Church has offered many earnest prayers and in whose futnre temporal and eternal interest and happiness we are deeply interested.

We look forward to onr District Conference with a great deal of interest. You remember it embraces the 1st Sabbath in August. We would be glad to see you and onr friend, Bro. Gray. Can't you come? I would be glad to speak of our Sabbath school, but my communication is already too long. Will only say that it now nnmbers 126 and we claim it to be as interesting as any in the State.

Truly Yours,
CONCORD.

The Richmond Advocate gives the following item, and comments sharply but rightly:

"THE Episcopal Church in its Annual Council in Alexandria has a matter of curions interest nnder discussion —A layman, with a fair following, introduced a measure looking towards a recognition of the other Sects as Chnrches. There were some thirty of the Council who voted in favor of showing courtesy to the Ministers of the Dissenters in Virginia. The opposition outnnmbered these amiable persons, and decreed that Clergymen must not come in contact, sacerdotally, with the preachers of the Sects in Virginia.

This ingratitnde is sharper than a serpent's tooth. The Methodists have given a Bishop, many Ministers, and probably a third of the Commnnicants to that Church in Virginia. Yet Doggett is too unclean and nnworthy for their pulpits. Why this insult to men whose labors keep the Episcopal Church from collapse?

Just think of a Clergy who report a net increase of only one hundred and sixty-nine for the last twelve months in their Church in Virginia and West Virginia, two States, declining to recognize the Methodist Ministers, who, in the same field and time, have brought to Christ more souls than there are Communicants in the Episcopal Church after two hundred years of preaching and proselyting.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, have nnanimously elected the REV. Dr. D. D. WHEDON editor of the Quarterly Review, and Rev. Dr. J. H. VINCENT editor of the Sunday school papers and tracts. Dr. C. H. FOWLER was elected editor of the New York Christian Advocate in place of Dr. CURRY, by a vote of 162 to 143. Dr. FOWLER having one vote more than the number neccessary to a choice, the remainder being scattering. Dr. Curry was elected editor of the Ladies Repository.

A Noted Family.

MESSRS EDITORS: Some years before our Revolutionary war, a young German from upper Franconia in Bavaria, some 40 or 50 miles beyond Frankfort on the Maine, with his sister, emigrated to Bethlehem in Pennsylvania. There the sister married and remained, but the brother removed to Forsyth, (Stokes county,) beyond the Moravian settlements at Salem, Bethabara (Old Town,) Bethania (Hanser Town) etc, bought a small farm, married the daughter of a German Swiss emigrant, and became a worthy, respected and reliable citizen During Cornwallis' pursuit of Greene through the State and at the battle of Guilford C. H., he was in the patriot army, but the company to which he belonged having been sent out on a foraging expedition, he was not present at that battle. He and his wife were members of the German Reformed Church, but having, at an early day, come in contact with the pioneer Methodist preachers [illegible] Pittsylvania Circnit, they were so attracted by this form of christianity that they invited the preacher to their house, united with the society, made their house, not only a house for the weary Itinerant, but a regular preaching place on the Yadkin circuit, and threw all the influence and force of their character and example in favor of this religious movement.

In the providence of God, their first humble abode was consnmed by the flames, and scarcely anything was saved from their ravages. When the family mansion was again erected, "an upper room," occupying about half of the second story, was set apart as a place of public worship, and fitted with a pulpit and seats to accommodate the preachers and people. Adjoining this room was another furnished and set apart as the preacher's room, and never allowed to be occupied by any others.

The Lord called the head of this family to the work of the ministry, and he labored for many years, far and wide, although only a local preacher, to call sinners to Christ and to preach the crucified one as their Savior. He was eminently successful, and became well known throughout all the Yadkin country. Full of years and usefulness he was taken to his reward.

The Lord had given him seven sons and two danghters. He had striven to rear them up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord," had instilled correct principles, a holy reverence for God, and a due regard to His ordinances into their hearts and lives. They all reverenced him; the last day of their long lives, as a superior being, and loved to linger around his memory, and to teach to their children his precepts. His wife lingered for many years after his death, an object of love, respect, and veneration not only to her own children, but to all the country around She too left behind her a glorious testimony that she pleased God and walked after his commandments.

The rewards of these two lives, rich in all the virtnes and grace that conspire to make the complete christian character, did not die with them.

It pleased the good Lord to call their youngest child to the work of the Itinerant christian ministry in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Though he hesitated and shrank back when he felt the call laid upon him, yet when he did make up his mind, he never looked back but gave up all to the work. He threw heart and soul, mind and body, estate and friends, and all he hoped for below, into this cause, and never for a moment flinched from this perilous and exhausting work. Nor shrank from any toil or privation that the cause of his master demanded from him. For over fifty years in parts of Va. and all over middle North Carolina, he labored for his master and thousands upon thousands were added as seals to his ministry. The Lord owned the labors of his servant with a rich and abundant harvest of souls from every field in which he labored. Full of years, crowned with honors, and esteemed and loved by his brethren, he went to his reward without a fear. Two of his brothers, who were local preachers, survived him, the older of the two but a short time. I was called a few weeks ago to the death-bed of the other, as he lingered on the shores of time, and with faith looked over into the promised land The last of those nine children was about to pass away, but what a record he completed! No doubt, no fear, not even a tremor marred the holy, sacred trust of that dying bed. Here were the loved ones that had for so long hung trustfnlly upon his slightest utterance. but "over yonder," he saw the bright glories and everlasting joys of the sanctified; and rejoiced that the time of rest was approaching. He had stood up for his Lord on many a well fought field, and he felt that his reward was jnst before him, and oh! how joyously he went forward to meet it. You could not feel sorrow at that hallowed bed-side. There was too near a view of the celestial city to admit of the entrance of sorrow or grief—and your heart swelled, as you felt that you could almost catch a glimpse of the pearly gates and golden streets, and hear the songs of the redeemed, as they were abont to welcome, a world worn bnt redeemed brother to that bright abode. Oh! it was good to be in that death chamber, and to commune with that sainted one, just as he felt that he was going over the stream. I have been privileged to sit by but one other such couch, and I bless the Lord for the privilege, and shall be the better for it for all my days.

Allow me to transcribe for you an epitaph or two, that I wrote off from the graves, in the burial place of that old family and you shall see of whom it consisted.

"Here lies the remains of the Rev. Jno Doub, born in Germany, the 27th of March, 1743, died the 26th of October 1814, aged 71 years, 7 months, less 1 day."

"MARY EVA DOUB
(BORN SPAINHOWER)
Born Nov. 30th 1755,
Died Aug 5th 1835.
Aged 79 years, 8 months, 5 days.

Sacred to the Memory of
Rev. Joseph Doub.
Born Aug. 18th, 1787,
Died Nov. 22nd, 1869,
Aged 82 years, 3 months and 14 days.

He was a member of M. E. Church 43 years, and a Deacon and Elder 36 years."

Here lies Jacob Doub, John Doub, Henry Doub, William Doub, and Mary and Lizzie Doub—and a numerous band of their descendants.

The youngest brother, Rev. Peter Doub, D. D. reposes in the Methodist grave yard in Greensboro, without a stone to mark his last resting place.

And your last paper announces that on the morning of the 8th inst, the Rev Michael C. Doub, was called up to the house of the blest and sanctified—the last of that family of nine.

They have left many of their name behind them. Who will fill their places in the Church of God?

Doub's appointment has sent out many preachers to call a dying world to Christ. Who will lengthen out the roll?

CLARKE.

From Beaufort

If you please, you may say to the Church through the ADVOCATE that Bro. Raven commenced a series of meetings here and kept them up night and day for nearly 3 weeks, which resulted in the conversion of about 70 persons, 58 of whom have joined the Methodist Church and 4 or 5 the Missionary Baptist. Then the work caught in the Baptist Church which resulted in 32 accessions.

I never saw more seriousness in a community, in the Methodist Church. Large congregations would meet at noonday and dwell there for 3 to 4 hours. One night I counted 48 persons at the altar, and 16 of that number were converted. Dr. L. W. Martin, formerly a member of the the N. C. Conference, who for several years had surrendered his credentials and had gone astray, was reclaimed, to the almost universal satisfaction of the community at large. One night, very unexpectedly, as the penitents approached the altar, he entered the altar, and very earnestly commenced repeating the hymn—

Jesus let thy pitying eye,
Call back a wandering sheep—
Paise to Thee like Peter, I
Would fain like Peter weep

Then the Dr. said, if he had any influence, hereafter, it should be on the side of the Church. The Baptist Preacher, Rev. Mr. Sanderlin, late of Wake Forest College, was with us and rendered efficient aid, by which he rendered himself dear to the peoples hearts. He is a most excellent young gentleman as well as a good preacher, and I am free to say he is doing his church more good in this place than any man they have had for 25 years.

It is needless to say anything in regard to the very efficient and laborions Pastor of Ann St. M. E. Church, Bro. A. R. Raven, for he has endeared himself to all his charge and the community generally. He has organized a Missionary S. S. Society which has raised over $35.

Yours truly,
L. W. PIGOTT.

Religious Intelligence.

The Congregational churches of England contribute annually for Church and Missionary purposes about $4 900 000.

It is stated that the meetings of Moody and Sankey in New York caused a great falling off in the attendance of the theatres.

More than three fourths of the students of Princeton College are professors of religion. A revival is extending through the town.

It is estimated that 2,000 persons professed conversion during the revival conducted by Rev. E. P. Hammond in Washington city.

Rev. Alphouse Dupont, formerly a Roman Catholic priest, has taken orders at Syracuse in the Episcopal Church.

The General Conference of the Zion African Methodist Episcopal Church meets in city of Louisville, Ky, the 23d of Jnne next.

The average salaries of ministers of the Free Church of Scotland amount to about $1,200 per annum. This is an advance on amount paid last year of about $200.

The Presbyterians have among the Germans in America ninety five churches, one hundred ministers and seven thousand five hundred members.

The Christian World, Cincinnati, gives account of 2,737 additions to the membership of the Reformed Church of the United States (German) since the 1st of January.

The subscription to the French Catholic university at Lille now amounts to $500,000. This sum does not include the buildings, which were presented by a single individual

The Rev. A. Le Roy, who has been appointed chaplain of the State prison in Auburn, N. Y, is one of the survivors of the six hundred that made the famous charges at Balaklava.

GERMANY.—This is the most productive field abroad for labor in the Snnday School Twelve years ago there were no Sunday Schools in the country, now there are 150 schools, 4,000 teachers, and 80,000 scholars.

Dr. Gulick says that it is the missionary's wife who does much of the work. In his own case he frankly confesses that when they reached their field his wife learned the language first, and held meetings while he—held the baby.

The American Presbyterian mission in Upper Egypt, dnring its ten years of work, has planted ten Christian chnrches, with an average of forty members. These members hold devotional meetings for the study of the Scriptnres on five or six evenings of each week, and have thus acquired great familarity with Bible truths.

The condition of the Jews in other lands is improving. An order has been issued in Prussia to the prison authorities, to release Jewish prisoners on Saturdays and Jewish festivals. The Jews are permitted to live in any part of Rome.

Rev. A. B. Earle, the evangelist, has just closed a series of meetings in Troy, N. Y. Some twenty-five churches were represented. Since Mr. Earle left there have been many additions to the churches especially the Baptist.

Dr. Samuel Wesley, the organist and composer, died at Gloucester, England, on the 19th of April. He was organist successively at Leeds Parish church, and at the Cathedrals of Hereford, Exeter, Winchester, and Gloucester. He was a grand nephew of John Wesley, and a son of Samuel Wesley, the composer.

A writer in Time of Blessing tells of a remote village in the Highlands of Scotland, where the revival of 1874 stirred all hearts into new life, and "now, when all kinds of natnral excitement merely must be long passed,' there are unmistakable signs of the reality of God's work at that time in the souls of men.

Things are not evenly arranged in the English Church. The annnal revenue of the Church is about $25, 000,000,—a sum sufficient, apart from parsonage and fees, to give every clergymen of the realm $1,200 in salary. But of this large revenue the Archbishop of Canterbury appropriates to himself $75,000, and the smallest Bishop gets $10,000. The Deans get from $5,000 to $15,000 and Canons get from $5,000 to $10,000. Yet many of the lower clergy are poor, and dying they leave their families in circnmstances of great distress.—Buffalo Advocate.

The annual report of the Japan mission of the American Board is very cheering in its tone. The field is opening beyond the utmost ability of the missionaries fully to occupy it. More men are needed, and there is perhaps a still greater need of women to do snch house-to-house work as Miss Dudley has done at Sanda, bnt is obliged now to relinquish on account of her dnties at the Kobe Girl's School. Medical services have to a notable degree prepared the way for the direct work of the mission Hiogo officials, for instance, steadily refused to allow the preaching of the gospel in their city, but now permit Sabbath services at the dispensary, where a congregation of thirty, mostly school teachers and physicians, attend Mr. Atkinson's preaching. Mr. Taylor was recently invited to open a hospital at Bezene, a large inland city, one hundred miles west of Kobe. On visiting the place he found that there was a Bible interest started by a Japanese student who had been converted in America, but had died shortly after his return to his native city. Several high officials were presented at a Bible meeting held in the house of the vice governor, who is himself an inquirer. Since Mr. Taylor's retnrn to Kobe a government officer has written to him: "Give us the gospel first and the hospital afterwards; for we cannot afford to wait for the gospel." It is probable that the sacred city Kioto, once the Mikado's residence, and filled with temples, will be occupied by the mission during the autumn. The blind counselor of the Kioto government, Yomamoto by name, is greatly interested in the truth, and especially desires that a Christian school be opened there. He has said that what the Japanese need is some power that will change the heart and reform the life, and that naught can do this but Christianity.—Independent.

Wilmington Review: The many friends in this city of Col. St. Clair Dearing, where he has recently resided, will regret to learn of his tragic death, last week, at Grahamville, S. C. The news was received here in a letter from a lady, a former resident. Col. Dearing, it seems, had just been married and was at Grahamville depot with his bride, ready to take the cars for the wedding journey, when he was shot down and instantly killed by a rejected suitor to the bride. No further particulars are known here.

Miss Rebecca Jane Saffriet, of Davie county, brought suit against Dabney L. Lowery, of same county, for a beach of promise to marry and the jury returned a verdict for $4,000. It was proved that he had written the following effusion and addressed it to her:

"As the vine clings 'round the tree,
So is my love for thee;
Will you wed and marry me,
Tell me now and tell me when."

The jury couldn't stand that poetry and it cost the defendant $4,000.

I SUFFERED for Several Years from Asthma, and from some affection of the throat, resembling Bronchitis. After spending a great deal of money on various medicines, with no material benefit, in March last, on the recommendation of Mr. F. Peters, of this place, I obtained Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. After taking two bottles of this remedy I found myself so much relieved, that I continued taking it until I used seven bottles, and by this time my symptoms had all disappeared, and I have every reason to believe myself cured. —W. Died in Reidsville, North Carolina, on the 12th day May 1876, James Wheeler in the 78th year of his age. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for sixty years and a local preacher for many years. The gospel he preached in his days consoled his own heart in his last days. May the Lord sustain and comfort his bereaved wife and children.

A FRIEND.

Major William Hastings died at his residence near Concord, Johnston Co., N. C., on the 15th of May 1876, in the 64th year of his age.

In 1830 he connected himself with the Methodist E Church, walking up tightly in all the chnrch life, and lived and died respected by a large circle of friends and professions.

His death was sudden, he was in usual health a few hours before his decease he suffered from partial paralysis of the lungs of his death he was on the eve of departure from home to obtain medical advice as to the use of such mineral waters as might be likely to afford relief for the diseases of the throat, the disease of the heart was the cause of his death.

The writer could not be present at the funeral, but was informed that the services were conducted by Rev. J. H. W.

Died in Goldsboro, N. C. May 8, 1876, after a short illness, Mrs. Emily F. Loyless, wife of Mr G. W. Loyless in the 39th year of her age.

Sister Loyless—nee Westbrook—was married to Mr. Loyless in Dinwiddie County, Va. and was wisely married. A few years after her marriage to Mr. Lewis T. Hudson, she, with her husband, removed to Harnett county and settled near Shady Grove Church, not in the bounds of Hannover Circuit, some five miles from Richmond. Having joined her husband in [illegible] Sister Hudson was happily married to Mr. Loyless in [illegible] whom she came to Goldsboro, where their future place was destined to be her long home.

Sister Loyless was a woman of rare character, and was greatly devoted to the church and friends. She attended church on the Sabbath before her death, but was taken quite ill soon after her return home. She continued growing worse until about 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when she fell into a great peace. She had many and warm friends in her new home and will be greatly missed from her sphere of action in the community. Her [illegible] to the truth and sustaining power of holy religion is beyond all praise. May such blessing of Heaven come upon the husband, devoted son and sister [illegible]

Hair Dye.

A great deal of ingenuity has been expended in searching for a preparation that would restore gray hair to its original color without injury to the hair, quantities of Sugar of Lead have been used of late years for the composition of nine out of ten of the hair colorings so loudly advertised. Our duty to guard the public against noxious compounds, and to [illegible] affords us pleasure to recommend the preparation of Dr. Tutt. We know it to be harmless, as we have examined the formula made by the most noted chemists. It acts instantaneously and perfectly, it can not be detected by the closest observer. It is certainly a wonderful triumph of chemistry. adv 1-4

STENOGRAPHY TAUGHT.

I am a Methodist, and a practical Stenographer. I teach the art in all its Branches. Ministers should use the art in the preparation of their Sermons; Lawyers, in preparation of their Briefs; Doctors in recording their cases; Merchants in the private records of their business. Young men should learn it before going to College in order to take down the professor's lectures; and no young man should think of taking a course of Professional lectures without first learning this art. We want Stenographic Reporters to take down evidence in courts. Apply at once for particulars, terms, &c., of a course of lessons by mail.

C. C. HOWARD.

RALEIGH, 19th May, 1876

Mr. Harris:

Your favor of 9th inst, enclosing sample of pedigree of my beautiful Berkshire pig, "Pompey," was received this forenoon. The pedigree is quite interesting to read, and if you could see Pompey, you would say he justly merits such a pedigree. A more perfect specimen of a thoroughbred pig at his age I have never seen, and I have seen many noble specimens of swine exhibited at many Fairs in different States. Pompey is faultless in symmetry and development and as sensitive and kindly disposed as a well-nursed, amiable baby of the same age.

F. B. ARRINGTON.

My pigs are warranted to be of pure blood and good specimens of the breed. Prices $10 each, boxed and delivered on cars. Shipping age 2½ months. I have some how over age, which I will sell at same price. Address,

VALUABLE

Real Estate for Sale

—AT—

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 600 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-eastern N. C., under a high state of cultivation, fine bottom lands, with splendid, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,561 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovell's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, dwelling and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 350 acres, lying on Rutledge and Reed Gane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a lot which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I shall also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Real estate, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri-weekly line of four horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 19 miles

THE

Buffalo Lithia Waters

Remarkable relief of GRAVEL, and still more remarkable relief of DYSPEPSIA of thirty years standing—a man who for years lived upon Crackers and Tea now eats Bacon, Cabbage, Turnips, &c

Case of Capt. James Covington, of Halifax county, Virginia:

MT. LAUREL, HALIFAX Co., Va.
Feb. 9, 1876.

COL. T. F. GOODE:

Dear Sir.—Some eighteen months ago, I was attacked by a very painful affection of the bladder. Under the treatment of two physicians of high standing, I grew steadily worse, until my sufferings were beyond description, and I was compelled to resort to morphia almost constantly for relief. I was unable to give any attention to my business and had despaired of relief from any source, when in September last I was advised to try the Buffalo Lithia Water.

Though within less than a day's ride of the Spring, my condition was such that I was unable to get there, and consequently sent for the water and used it at home. After using it for a few days, I was so far relieved that I could do without the morphia, and continued to improve for some six weeks, when I had an attack of great violence from which I was relieved by the discharge of a large gravel, since which I have discharged three smaller ones, with but slight pain. I am now able to ride on horseback or to walk at pleasure, and I am now attending regularly to my business affairs.

For thirty years I had been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and for fifteen years I had been throwing up yellow water from my stomach; for five years I had been unable to eat meat or vegetables of any kind, and during that period I lived entirely upon tea and crackers, and other similar articles.

In taking the water for Gravel, I was relieved of the Dyspepsia. I now eat bacon, cabbage, turnips, and any thing else that I want, without inconvenience.

I believe the Buffalo Lithia Waters to be all that is claimed for them.

Very respectfully,
JAMES COVINGTON.

(In the above, Capt. Covington has added somewhat to his statement as first published.)

Statement of Dr. J. C. Coleman, of Halifax County, Virginia, a former surgeon in the U. S. Navy, as to the above case:

Medicine affording Capt. J. Covington no relief, I suggested to him a trial of the Buffalo Lithia Water, with the remarkable results which he has before stated. Neither his previous condition nor the extent of his benefit which he derived from the water is in the slightest degree over stated by him.

these two Churches fail to establish and maintain this relation, the sin of it must lie at the door of one of these Churches.

There is but one principle of communion in Christianity. St. John has stated it clearly and beautifully: "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another; and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin." This is the spirit and doctrine of true Christian communion.

The manner in which this spirit should manifest itself is also explicitly taught in the Scriptures: "With all lowliness and meekness, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

The head of this communion of saints is Christ; "from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

Said the Divine Master, "A new commandment I give unto you; that ye love one another." As He said this to His disciples, perhaps, naturally, they turned their eyes to look upon each other; but if so, he quickly recalled their attention again to Him. For He well knew that if their love for each other should depend on what of excellency they could discover in each other—if it had to be attracted and maintained by the grace that was in them—then reciprocal affection would lack the depth and strength He wished to give it. Accordingly He instantly supplies the moral element of power "such fraternal love would need, by adding: 'Love each other as I have loved you' [Applause.] Could a commandment be more touchingly and powerfully sanctioned? "As I have loved you." With these words He emphasises His command with the whole of His sublime life and sacrificial death! He pours into it His tears, His sorrows, His agony, His blood—the whole matchless eloquence of His own redeeming love!

O by what divine influence would our Master cement Christian hearts indissolubly together! Let us answer Him: The love of Christ constraineth us! This sentiment, which the fathers of Methodism, in all their heroic zeal, illustrated in the noblest manner; the sentiment that inspiration inscribed in pentecostal suffix upon the hearts of the Apostles; the sentiment sacred in all the history of the Church; to-day let us, in all true Christian fellowship, write upon our armour and proclaim as our sentiment: The love of Christ constraineth us!

With this inspiration in our hearts, and with this cry upon our lips, we tear down all hostile barriers. We trample under foot every obstacle to brotherly kindness. We consign bitterness and strife to oblivion. We crush the serpent of discord with our heel, and unite anew all the vast army of American Methodism in the celestial shout, "Glory to God in the highest! On earth, peace! Good will to men!" [Applause.]

The Master has ordained that this brotherly love shall be the great power of Christian testimony.

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

Our Christian power is wholly dependent upon our relation to Christ. It is not us that men feel; but Christ in us.

To show that we are Christ's is to acquire a title to human respect and an influence with the human conscience. And to love each other as brethren, is to illustrate a spirit so unworldly and unselfish that all men take cognizance of us that we have been with Jesus.

This love has always been the most powerful, because the most practical and obvious testimony which Christianity has given the world of its real, abiding, living, connection with the Divine Jesus. It is recognized, at once, as the spirit and power of Jesus in His disciples.

It was this love that astonished mankind in the early ages of the Christian Church, and confounded the foes of Christianity by a new weapon which they knew not how to resist.

Political and military resources were unable to cope with it. Kings were as impotent to crush it, as Pharoah was to arrest the power of God in Moses. Thrones fell before it.—Swords and spearpoints melted at its touch of divine fire. It was so far above the level of ordinary conception that history tells us the Pagans attributed it "to some secret spell or charm that had the power of inspiring violent and irresistible attachments." "Their teachers," exclaimed the heathen, "have acquired the wonderful art of persuading these Christians that they are all brethren." Alas! that this wonderful art should have been lost by Christian teachers. This sacrificial love, the most beautiful of all Christian graces, born in the bosom of the Father's glory, God's unchangeable gift to man, the music of the beatitudes, the sublimity of the cross, the power of forgiveness the invincible Spirit of the gospel—this holy love is the very life-fire of Christianity. Woe to the man who would quench it! He is worse than a hypocrite—he is a murderer. For it is written, "whosoever hateth his brother, is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him."

No matter whether priestly vestments adorn his hypocrisy, or ministerial ordination gives a deceitful sanctity to his name—"whosoever he be"—whether bishop elder, deacon, or laymen, he is an apostate, a traitor to his cause and his Master, and by the authority of Almighty God, he is pronounced a murderer.

Mr. President, perhaps I have already said enough for your patience, but indulge me for a moment longer, and I will be silent.

In this age of natural science, abounding in highways of intercommunication, and facilities for rapid interchange of thought, when words are electric sparks and a speaker's audience is the civilized world, it seems to me we are living in the Lord's great day of preparation.

Men who meant only to serve themselves, or to serve science, or to serve some industrial interest, have unwittingly served the Kingdom of Christ. "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

The currents and counter currents of human civilizations are rapidly mingling into one mighty river, deepening and broadening as it rolls its accumulating contributions of innumerable tributaries, under the direction of redeeming grace to that peaceful millennial sea whose waves of light are shining in the prophetic visions of the Bible.

In such an age, shall Christian Churches not comprehend the great day of God's opportunity? Shall they be discordant with each other? God forbid! Nay, rather let them bring their several divisions closer together and move forward as the Lord's host, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.

If fraternity is anything, it is at least an end of strife—it is peace, it is a delightful silence after a long battle; it is the calm after the noise of the waters and the tumult of the elements when the Master has said, "Peace, be still!" It is the end of the calamitous spectacle of Christian antogoulsms which only bad men applaud. It is exchanging discord for harmony, and broken and jarring strings for harps sweetly tuned and full of sacred music. Ah, brethren, in that eternity to which we are all rapidly advancing, when earthly enmities and all the fiery passions that consume human peace, shall have sunk into ashes, and petty strifes of time shall seem but miserable follies of which we are ashamed, how many men will then wish their bitter words had been unsaid?

We shall know better there. Contention will be over. When all the triumphant legion of God's mighty host shall celebrate redemption's eternal peace; when all sectarian distinction shall be forever obliterated and all discordant tongues shall be translated into the sweet language of Heaven: when we see no longer through a glass darkly, but face to face, no man shall cry I am of Paul, or I am of Cephas I am of the North, or I am of the South, but only I am of Christ, and in that clearer knowledge of sublime worship,

"We'll join the everlasting song,
And crown Him Lord of all!"

[Applause.]

If any reward shall be brighter, or any joy deeper than another, I think it will belong to those poor and outcast ones whom Methodist preachers have toiled to bring to Jesus. When England's colliers, New England's sons of toil, and the red man of the West, and the Africans of the South, shall join that mighty song, every division of Methodism will represent its noblest earthly work in that song of praise. (Applause.)

If Divine grace should touch my lips with hallowed fire to speak but a single word to all the hosts of American Methodism, I have asked myself the question, could I desire that word to be something new, strange, and more heavenly than any inspired utterance ever heard before? Through the ages God has sent angels, prophets, and apostles to bear his messages to men, and has ever spoken also by the mouth of his Son; but no angel, nor prophet, nor apostle; no, not even Jesus Christ himself, could teach me to utter any word, whose height, and breadth, and depth of sweetnes of meaning can surpass that word I proclaim as the gospel of fraternity,—CHRISTIAN CHARITY!

Other words there are, that are full of meaning, full of music, full of power; but in this word is condensed the divinest life ever lived upon earth; and when this word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld its glory, it was the glory of the only begotten of the Father—full of grace and truth! Other gifts of God to men are munificent, but this gift is unspeakable! Other virtues are illustrious in the armor of light. Faith is its shield; Hope is its helmet. Why is Charity not named among them? Because the celestial material of which the whole armor is made, is Charity, and because Charity is not for war only, but also for peace, not for time only, but also for eternity; and when the Christian armor shall have served its purpose of warfare upon earth, and be refined into raiment fit for the place and presence of the King in his beauty, its transfigured glory shall exceed all material splendor, and "it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but when He shall appear we shall be like Him," and our eternal completeness in Christ shall be this, that we are made "PERFECT IN LOVE!"

The speaker took his seat amid great and prolonged applause.

The Chair then said: We will now have the pleasure of receiving the address of Dr. Garland.

Dr. Garland, as he came forward, was received with hearty applause, and proceeded to address the Conference as follows:

ADDRESS OF L. C. GARLAND, L. L. D.

Mr. President and Beloved Fathers and Brethren of the Conference: I am very deeply sensible of the honor placed upon me by the Church South, in associating me among its fraternal delegation to this Conference, but I am painfully conscious of inability on my part to reflect back upon them any portion of the honor which they have put upon me. My lips have never been the seat of eloquence; my speech is common-place and lame, and I would be discouraged in addressing myself to my task, if it were not for that kind and cordial reception which I have received at your hands since my presence at the seat of the Conference. For this kind reception, you have my gratitude, and for it I give you the thanks of the entire Southern Church. [Applause.] And this courtesy on your part encourages me to hope that in the few remarks I propose to make upon this occasion, if I speak any word which you would prefer not to have spoken, you will think kindly of one who feels, as he stands here, that he must discharge his duty as unto God, and not as unto men.

Following, as I do, the clerical brethren associated with me in bearing to you fraternal greetings from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, there is no occasion for my saying much; and indeed so exhaustive have been their remarks, that there is but little left me to say. But coming, as I do, from the laity of the Church, I may be supposed to sympathize with them, in some respects, more closely than it is possible for the clergy to do. It may, therefore, not be uninteresting to you to receive from me a statement of the sentiments and feelings that prevail generally in the South, in regard to the subject of our mission. The regret that an occasion should ever have arisen for the division of the Methodist Church was, at the time, and still is profound and universal. [Applause]

This regret, however, did not extend beyond the occasion; because the occasion, as it presented itself to our apprehension, was of such a nature as to render division not only necessary, but desirable. In the Conference of 1844, the Northern and Southern delegates found themselves surrounded by a complication of difficulties out of which they saw no way of escape, but by separation. They came to this conclusion reluctantly, and were forced by necessity into the positions which they respectively assumed. Neither party could have receded from its position without infidelity to the section it represented. Methodism would have been seriously damaged, if not totally destroyed, in the one section or the other, had any other policy been adopted.

It is impossible for any unprejudiced and candid mind, to study the proceedings of that Conference, without a conviction that what was done by either party was done with a view to preserve the Church and to promote its best interests. Those holy men who figured in those transactions, maintained consciences void of offence to both God and man; and when they parted from each other in mutual respect and with regretful tears, they carried with them the hope that out of seeming evil great good mighty ultimately come. And, that the course they pursued did advance the interests of the Church in both sections cannot be doubted. Each portion threw off its clogs and impediments to progress; each brought itself more fully into sympathy with the popular mind; and the aggregate membership of the two Churches is to day larger than it would have been, if division had not taken place. The Northern people rallied around you in consequence of the division as they had never done before, and so the Southern people did around us. By this increase of local sympathy you have been greatly enlarged and so have we.

In this view of the matter, I assure you, that the enlightened portion of the Church, South, have always been disposed to think kindly of their brethren at the North, so far as the division itself is concerned. They never saw in the division, a ground for hostile feeling. They never dreamed that an unpleasant antagonism would spring up between the two sections in consequence of it. Contrarywise, as division had removed all the elements of strife, and reduced either party to homogeneity, they expected that the two sections of the Church would move on, each in the accomplishment of its own mission, in its own way, not only without jostling and jarring with each other, but even with a warmer Christian sympathy, than had previously existed between them for several years.

If, therefore, an estrangement has taken place, it must have arisen out of events that transpired subsequently to the division.

That difficulties in the way of cordial fraternity have existed, and still do exist, cannot be denied. The circumstances that surround us to-day are but too conclusively an evidence of the fact.

Of these difficulties themselves, and of the modes in which they may be removed, it does not become me to speak. But this I can say: we of the South are anxious that they should be removed; of which disposition we have given satisfactory proof by the appointment of a commission, to meet a similar one on your part, if it shall be your pleasure to organize it, invested with full powers to inquire into the grounds of all complaints, the nature of all grievances, real or imaginary, and to ascertain the terms on which there may be a full restoration of a real and heartfelt fraternity. [Applause.]

And I will say further, that it will bring a reproach upon both you and us as Christians, as Methodists, and as Patriots, if a satisfactory solution of all difficulties shall not be reached [Applause]

To us as Christians, because we will show ourselves destitute of the spirit of Christianity. This spirit is one of meekness, forbearance, forgiveness, peace, and love. Where this spirit exists, estrangement cannot be prolonged, and when it is wanting in those professing it, incalculable injury is inflicted upon the cause of Christ. If inconsistency of conduct in an individual, professing Christianity, is a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to all about him, how much more so is it in Christian bodies, which are supposed to be less under the influence of the evil tempers and passions, which lead individuals astray, and more under the control of the principles of wisdom, and justice, and truth.

To us as Methodists, because it will be a repudiation of the ties that should bind us together. We are substantially one in doctrine, in polity, and usages. We have a common origin: and down to the General Conference of 1844, the last held by the united Churches, we had a common history, and a common heritage in the great names that have adorned the Church.

And what would our illustrious founder, whose last letter to Mr. Asbury contained a charge to maintain the unity of Methodism throughout the world, [applause,] think of us, were he alive, if we do not compose our strifes, and dwell peacefully together in the bonds of Christian sympathy and love?

And as Patriots how vast is the responsibility resting upon us to restore, as far as power lies in us, a kind political feeling between the two sections of the country, so lately pitted against each other in the struggles of an internecine war! It is useless to preach unless we practice. And what influence can we exert in that direction, if we fail to restore friendly relations between ourselves? If the two Churches could bring about the entente cordiale, would accomplish more toward the restoration of good feeling between the two sections, North and South, than a score of Centennial Expositions.

Politics appear to me to be a centrifugal force, tending continually to engender sectional strife and to the rending asunder the bonds of civil society; and where shall we find a force to antagonize it—a centripetal force to draw together and cement in one, the disunited parts, if not in the grand unity of a common Christian faith. [Applause.]

We do therefore, sincerely desire the restoration of good feeling between the two Churches upon a basis derogatory to the honor of neither. [Applause.] We know our own people, they do not expect, much less do they demand of you any sacrifice of right, duty, or of honor. ["Hear," "hear!" and "applause."] in adjusting the difficulties between us; and we will not believe that you will demand any such sacrifice of us. [Applause.]

In this matter may we both be guided by that wisdom which is from above, and not only in this, but matters that may come before you as a Conference, may your deliberations be overruled for the good of the Church, and the glory of its Divine Head. [Applause.]

D. A. Whedon presented the following resolution, which was read by the Secretary and unanimously adopted.

RESOLVED, That we welcome among us the distinguished representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, the Rev. James A. Duncan, D. D., and L. C. Garland, L. L. D., greatly regretting, at the same time, that their associate, the venerable Lovick Pierce, D. D. could not be present, whom for his eminent character and services, it would have specially delighted us to receive; and we heartily recognize their coming as the harbinger of a more intimate union between the two chief branches of Methodism. We have listened with great satisfaction to their words of love, in response to the fraternal greetings extended to us by our General General Conference at its last session, and we will give early and most considerate attention to their communications.

John W. Kay suggested that the Conference unite in singing one verse of the hymn, "Blessed be the tie that binds

Our hearts in Christian love."

The Conference arose and complied with the suggestion most heartily.

C. B. Fisk moved that a Committee of seven be appointed, to whom shall be referred the question of the appointment of a commission corresponding to the commission provided for by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South

The motion prevailed.

A Widely Applicable Remedy.

Few remedies are applicable to such a wide range of disorders as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and this not because it has special properties adapted to the cure of each—such a pretense would be manifestly absurd—but on account of its wonderfully improving effect upon the general tone of the system, and its alterative action upon the organs of nutrition, secretion and discharge. Besides its well known properties as a remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers, dyspepsia, constipation torpidity of the liver, general debility, urinary and uterine difficulties, it invariably proves to be highly serviceable in overcoming neurosis, hypochondria, rheumatism, insomnia, and many other disorders and disabilities originating in poverty or impurity of the blood, nervous weakness or over-excitement, or an imperfect performance of the physical functions.

INDISPUTABLE EVIDENCE.

ST. ELMO, ILL., July 8, 1871.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought, an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they are claimed to do. I will only mention one remarkable, though I can give you dozens). Henry Kouter, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects even seen. His face was full blown of sores, scales and eruptions without end, extending from the crown of his head to the bottom of his feet, and his body was completely covered with blotches. Nothing that he took seemed benefit it in particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions are gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Mears. Boschee & Co. druggists, of this place, are selling Dr. Pierce's medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN, Agt. Am. Exp. Co.

SKETCHES OF THE PIONEER METHODISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

BY REV. H. F. HUDSON.

NUMBER 9.

Methodism introduced into Bladen—Anson, South western Circuit—John Young—Conference at Salisbury—Obituaries. Philip Bruce.

In my last article I had traced the course of Methodism Southward by way of Onslow county and Wilmington down into Charleston, S. C. It soon turned its course again and quarter back towards the Northeast along the fertile valleys of the Cape Fear and Little Pee Dee Rivers. As early as 1787 entered into Bladen county, when the Bladen circuit was formed, having thirty members. Daniel Combs being its first preacher.—The Bladen circuit grew rapidly under the faithful labors of such men as Jonathan Bird, John Ahair, Wm. Ellamy, Joshua Cannon, Samuel Ellay and others; so that in five years after its formation, it had the statistical strength of four hundred and sixty seven members.

ARCHIBALD ROBINSON was a native of Bladen county, born in 1794. He was of respectable parents, by whom he was early trained to be a strict observer of morality, which appears under the blessings of a kind Providence, to have been the means of his conversion. He joined the Virginia Conference in 1818, and traveled the Guilford, Salisbury, and New River circuits. In all these fields of labor he was quite useful, much beloved, and did much to build up the Church. He died while on the New River circuit in 1820, a very triumphant death.

Through the valley of the Great Pee Dee River, Methodism passed up from the South into Anson county, N. C. Anson circuit appears on the Conference roll in the year 1788. David Haggard was its first preacher. The next year John Ellis and Jonathan Jackson labored on this circuit, and had a very prosperous year, reporting a membership of 504.

JOHN WHITE, who entered the Tennessee, and labored until his death. He was born in Anson county, N. C., in 1804. "He was a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," as the Minutes, "in the places where he traveled; and his name will long be dear to many of the people." After a long speech failed, one of his friends requested him "to raise his hands if he had gained the victory." He did so, and without a groan left the world in triumph. He expired on the 1st day of August, 1825.

Methodism, though it is essentially immersional in its tendencies, has less has ever been to spread rapidly along river lines, chiefly because, we suppose, such valleys were more densely populated than others, and the aggressive spirit of Methodism loves to plunge into the most part of the spiritual welfare. Following this inclination, we find it going up Broad River, and entering into Lincoln and Catawba counties, as early as 1790; and spreading thence through Cleaveland and Rutherford counties as far up as the foot of the Blue Ridge.

Thus far I have traced the geographical lines of Methodism through North Carolina. We have seen it start from Halifax and spread Westward to the Tennessee line. Eastward to the Albemarle Sound—then it struck across the State Southward, skipping over the larger portion of the State until it reached the Wilmington region, then going down into Charleston, S. C., and gaining a base of operation there, starts back Northward, and spreads along through the border counties of the South and South western portions of North Carolina. The wave of Methodism coming from Virginia meets that coming from South Carolina, and they mingle along the bounds of the Cape Fear River, and that of the Yadkin and its mountain branches. In ten years, Methodism had erected a line of Gospel batteries all around the State, though the larger portion of North Carolina, especially its interior territory, was as yet unoccupied by the Methodists.

Having mapped out the general outlines of Methodism through the State, I shall be obliged to refer occasionally to localities already noticed in my previous articles, in order to show its further growth and spread through the State.

In 1785, as stated in another article, the first Conference ever held in North Carolina was at the residence of Richard Green Hill in Franklin county. A brief account of this Conference has already given. But before passing from this locality, I will give a little sketch of an old veteran of the cross who did much to build up Methodism in that country. His name is familiar to many as the great grandfather of Bro. S. H. Young of Raleigh, to whom I am indebted for the facts given in this sketch. John Young was a native of Virginia—born May the 10th 1747—emigrated to North Carolina in 1775, settled in Halifax county where he heard John Easter preach, probably the first Methodist sermon he heard in the State. In 1785 he settled in Franklin county, N. C., his home being in a half mile of Hilliard's Chapel. At this church he united with a Society of nine, which soon grew to the strength of eighty members. He preached in this chapel nearly fifty Christmas days, never failing to meet his appointments during all these years. He had these appointments in Franklin, Granville and Warren. He was ordained by Bishop Asbury. His house was the home of the Itinerants, from this to this day, his son John Wesley Young occupying the old homestead, and extending the same hospitality to the preachers dispensed by his father. His descendants, down to the fourth generation, have lived, labored and died in the Methodist Church—not one, as yet, having died out of the Church. He lived to the ripe old age of 90 years—professed sanctification and exemplified its beauty in his life. He was an earnest, animated and popular preacher, being called upon oftentimes to go to the distance of twenty miles to preach funerals.

This year (1785) dates the beginning of many important things interwoven with the general economy of Methodism. Such as the printing of the Conference Minutes, the spreading on the Conference journal short obituaries of deceased preachers—the establishment of the Presiding Elder [illegible]. I need not stop here to comment on the vast utility of these things, they are proved by time to be of the greatest value. In 1786, [illegible] was held in Salisbury, beginning on the 21st of February, Bishop Asbury presiding. This was the second Conference held in N. C, and the first one in the town of Salisbury. The usual Conference business was [illegible] and harmoniously transacted. The membership of North Carolina was [illegible] down at this Conference to 4,230—a goodly number to be gathered in 10 years out of a field [illegible] a moral wilderness and filled with [illegible] difficulties. Some preachers spoke very forcibly in these Annual Conferences. One is, the [illegible] notices of the deceased preachers. They are models of brevity. To the question:

"Who have died this year?"

the following response spread the Minutes:

1. Jeremiah Lambert—an elder; six years in the work; a man of sound judgment, clear understanding, good preacher, divine piety, and very useful, and holy; diligent in life, and of a death much esteemed in the [illegible] and justly lamented in his circuit. We do not sorrow as other men do, but rejoice in hope, but expect short time to meet with him and all those who rest from their labors."

2. "James Thomas—a pious young man of good gifts, useful and acceptable, blameless in his life, and much lamented in his death."

Here is brevity for your long worded preachers and obituary writers. But let us come back and take up the thread of our historical narrative. Lambert, although so pious, gifted as a preacher, and devoted to his work, died so poor that the preachers had to make up a purse to pay his funeral expenses. It was during this year that Methodism was introduced into Kentucky by James Haw and Benjamin Ogden; and the work began in Georgia by Allen the year before, was firmly established by Thomas Humphries and John Major. Of Major, Jesse Lee says: "His abilities as a preacher were but small, but in exhortation he was powerful and pathetic; what he lacked in words, he generally made up in tears—(a good make up) sometimes he wept from the beginning to the end of his discourse. He was often called the weeping prophet." Major traveled in North Carolina in 1781 on the New River circuit. One of his fellow laborers, says Stevens, describes him as armed with the irresistible eloquence of tears;" and so beloved by the people that "they would have risked their lives to rescue him from injury or injury." "I have seen," he adds, "an audiences sit quietly and listen to a masterly discourse without a tear to moisten the eye of an individual, and then Major, by an exhortation of five minutes, would produce such an effect that all seemed to melt before him." He was a native of Virginia—died in Georgia 1788—"a shining witness of perfect love."

At the Salisbury Conference, Philip Bruce received his first appointment as a presiding Elder over a District in North Carolina.

PHILIP BRUCE

was almost peerless among the pioneer preachers of North Carolina and Virginia. He was born in 1755 in Cleaveland county, N. C., near King's Mountain. He was of Huguenot descent, the original family name was DeBruce, but was changed by his Scotch teacher into Bruce. In early youth he embraced religion, joined the Methodists, was instrumental in the conversion of his father and mother, and was licensed to exhort about the beginning of the Revolution. The tories captured him during the war, and "were about to hang him to the nearest tree, when on examining his pockets, they found that he had license as an exhorter. The captain released him upon the ground that it would never do to hang a priest." He was at the battle of King's Mountain acting in the capacity of a chaplain. The name of Bruce appears on the Minutes as early as 1781. He did a vast amount of ministerial work in North Carolina in those days that tried the souls of men. In the flush morning of his vigorous youth he traveled circuits and Districts in our State reaching from the seashore to the mountains. His first circuit was New Hope, 1781; then successively, he traveled Marsh, Yadkin and New River. In 1786 he was appointed as Presiding Elder over a District embracing Bertie, Camden, Banks and Portsmouth.—The next year he was appointed to the same work. The next six years he was Presiding Elder in Virginia. In 1803, he is returned to North Carolina as Presiding Elder on the Salisbury District, which then embraced Caswell, Haw River, Guilford, Franklin, Yadkin, Salisbury, Morganton and Swannoa (Buncombe.) In 1810–11, he traveled as Presiding Elder the Newberne District, which then embraced all of North Carolina east of the Wilmington Railroad.—Thus, it will be seen that Philip Bruce was one of the most laborious founders of Methodism in North Carolina, bearing her standard faithfully over circuits and districts, which extended through the entire length of the State, and filling all these important and difficult fields of toil with honor to himself and great profit to others.—As a Presiding Elder, a circuit preacher, a counselor in the Annual and General Conferences, he stood in the front rank of Methodism. It is stated on good authority, that on two occasions, he lacked only three votes of being elected Bishop. "He possessed a philosophic mind well stored with useful knowledge, united fine conversational powers with polished manners, and was quite marked in his personal appearance.' His sermons were generally short and delivered with much zeal and energy. In one of his Episcopal tours, Bishop Asbury passed through the town of Winchester, and as usual the good old man had sent ahead of him an appointment for preaching. In the afternoon the Bishop remarked to Bruce in a playful manner: "Now, Philip, I intend to pile up the brush to night and you must set it on fire." "Asbury preached a plain, practical sermon, and when he sat down Bruce arose and delivered a most powerful exhortation, which told with overwhelming effect on the congregation. The Bishop's brush heap blazed at the touch of Philip's torch."—DR BENNETT.

Being worn down by the labors of thirty six years in the Itinerancy, he reluctantly superannuated in 1817, and moved out to Elk River, Tenn., and spent his latter days with his aged mother and his brethren living in that State. Not long before his death, a communication was received from him in answer to a solicitation of the Virginia Conference for him to visit them again, in which he used these words: "Many affectionate ties bind me to the Virginia Conference.—Your expressions of good will have awakened the tenderest friendships in my soul; but it is very probable that I shall never see you again; for though in my zeal I sometimes try to preach, my preaching is like old Priam's dart, thrown by an arm enfeebled with age. Indeed, my work is well nigh done, and I am waiting in glorious expectation for my change to come; for I have not labored and suffered for naught, nor followed a cunningly devised fable." This expectation he realized with triumph on the 10th of May, 1826, when surrounded by his friends at the house of his brother, Mr. Joel Bruce, Giles county, Tenn."—Minutes for 1827.

CHILDHOOD.

NUMBER 7.

"I stood upon the threshhold of manhood and cried for the years gone by—they came not."—Ossian.

He must have been singularly unfortunate in childhood, or singularly the reverse in after life, who does not look back upon its scenes, its sports and pleasures with regret—who does not fondly wish "for even its sorrows back again."

The wisest and happiest of us may occasionally detect this feeling in our bosoms, especially when we feel weighed down with the sorrows and cares of our maturer years.

This seems to have been the feeling of one who after years of absence, years filled with the sad bitter experiences of life—has been permitted to come back again to her childhood's home, and seated in the old family arm chair, her heart oppressed and desolate with an accumulation of life sorrows, deceived and disappointed with the hollow-hearted friendship of the world, the interested sympathy, the inconstant love of friends, she recalls the years long gone by and with longings unutterable exclaims.

Backward, turn backward O time in your flight
Make me a child again, just for to night,
Mother come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart as of yore,

Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair
Over my slumbers, your loving watch keep,
Rock me to sleep mother—rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward O tide of years,
I am so weary of toil and of tears,
Toil without recompense—tears all in vain,
Take them and give me my childhood again.

I have grown weary of dust and decay,
Weary of flinging my soul wealth away,
Weary of sowing for others to reap,
Rock me to sleep mother, rock me to sleep

Over my faint heart in days that are flown
No love like mother love ever was shown,
No other worship abides and endures
Faithful, unselfish and patient like yours.

None like a mother can charm away pain
From the sick soul and world-weary brain,
Slumbers soft and calm o'er my heavy lids creep
Rock me to sleep mother, rock me to sleep.

Such "heart utterings" will find a hearty response in many a manly bosom. There are few of us indeed but look back to our childhood whims, follies, petty cares and exaggerated delights with reccollections which to us are sometimes unaccountably dear, and he who feels thus cannot contemplate, unmoved the joys and sports of childhood, and gazes on the care free brow the rapture beaming countenance with the melancholly awe which the lovely victims of consumption inspired when seemingly unconscious of danger they talk of the future as though it was coming richly freighted with life, joys and treasures for them.

We may feel that we are in possession of a great mystery of which happy children have no conception nor suspicion—we know something about what the life is—on the stage of which they are about to enter, and we know further, whether it smiles or frowns upon them its brightest glances will be cold and dull compared with these under which they are now basking.

There is another painful yet pleasing and encouraging light in which this subject may be received. The morning of life is bright and joyous, but it is soon over, its brightness soon begins to fade, its cup of joy soon is mingled with grief and sorrow, and we find too soon alas! that 'man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward.'

It is not strange therefore that we turn back with unutterable longings to the days of our childhood pleasures. Instead however of turning back—(for we can only do so in imagination)—I cannot well resist the inclination from this stand point to look forward, and from the contemplation of childhood on earth turn to the contemplation of childhood in heaven. O! who can describe the bliss of heaven's childhood! Children are there, thousands and millions of them. In the worlds statistics it is estimated that nearly one third of the whole human race die in childhood.

The Saviour while on earth manifested such an interest in and affection for children, that we are warranted in believing that children are an object of His special care and attention in heaven, that they possibly are near his throne the recipients of his most gracious dispensations; that "He has given his angels charge concerning them," and that on that mighty swelling song of praise that unceasingly rises up before the mediatorial throne "like the sound of many waters,' probably the sweetest note will be wafted along by the untiring symphonies of infant choristers, One of our poets sings.

Millions of infant songsters in robes of white—
Sing praises around the Saviour's throne.
Angels cease—and waiting listen.
O! the song is sweeter than their own,
Faith hears the rapturous chorus
As she upward turns her ear,
And disdaining earth she longs,
To fold her wings and enter there.

Such reflections as these—for they are not mere speculations,—ought to afford comfort and consolation to all who have been bereaved of their children. We are wont to speak of our dear little ones who have been removed from us thus early—"that we lost them"—that "we had the great misfortune to be bereft of our child," etc. These declarations and repinings are not in accordance with the teachings of the Bible—nor are they reconcilable with the faith of the gospel. The word declares "of such is the kingdom of heaven," while faith looking beyond the confines of time would contemplate their state as far above every disturbing element of earth—safely domiciled above the skies. No mystery hangs over their future there. No clouds arise to darken their horizon or shut out the resplendent light of the great Sun of Righteousness—no snares are there spread for their feet, no impending danger lurks in their pathway ahead, no sorrow or affliction or death awaits them there, no orphanage in heaven, happy in their innocence here. O, who can measure their bliss when redeemed from Adam's transgression!—they there present a pure and spotless record—no actual transgression, no malice, hatred, envy or unbelief ever darkened their childhood history, taken from the "evil to come" before it came—beloved by the Saviour on earth, welcomed by Him in heaven! O, they are not lost—the dispensation which removed them from us is not an unfortunate one. "When Christ shall appear again the second time, these also shall appear with Him in glory."

Messrs Editors, I am done. I love children—and therefore will offer no apology for the length of these remembers on "childhood."

If they will awaken a deeper interest in and a greater affection for children on the part of parents, Sunday School teachers, educators, the church and its ministry, I will rejoice as "one reaping great spoil," and when life's duties are done and the green grass waves over my grave, let children gather around my quiet resting place and remember him who sleeps beneath as one who while living loved them and labored for their happiness. It will give me sweeter rest.

A Letter From Mt. Airy

THE REVIVAL—THE CHRISTIAN WORLD AND BAPTIST PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES—INFANT BAPTISM.

MESSRS EDITORS: A few lines more from this mountainous country for the columns of your paper, if you please. Some may think I am seeking news-paper notoriety. Not so. I write from a sense of duty, hoping to do some good, especially so far as our people in this surrounding country are concerned.

Our second quarterly meeting is past. It was held at a church in sight of this place. Bro. Brinton was with us, and preached with his usual simplicity. [illegible] He is a good man in labors more abundant,' and, under God, is doing much for the cause of Christ on his district. For a little over three weeks, I protracted the meeting. Much interest was manifest. Fourteen souls were happily converted to God. Twenty were received into the Church—four having been previously converted and three removed from other sections of the Church. Eleven adults and four infants were baptized. Others will be. There was some religious excitement. Like that great and good man, Dr. Talmage, I approve of this with the simple qualification he makes—"only take care that it be religious." Bros. Creasy and Maness were with me a few times and did faithful work.

Last night the meeting was transferred to Mt Airy with very encouraging prospects.

At 2½ o'clock P. M, yesterday nearly all of Mt. Airy and many from the vicinity were all astir and off to the Ararat. For what? To witness a miracle performed? Well, yes, no—only to see two persons immersed by a Methodist minister who never did the like before.

My letter published in the Advocate in March, caused a stir and a flutter in certain quarters. One Bro. rises to explain. The ground has been (?) shifted. It is not maintained that "the whole world is coming over to the Baptist Church." Only "the Christian world is gradually drifting into the channel of Baptist principles and practices!"—a distinction without a difference. It is the same idea expressed in different language, with a qualification that is hardly entitled to that name. So much for a difference in phraseology. If the position is true, "the Christian world" must have been very far off from those "principles and practices" and the "gradually drifting" process a remarkably gradual one. But little headway has been made during the past eighteen centuries.

To-day "the Christian world" is drifting farther and farther from those "principles and practices" in many particulars. This is only an affirmation. I do not propose to discuss the question now and here. It is asked and demanded, "where is infant baptism plainly commanded in the word of God?—the same old "cut and dried" question which has been asked and answered a thousand times. The question is not properly put. It is not, Where is the command for infant baptism? but where is the command forbidding it? If children were not to enjoy the same privileges and Church relationship under the gospel dispensation that they did under the Jewish, why did Christ not forbid it? And if they were not secured the same privilege and relationship in his day and under his own approval, then where did the practice of infant baptism begin? In what century? In what country? By whom was the innovation made? Why have these questions not been settled long since? Infants are subjects of redeeming grace. No one, unless he be a weak proclestinarian, will deny this. They were embraced in the Abrahamic covenant. It cannot be denied that upon the circumcision of the males, all the children, male and female, were brought under the provisions of the covenant made with Abraham. If this is not so, then females would be excluded from temporal or national privileges. That covenant is still in force. In Gal. III. 7, 8, 9 St Paul says: "know ye therefore that they which is of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." This shows that the privileges extended to the Jewish people under the Abrahamic covenant extends to all believers under the gospel covenant. This cannot be denied without contradicting the apostle. So that the privileges secured to children under the Abrahamic covenant by circumcision without faith, is secured to them under the gospel covenant by baptism without faith (on their part.) Otherwise, it would be very unreasonable to suppose that the Jewish parents would change from one dispensation to another—from the Mosaic to the Christian—when the latter refused to grant to their children privileges which they enjoyed under the former. Besides, the promise of the prophet Joel to the Israelites that God would "pour his Spirit upon all flesh," St. Peter on the day of Pentecost says, "is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

But it is flatly affirmed that faith is required in order to baptism and Church relationship. Infants cannot believe. Therefore they are excluded. Would not then a lack of faith exclude them from heaven? Upon the ground of this argument it would. For while it is said, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," it is also said, in the same connection, "he that believeth not shall be damned." Here is where the argument leads. But its advocates shrink back from the result horrified! "Oh! no, we do not believe that," it is said. "We believe all little children go to heaven. Yes, God bless them. we believe that. We cannot believe that a lack of faith would exclude any of them from a place in the paradise of God. "For of such is the kingdom of God." Then why should a lack of faith exclude them from baptism and Church relationship and not from heaven? Did the children of Abraham believe in Abraham's circumcision and the privileges of the Jewish Church [illegible] of the Jewish temporal kingdom? And yet they were not excluded from either. We cannot deny the one without denying the other. If this rite did not follow in the room of circumcision as it banished away with the sacrificial or ceremonial of the Jewish dispensation, where is the command annulling the one? and where did the other originate? But it is said the question is not "put beyond controversy!" However well it may be authenticated by the Scripture and the ancient practice of the Church, it is still a subject of "controversy with some and perhaps always will be. Pray, what theological question in all the catalogue is "put beyond controversy?"

The rite of infant baptism is more plainly taught and commanded in the sacred Scriptures than many other religious duties we cherish and hold sacred. But if we never discharged any religious duties, except those plainly commanded in the word of God, we would expunge a great many from our religious creeds or catalogue of duties. "Go teach—disciple—make Christians of all nations baptizing them," is a plainer command for infant baptism than can possibly be produced from the Bible for family prayer, female communion, or for immersion as a mode of baptism. Recognizing the fact of infant baptism and Church relationship of infants the divine teacher said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Hence:

"We bring them, Lord, in thankful bands,
And yield them up to thee;
Joyful that we ourselves are thine,
Thine let our off-spring be."
"Thine Lydia sanctified her house,
When she received the word:
Thine the believing jailer rose
His household led to the Lord.
Thou Lord of saints, eternal King,
Thine ancient truth embrace:
To thee their infant offspring bring
And humbly claim the grace."

I think it would be well to publish something on this and kindred subjects more frequently. Many of our people want instruction upon them.

Yours truly,

JAMES WILLSON.

A Biographical Dictionary of Methodism

MESSRS EDITORS: The Methodist Church has not been behind any other denomination in keeping its members supplied with a suitable literature.—It may be safely asserted that no other denomination has made history as fast as the Methodist. Their movements, from the beginning, have been very rapid. It has been "war times" all the way, and the circuit rider has been the mounted van-guard, ever pressing close upon the enemies front of flank, as the situation required.—Methodism has had to fight desperately for every inch of ground occupied. It had to fight, not only false theories against religion but false theories professing to be in favor of religion. Other denominations united with the world to beat back the onward tide of this new movement in the Church of God, as it swept over the world. The contest has been sharp, and the strong entrenchments of old customs and prejudices have had to be stormed and taken, by movements the most rapid and powerful. Such work was calculated to develop talent, and raise a multitude of distinguished men. A little over a century of such work has called forth such a variety of ministerial character as will hardly be found to have been developed in the same length of time in any other denomination.

While history is being made it should be preserved. One of the great needs of Methodism now is a Biographical Dictionary. Let me suggest that the next General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, appoint a committee to take the work in hand: to correspond with all the other branches of Methodism in the world. Ask each Annual Conference to appoint one, or more, to gather the materials in the Conference to which they belong. Ask the Northern and British Conferences to do the same.—Let one agent be appointed by the Southern General Conference, one by the Northern, and one by the British Conferences to form a committee to digest the plan, and determine the place or places of publication. To make the work a thorough one let it contain not only a sketch of the most distinguished itinerants, but also of distinguished laymen, like Carvasso, the great class leader, or Trusten Polk, or Hon. Robert Baker, or Col Jas. M Chambers or D'Arcy Paul, or the eloquent Thos. Low. Among the females of the Church, such as Hannah Ball, Eliza Cook and Mrs Fletcher.

What a glorious constellation of names may be collected, if this work is taken in hand, in true Methodistic style, and carried to completion! The glory of the Church militant consists in the sum of its good deeds: let us preserve a record, not only of the deeds, but also of the names of those who performed them.

The Centennial Exhibition

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

THE EXHIBITION OPENS AT 9 A. M. There are special gates distributed at different points intended for visitors who pay, for exhibitors, for complimentary tickets, for workmen and for wagons. Visitors pay fifty cents each on entering the grounds, which entitles them to a free entrance to each and every building and to remain during the entire day. This also secures admission to the Gilmore Concerts in the Main Building, the Electric Organ Concert in Horticultural Hall, and the special exhibitions of fruit and vegetables in Agricultural Hall. On entering from Belmont Avenue visitors will find, free of charge, all necessary conveniences for washing, dressing, etc., etc.; also barber shops, boot blacks, etc. At different points in each building water is supplied gratuitously, and restaurants can be found in every direction. Over three thousand seats have already been placed in the grounds, and others are to be added as required. Rolling Chairs, a great convenience, can be procured at any of the gates, and visitors carried about from one building to another, and through the buildings, for a moderate charge. A narrow gauge railroad runs all around the inside of the grounds for the small sum of five cents, so that every facility and convenience is at the service of visitors.

EXPENSES.

Do not be alarmed at the reports of high charges for board and lodging in Philadelphia; a careful examination of the subject settles the question that good board can be had from $6 per week up to $5 per day. Within sight of the Exhibition there are good accommodations for $1 per day, that is, a comfortable bedroom: breakfast can be had outside the grounds for fifty cents, and a good dinner inside for $1. All that is necessary is that the visitor examines the bill of fare and selects according to the prices therein given. At the dairy good milk, cream, etc., are furnished reasonably. An estimate of expenses for one person should not exceed from $15 to $25 per week, including a daily visit to the Exhibition.

HOW TO SPEND A WEEK PROFITABLY.

Take a room near the grounds and commence on the first day by entering on Belmont Avenue, turn to the right and you are in the Main Building, with a day's work before you and a trip around the world. Still keeping to the right, we enter Chili and the Argentine Republic, which with Peru and the Orange Free State form the first section, and contain much that is of interest. Then the old nations of China and Japan, with curious exhibits of bronzes, straw work, silk and mattings. Next Denmark, then Turkey and Egypt, followed by the beautiful pavilion of Spain and the exhibits of Russia, Austria, Hungary and the German Empire united, and one-fourth of the day's work has been accomplished. We are now in the centre of the building, and if tired can rest and listen to the music of Gilmore's Band or push on to the exhibits of our own country, which occupy fully one-fourth of the Main Building. On arriving at the extreme end, go up in the gallery and view the wonderful vista which extends for nearly half a mile before the eye. Now it is time to dine, and as the Restaurant Lafayette is the nearest we will dine there and spend an hour under the shade of the trees. Returning, we leave the United States and passing through Mexico, The Netherlands, Brazil, Belgium and Switzerland, reach France and England, where hours can be spent with pleasure and profit. Then passing through Canada, Australia, Sweden, Norway and Italy, we have reached our starting point, and the bell chimes give notice that it is six o'clock, and time to close. Tired we go to our hotel for a rest, and then if so inclined spend the evening at Operti's Garden, or go down in the city and visit Independence Hall, and thus has passed the first day. The second day should be devoted to the Machinery Hall, the Shoe and Leather Building, the Glass Factory, and the buildings in the vicinity. Dine at the French Restaurant, but look at prices. Bear in mind that two persons can dine comfortably on what is ordered for one. The third day visit the Art Gallery and its annexes, the Photographic Gallery and the Carriage, with a look at Judges' Hall. Dine at the German Restaurant, spend the evening at Thomas' Concert. The fourth day can be pleasantly spent by a visit to the Government Building, the Women's Pavilion, the Model of Paris, the State Buildings, and a dinner at the restaurant on George's Hill. The fifth day can be given to the Horticultural and Agricultural Buildings, with a dinner at the grand American Restaurant. Devote the sixth day to an examination of the smaller buildings, and dine at the Southern Restaurant. Then, take a boat up the Schuylkill, visit the Zoological Gardens, Fairmount Park, the Wissahickon, and spend the evening at the Academy of Fine Arts, dining at Strawberry Mansion or Proskauer's, and the week has passed with both pleasure and profit.

INTERNATIONAL IMPORTANCE.

Sir Charles Reed, of London, in an address delivered to the Judges selected for the Exhibition, expressed the great interest taken by foreign nations in its success, and, in closing, addressed General Hawley, President of the Commission, as follows:

"I must congratulate you, sir, in being at the head of an Exhibition unparalleled in the history of international displays, so far as my observation has extended. I was upon the jury at the London Exhibition in the year 1851, and have visited every European exhibition held since that time, and I say without hesitation that, so far as I have yet been able to examine it, the display you have made in Fairmount Park eclipses everything I have seen. It may be fitly compared to a great feast—an intellectual feast—and I believe it will greatly advance, not only the material position of our countries, but that it will afford to the world a guaranty that in gathering us here together you have the interests of peace at heart, and that this will contribute to cement the good feeling at present existing between the nations represented here."

LOCOMOTION.

The arrangements in this city for travel are most convenient. The horse cars run in every direction, and for the small charge of seven cents one can go from end to end of the city, and a system of exchange tickets cars can be taken crossing the city, so that almost any point can be reached. For small parties wagonettes have been introduced, which can be secured for fifty cents for each person.

THE CITY.

There is much to be seen in Philadelphia; Independence Hall, Carpenters Hall, Girard College, the Mint, the Gaols, the Public Buildings, Laurel Hill Cemetery, Academy of Science, Academy of Fine Arts, are all worthy of a visit.

SUMMARY.

While enough work has been given a visitor to occupy a week, yet it can all be seen in half that time in a cursory manner, and of course, at a less expense, but the reader may rest assured, in whatever section of our country he may be, that it will pay him well to save money enough to make one visit to the International Exhibition, and if possible, to bring his family. The advantages gained will amply pay for all economies in saving, and the writer feels sure that every one influenced to make the visit will never regret it.

Prayer for the Young.

It is generally conceded that the young are the hope of the Church, the State and the world. As are the youth of the present, such will be the men and women of the future. All, then, that we hope for in the future, is now embryo in the youth. If the youth of the present are wise, the men and women of the future will be wise If the youth of the present are pure, the men and women of the future will be pure. If the youth of the present are good, the men and women of the future will also be good. No one can tell the great difference between a good future and a bad future. Words are inadequate to describe it. The difference is infinite, and in that difference all our interests are involved. Outside of those interests life is a blank—a failure. All of life is included within them. How important, then, that the young should be wise, pure and good. Let them, the young be a burden upon the hearts of Christians, and while you employ other instrumentalities for their culture, pray for them with all your heart.

It is a lamentable fact that many place too light an estimate upon the sentiments and practices of the young. They seem to think that there is, at least, a moderate degree of recklessness and immoral sentiments to which every youth must fall heir. This is a mistake; there is room for the outgushing of youthful exuberance, but all within the bounds of piety and morality. Youth may overflow with life, and yet love and practice every virtue. Nor is it scarcely within the range of human possibilities for one to become licentious and depraved in youth, and be pure in after life.

Watch over and pray for the young. Daily carry their case before Him who

GRAHAM HIGH SCHOOL.—The Almance Gleaner is to hand with an interesting account of the closing exercises of Graham High School; and the Junior Editor of the Advocate without the knowledge or consent of the Senior, (who is kindly mentioned in the article,) clips and transfers to these columns the following extract:

"Friday at 11 o'clock the sermon was preached by Rev. J. Henry Smith, D. D., of Greensboro, and at 3½ o'clock, the Literary Address before the Philologian Society was delivered be the Rev. J. B. Bobbitt, editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate. The sermon was preached from Hos. 4 chap. and 6 v., "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." The discourse was plain, able and instructive, in the course of which was shown that man had been destroyed temporally for want of knowledge and, without the knowledge of Christ, must be destroyed eternally. This really able sermon was well received, and was all that the reputation of this eminent Divine had promised. The Literary Address, was a learned composition, well delivered, the subject being the mental and moral training of the young. The diction was simply beautiful, and the sentiment eminently appropriate for the occasion. A wide field of learning was drawn upon for illustrations and similes, which were apt and forcible."

L. M. Leach, of Trinity College, writes us that he was born in 1800 about a year before the camp meeting held at Bell's Meeting House, now Old Union, and that he frequently heard his mother speak of the meeting which she thought was the first ever held in North Carolina. Bro. Leach joined the church in 1824 and was married 50 years ago to Miss Nancy Elder. He has three brothers living—two of whom are older and one younger than himself. None of the four has made any use of spirituous liquors for over 50 years. "Uncle Jabez" Leach, well known to all who have visited Trinity College, is a brother of our correspondent, and is a staunch, singing Methodist who rightly thinks there is more music in one old, well-sung camp-meeting Methodist tune than in a score of "bran new organs, with all their noise and fuss." It is a worthy and long lived family: the Leaches hold on well.

We make our acknowledgments for a card of invitation to the Commencement Party given in honor of the Senior class of Trinity College. The card is a model of artistic beauty.—H. M. Barrow, of Louisburg, is Chief Manager, and J. H. Small, Jr., of Washington, Chief Marshal. The Managers are E. T. White, R. O. Grant, W. Z. Morton, Jr., E. S. Abell, H. E. Morris, A. M. Long, J. A. Morgan, all of North Carolina, and T. E. Everheart, of Texas.

The Blessed Dead.

This is the heading of an article recently published in the New Orleans Advocate, from which we make the following extract: One reason given by the Spirit is that the dead in Christ rest from their labors. Rest is the promise to the penitent in this life—especially rest and peace to them that believe. But labor and faith go hand in hand. The greater the rest of soul from sin and doubt and fear, the more devoted and energetic are the toils of the child of God. The rest of heaven is from the weariness, the cross-bearing, the sacrifices of labor for Christ. Besides the inference that those who die in the Lord have had experience of trouble and sorrow, there is this also: that they have been busy in the Lord's vineyard. They have labored, and the rest is rest from their labors. The blessed dead have not been slothful servants—idlers in the gospel field. They have not drifted easily along while the call to work has sounded loudly in their ears. They have taken their part in the enterprises of religion, in the support of missions, in seeking out the poor, in the endeavor to save the world. If a man is in Christ he will labor for Christ, and if he dies in the Lord his is the blessedness of resting from his earthly labor. Those who are doing nothing, and yet professing to be the Lord's, living to themselves while expecting to share in the final rest of God's people, can find little comfort in the voice that cries from heaven, and in the Spirit's testimony: "That they may rest from their labors."

An element, or at least a circumstance, in the joy of the blessed dead is that "their works do follow them." The reward of them certainly goes with them, the consciousness of having done what they could made the dying pillow softer, and it will be something to think of even in heaven. And, besides, a life of Christian labor, apparently broken off, goes on in its influences. Rich men before they die sometimes arrange that their business shall continue. It was doubtless Mr. Stewart's wish that the name and style of the great firm of which he was the head should be perpetuated, and that the vast operations of the house should move on as if he were alive. The continuance of a Christian's labors are better assured and far more lasting. His labors not only follow him to heaven, but they continue to exert an influence on earth. There are those who claim to be in Christ who will have a small following, if we may judge by the meagerness of their good works. Men are not justified by their works in the sense of pardon, neither are these the ground of their final salvation; but it is nevertheless as are possible, of course. Exception works do follow them. Good works al cases—such as death-bed repentance and conversion, where works of benevolence and piety are out of the question—are not perhaps contemplated. Then there is a wide difference in opportunity, in talent and other things; but in some degree there are fruits manifest in the believer's life, good works flow from faith and love, and these works follow him—they are neither lost to himself nor to the world which he leaves behind him.

Greensboro Female College

The Commencement Exercises of Greensboro Female College took place on Wednesday and Thursday last. We did not have the pleasure of being present but we gather some facts from Rev. W. C. Norman who was in attendance, from which we make a brief statement of this delightful occasion.

On Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock Maj. Seaton Gales of this city delivered the literary Address. This address fully sustained the well known reputation of Maj. Gales as a scholar and orator. THEME.—The 19th Century.

At 8½ o'clock P. M., Rev. Dr. Duncan, President of Randolph Macon College preached the annual sermon. It is not enough to say that the large audience was pleased—they were truly edified and profited. It was a lesson that will not be erased from the mind in the long years to come

On Thursday, Commencement day, the thirteen young ladies of the graduating class read compositions before the audience and received their diplomas; after which Dr. Jones, the president, with a short and impressive address presented each of the class with a copy of the Holy Scriptures.

Dr. Jones then introduced Rev. Samuel Bryant of Jefferson City, Mo, who delighted the audience with a spicy, and stirring impromptu address.

The concert at night was a splendid success, and showed great skill and proficiency in those who rendered the pieces.

These are only general items; a fuller account of the exercises will be published next week.

Prof. Troy will accept thanks for a card of invitation to the commencement party at Pleasant Garden Academy, on Thursday evening, June 22d. The Managers are A. J. Whitly, Chief, C. H. Foy, C. G. Perkins, all of North Carolina. The Marshals are J. C. Neeley, Chief, J. W. Pelletier, of N. C., and W. W. Quick, of S. C.

The season for the holding of District Conferences is near at hand, and it is well that the preachers and laymen should make their arrangements in time to attend. It is important that all the members should be present at the opening of the sessions.

A New Editor.

Rev. Charles H. Fowler, D. D. LL D, was elected editor of the New York Advocate in place of Rev. Dr. Curry. As he occupies a most prominent position, and one where he will exercise a commanding and controlling influence over the sentiments of our Northern brethren, our readers will be interested to know who and what he is. Rev. Dr. DePuy, Assistant Editor of the N. Y. Advocate, thus sketches the new Editor in Chief:

"Dr. Fowler was elected as the successor of Dr. Curry to this office by the General Conference, on Wednesday the 17th instant. Though his new relation bears date with that of his election, he will not formally assume the functions of the office until about the close of the General Conference session. His salutatory editorial may be expected either in the first or second issue after the number in which this note appears:

Dr. Fowler is a native of Upper Canada, but came into the States at an early age. His college life was spent at Lima, N. Y., where he graduated at Genesee College (now Syracuse University) in 1859. For the next two years he studied at the Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill., graduating in theology in 1861. Entering at once the itinerant ministry in the Rock River Conference, he was stationed at Jefferson-street Church, now Centenary Church, Chicago; then at Clark-street Church, and successively at Centenary, Wabash Avenue, Centenary, and Union. In 1866 he was tendered the Presidency of the North-western University at Evanston, but modestly declined in order to remain in the pastorate. In 1872, however, when elected a second time to that office, he accepted, has since continued at that post of service, enjoying the constantly increasing confidence and esteem of its trustees, students, and friends. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the Biblical Institute at Evanston, and was the recipient of the first honor of that kind awarded by that institution. One year ago he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the oldest of our chief literary institutions, the Wesleyan University at Middletown Conn.

Dr. Fowler's rare gifts in scholarship, in preaching, in platform speaking, and in executive administration, are sufficiently attested by the above brief record of the important posts of official service to which he has been successively called by the Church. He is a thorough temperance reformer—an acknowledged leader in this service in the West—a friend of the Bible in the schools, a lover and defender of the old doctrines of Methspeech opposed to all abundant innovations in our Church economy; and yet his Western friends declare him progressive on all questions of reform providentially called for by the changing conditions of society and the Church.".

The people of Lenoir and Hickory are to enjoy a rich treat this week in a visit from Bishop McTyeire. The Bishop is announced to preach the commencement sermon at Davenport College on Wednesday, and from thence he goes to Hickory to hold the Shelby District Conference.

A note from Bro. Robey informs us that the revival at Lenoir, continues with increasing interest. On the evening of the 28th ult., there were 40 penitents at the altar and several conversions. Services are held three times a week, with no suspension of work in the College.

The third Quarterly Meeting for Person Street Church was held last Saturday and Sunday, Rev. J. P. Moore, the Presiding Elder was present and preached Saturday and Sunday. His sermon Sabbath morning was a logical and eloquent discourse.

We are indebted to Hon. J. J. Davis, the able and trusted member of Congress from this District, for portions of the Congressional Record, containing valuable matter.

NOTICE.

The Newberne District Conference will be held in Kinston N. C., commencing Wednesday June 14th, 1876. Preachers and Delegates arriving on the train will be met by the Committee of Arrangements, at the Depot and assigned their homes; those coming by private conveyance will stop at McCullen's Livery Stable. I have written Col. Humphrey and Capt. Devine to grant us the usual Rail Road favor.—I wrote as politely and as kindly as I knew how—neither one of them has paid any attention to my communications. I make mention of this matter in self justification, as it was made my duty to ask these officials to grant this common Rail Road courtesy.

NOTICE.

The Record book of the Washington District Conference is at the house of a Bro. Harris on the Roanoke Circuit. Will he be so kind as to forward it to me at Tarboro, or send it to District Conference at Warrenton? The minutes of the last two Conferences have not been recorded because the book could not be found.

Revival at "Morehead City."

MESSRS EDITORS: I have just closed a most profitable meeting in our house of worship in Morehead City. We commenced preaching there last Sunday night week. At the close of the first sermon, three very prominent ladies of the place connected themselves with the church, having professed faith in Christ. The meeting continued day and night, until last Friday—in all 11 days. When I commenced the labors of the meeting, I was very feeble, having just left my room in which I had been confined by a severe spell of sickness for more than three weeks. I tried to labor moderately, and as far as possible, guard my health. As I continued to labor I found I had strength as each hour of service demanded;—had but little ministerial aid.

Bro John Jones preached one very effective sermon. Bro. A. R. Raven preached one night and conducted a prayer meeting next day—The labors of both ministers assisted greatly in increasing the interest of the meeting. Bro. Arendell, the steward, rendered very efficient aid in the altar work. There were about 20 conversions—17 very prominent and valuable citizens of the place joined the Church, 15 of whom were baptized at the close of the meeting. The membership was greatly refreshed;—the community, generally, deeply impressed with the important truths of the gospel.

We are hoping yet for an increase of membership in the church in that town.

Pray for us. The Lord be praised for all he has done! I thank the good Lord for my improved health.

JAMES MADONEY.

Harlow's Creek, N. C., May 26, '76.

MESSRS EDITORS: Having been invited to make an address at Rock Spring Seminary, I left Charlotte yesterday morning by the Lincoln train for that purpose. Nothing of interest appeared on the cars except that amiable parental weakness that will show off children supposed to be prodigies of smartness. We had two exhibitions of that kind, that elicited a few sneers, but by me all the folly was excused for the sake of tender, hopeful hearts of Pa and Ma.

There is an undecided contest as to whether the crookedness or roughness of the road from Iron Station to Denver, predominates; but if both these defects were remedied the road would still be bad. Bad as the way is, it is full of interest. It is across the rich iron region; the very rocks are iron and cinder is everywhere. How unwise that legislation that has not more intimately and cheaply connected the East and West. North, [illegible] foundation of unequaled greatness; but the wisdom and [illegible] of development have been wanting.

I arrived at Denver too late to hear the annual sermon by Rev. D. R. Bruton. The people said it was great, appropriate and eloquently delivered, and when they returned Bro. Bruton looked like he had been preaching splendidly. At 2½ P. M. this writer talked to a very full house about "The Immediate Future;" whether he talked well or not, he said what he intended to say. At night there were declamations and essays, and music by the Catawba Band. The exercises were good Selections suitable to the performers drilled by those who know how to drill. Misses D. and C. read essays finely conceived and well written and read. The other did well. I left this morning soon after the exercises began. The attendance is immense, large enough to fill several good churches. Fine horses and elegant carriages and buggies came in long lines from all points of the compass; then there were ladies and gentlemen on horseback; and then mules without number, and two of these with their lovely burdens surely came from sacred Yemen. This is a good school. D. Matt Thompson and wife have the right theory and know how to execute it. They are doing a fine work, and are greatly appreciated Such High Schools do good service for the church, and are the best foundation for higher education.

The seminary is very near the celebrated Rock Spring camp ground. I walked out to view this great camping place of the Lord's people. In magnitude it is a wonder, the largest I have ever seen.

Very truly,

B. CRAVEN.

Letter from Pleasant Garden

We closed a series of religious services at this place last Monday and night. Sixteen were happily converted, christians were greatly blessed, and, I trust, much good accomplished. Bro. Rush is a faithful pastor, works hard to build up the Church, and never tires if he can only see sinners coming to Jesus. Bro. Peale, of the Friends, was with us one night, an earnest faithful worker. Bro. Allen Joy also cordially entered the work with us, and preached and labored for two days and nights, with great acceptability and success, and wonderfully endeared himself to all our people.

May the Lord bless him in all his labors.

Bro. Adams of Greensboro was with us one night also.

I offer grateful thanks giving to our Heavenly Father for his mercy to us as a school. After the labors and perplexities and cares of the session, 'tis so pleasant to separate, sweetly united in the bonds of christian love. O that such a holy influence may always be in the school, that every student who comes here, may find the precious Savior!

Very truly,

R. P. TROY.

A Distressing Accident

MESSRS EDITORS: It pains me to have to record a most distressing accident, which occurred here on Wednesday morning last. The youngest child of Rev. J. F. Craven, Oscar Field, a most beautiful little boy only a little over nine months old, was terribly burned. His mother had just dressed him and set him on the floor, and left the room only a few moments to give some directions to her washerwoman, and on returning found his clothing on fire; and before it could be extinguished, the poor child was very severely injured.

A sweeter child rarely ever made glad the hearts of any household. He was almost the pride of the town; yet we felt that death even would be preferable to a life of deformity and helplessness The dear child lingered till Thursday evening, when He who bles sed the little children, took him unto himself.

Friday evening, after an affecting discourse in the College Chapel, by Dr. Craven, we buried little Oscar in the village burying ground—and, with sad hearts, wended our way home ward,—many of us almost feeling that we had lost another of our own little ones. The bereaved parents will have the earnest sympathy of thousands who will read of this distressing incident. The ways of Providence are right. We may not know now, but we shall know hereafter.

Very respectfully,

W.

Commencement Exercises of the Wesleyan Female College at Murfreesboro N C

The present session of the Wesleyan Female College has been exceptionally prosperous; the attendance of pupils having reached 192, a number considerably in excess of that attained in any previous year. The session closes on the third Wednesday in June. The order of exercises for commencement week is as follows:

Sabbath morning, June 18th, at 11 o'clock, in the Methodist Church, regular annual sermon to the graduating class by Rev. E. P. Wilson, of Ashland, Va.

Sabbath evening, 8 o'clock, in the Methodist Church, sermon before the Young Ladies' Christian Association, by Rev. H. P. Mitchell, of Portsmouth, Va.

Monday, June 19th, at 10 A. M. meeting of the Board of Corporators in the office of the President.

Monday evening, in the Methodist Church, at 8 o'clock, address before the two Literary Societies, the "M. P. S." and "Theta Delta," by Rev. J. J. Lafferty, of the Richmond Christian Advocate.

Tuesday morning, in the Methodist address before the College students by Rev. R. N. Sledd, of Petersburg Va. After this, reading of the essays of the graduating class.

Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, delivery of diplomas, etc. in the College chapel. To conclude with a vocal and instrumental concert.

If acceptable I will send you a brief account of these exercises, that your readers may see how the North Carolina section of the Virginia Conference flourishes in these hard times.

Graham High School.

In our brief notice of the commencement exercises of this popular institution of learning, in our last, we were not in possession of the particulars relative to its operations and grounds of success. The editor of the Alamance Gleaner, in writing up an accounnt of the closing exercises of this school, speaks justly in terms of high commendation of the institution and its faculty. We make a few brief extracts from this notice:

The closing exercises of this institution, according to previous announcement, took place on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. Wednesday was devoted to declamation and readings by the Primary Classes. These exercises evinced the careful training of the pupils, and reflected much credit both on them and their teachers.—Thursday morning there were declamations by the members of the intermediate Classes, interspersed with music by Miss C Hunter Southgate and her Music Class In the afternoon declamations by the Sophomore and Junior Classes, with music At night there were readings by the young ladies, the exercises of the evening closing with "The Congressional Debate" by members of the Philologian Society.

* * * * *

There was a large crowd present during the entire three days—many from a distance—and all were well pleased. Miss Southgate interspersed the entire proceedings with charming music. 'The Congressional Debate' was especially entertaining. We are proud of our school, and think it is not excelled by any in the State.—There were one hundred and two matriculates during the last session, and there is a prospect of even a greater number during the next session, which opens the last Monday in August, and continues to the last Monday in next May. Rev W S Long, A M, will be added to the already able and efficient [illegible] odious buildings will be renovated, and in all respects the enterprise of the Principal, the Rev D A Long, will keep pace with the increasing patronage and growing popularity of the school. The five members of the Senior Class go directly to College, some to Chapel Hill, and some to other colleges. The Graham High School is not strictly a preparatory school.

Young men and young women are here educated for the business of life, much more thoroughly than at most preparatory schools, and they can, after finishing their course here, go on to college, if so inclined. We have understood that no school in the State sends boys on to college more thoroughly prepared than are those who go from here, if indeed those from any other school are so well prepared. We have observed, and we think it worthy of mention, that, among all the boys from different portions of the State and from other States, here assembled, we have never heard a charge of departure from the most exemplary conduct. Our village has neverbeen the scene of those pranks and tricks even, which are so common to places, where a number of school boys are assembled. The Principal, in his report of the last session took occassion to say that no student had come under the displeasure of the Faculty, because of the use of intoxicating liquors, or profane language. We have no hesitation in declaring that we have never known so many boys assembled together, whose conduct, individually and collectively, was so unexceptional. The school itself, and its surroundings present all the advantages that parents or guardians could wish, or could reasonbly hope to find. The influences are all for good, and the tendency to "sow wild oats" if it exists finds no field, or encouragement here, and is gently, but firmly restrained. The course of study is thorongh, the teachers learned, efficient and faithful, the locality healthful, and easy of access, and the community high toned and, moral, as to be found in the State. There is as nearly a total absence of temptation to do wrong and be led astray as can be found in any community.

Pleasant Garden Academy.

Our commencement exercises will embrace the 21st and 22nd of June.

Annual sermon, 21st at 11 A. M., by Rev.. S. D. Adams of the N. C. Conference.

Literary Address, at 2 P M., by Mr. John A. Barringer, Esq., of Greensboro, N. C. Declamations at night.

The usual exercises on Thursday the 22nd.

The Christian at Work draws attention to the lesson which Mexico is now teaching. "in demonstrating afresh how utterly impossible it is to maintain orderly, constitutional government among a people whose only intellectual and moral training has been derived from the Church of Rome."

To Fortress Monroe and Back.

A grand excursion, complimentary to the Rescue Fire Company of Raleigh, will be given by the citizens of Raleigh and the friends of the Company, to Norfolk, Old Point, and Fortress Monroe on the 8th inst. A train of cars accommodating 1,200 persons has been chartered and placed at their command. The round trip costs only five dollars, railroad fare. The editors of this paper are indebted to the Committee for a complimentary ticket, but will not be able to attend. The trip will no doubt be a pleasant one, and precautions have been taken to prevent the disturbances and unpleasantness often incident to such excursions.

DAN RIVER COALFIELDS RAILROAD COMPANY.—A meeting of the Stockholders of this Company is called to take place in Charlotte on the 12th of June, at which time business of importance will be transacted. It will be recollected that this Road is to run from Statesville direct to Danville, Va., and when constructed will make a through line between the South and North, connecting with the Western N. C. Road at this point. The link to be constructed is only about 110 miles.—STATESVILLE AMERICAN.

THE CRACK SHOT OF THE STATE.—Dr. Hillery Wilder, son of the late Gaston H. Wilder, and living near this city, is said to be the finest pistol shot in America, and at one time held the champion badge of the United States. It is said he has been known to hit a target the size of a silver quarter at a distance of fifty yards forty nine times out of fifty, with a pistol. We are told that with a pistol he killed last February, twenty three robins in twenty four shots.—Raleigh News.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.—The Raleigh News says: We understand that the enterprising and go ahead firm of W. H. & R. S. Tucker have engaged the Citizens Cornet Band for afternoon performance from 5 30 to 7 o'clock each Saturday during the season. The band plays on their iron balcony over their mammoth iron front store.

This enterprise is gotten up entirely for the pleasure of their numerous customers and friends and the public generally. Such enterprises enliven the city, and keep in practice one of the best brass bands in the State.

In sending money, all amounts should be sent in registered letter, post office order or check. The cost of registration, or Post Office order can be deducted from the amount in hand. If money is sent otherwise than herein specified, it will be at the sender's risk.

Deaths.

☞Obituary notices of twenty lines are inserted without charge. The excess over twenty lines of many words is charged for at the rate of 10 cents per line. Count the lines and allow many words to the line. In this way you may alway know the amount to enclose. Resolutions of respect are subject to the same rule. ☜

Mrs Harriet M. Johnson, died in Bladen co N C. April 4th 1876. She was 29 years 6 months & 5 days old and leaves a sorrowing husband, and two precious little children. with numerous relatives to mourn their loss. Loss to them, but gain to her. A christian from her childhood she met death with more than ordinary triumph. Her physical sufferings for a short time, were in the most aggravating character, but grace was given and she entered the "Dark Valley" with shoutings. After these intense sufferings had passed away she gave up her life. Could not though her friends knew it and they were trying to convey it away without her knowledge, she started from a sitting—I have come to rise in trying to direct to me. I know, I am sides, I shall go home now. Jesus has come and casting her hands around her she said "I am going. Beginning with her little grand-daughter, she prayed for each of her children separately she asked grace from her to sing, and repeated her favorite stanzas, closing herself. To others she said "Do not go—I am going home to the mansions with uplifted hands, shouted—"O my child see my precious mother," and again "I am my dear Saviour."

J. SANDERLIN

Bro. L. C. Owen was born Oct 25 1851 and died at his residence in Sampson Co. April 29 h 1876.

He was the son of Rev. Miles P. Owen, who with the sainted mother long & faithfully instructed into the mind of little Lewis the importance of early piety. His mind was more than ordinarily solid. He was a diligent student of the Bible. When very young he seemed, by a spirit, to call him into prayer where he talked to Jesus, and in humble prayer commited them to His care. Lewis was only 5 years old when she entered the fold, but the loss she have sustained can only be united by his father and visit by the entire sisters who used to come from this section with streaming eyes, resorting to the grave like mother.

The instructions were not lost on the soul He joined the Methodist Church in April was baptized by Dr Cross when only 12 years old. After he commenced to keep a bed family prayers regularly. all loss thing to young men in his locality was his soul-stirring like a little on and to myself and others, expressed a willingness to die.

To his sorrowing young sister he said "Oh dear I have gotten to rest Heaven, I go to wish to turn back." He reserved a long will and infant. May the God of the widow and fatherless care for them.

J. SANDERLIN.

Died in Greensboro May 26th 1876 Kate E infant daughter of Dr. H. M. and M. L. Alford, aged 4 months and 8 days

She came from God to spend a few short in the midst of suffering on earth, and then return to spend an eternity of happiness in Heaven.

Real Estate for Sale

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 1,000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in Northwestern N. C., under a high state of cultivation, fine cotton lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on the farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,000 acres, 600 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco, wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, fine well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying 1 mile south of Mount Airy, containing 455 acres lying on Lovill's Creek 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Rock Shoals tract, on which there is a good grist, flour and saw-mill; good tenant house, and one large rock building 36 by 50 feet, and four others in bright, erected for a cotton factory, which are good ones, the dam and saw-mill are good, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or over, more.

Also another tract, containing 350 acres, lying on Reedcoe and Reed Cane Creeks, on which are fine cotton plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and in a high state of cultivation, a rare chance offered to a small colony. This is one half to 1 mile to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Guage Railroad, and in one of the richest and most thriving sections of the State, results from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most healthful of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at 10 o. Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M. from day to day, from 21st to August, 1876, and continue it no day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a Rail Road Hack to convey them to Mount Airy, 40 miles 19 miles.

THE BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS FOR SALE.

The claim is made with entire confidence of these waters that as a curative agent of many forms of CHRONIC DISEASE they have no superior among the medicinal waters of the world. Especially and emphatically this claim is made for them in the premises DISEASES OF WOMEN, in AFFECTION of the KIDNEYS and BLADDER, and in derangements of the DIGESTIVE and BILIARY ORGANS. In GOUT and RHEUMATISM no remedy or CURE ACID in the blood, they have given the most marked and decided relief. In CHRONIC INFLUENTIAL and REMITTENT FEVER, and all diseases with habitable to miasmatic influence they act often in a charm In SCROFULA they have given a degree of relief which might well induce sufferers from that disease to give it a trial. They are used with advantage as in warm weather

The claim made in the case of diseases is vouched for by some four HUNDRED DISTINGUISHED MEDICAL MEN OF THE COUNTRY, both North and south, as well as by numerous reported cases from the most unquestionable sources.

Testimonials sent to any address upon application. These waters are put up in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles at $6 per case.

"GOOD MORNING TO GOD."

"O! I am so happy!" the little girl said,
As she sprang like a lark from the low trundle bed;
"'Tis morning, bright morning! Good morning, papa!
O, give me one kiss for good morning, mamma!
Only just look at my pretty canary,
Chirping his sweet good morning to Mary!
The sunshine is peeping straight into my eyes,—
Good morning to you, Mr. Sun, for you rise
Early to wake up my birdie and me,
And make us as happy as happy can be."

"Happy you may be, my dear little girl,"
And the mother stroked softly a clustering curl,
"Happy as happy can be—but think of the One
Who awakened, this morn, both you and the sun."
The little one turned her bright eyes with a nod—
"Mamma, may I say good morning to God?"
"Yes, little darling one, surely you may—
As you kneel by your bed every morning to pray."

Mary looked solemnly down, with her eyes
Looking up earnestly into the skies,
And two little hands that were folded together
Softly she laid on the lap of her mother.
"Good morning, dear Father in heaven," she said,
"I thank thee for watching my snug little bed.
For taking good care of me all the dark night,
And waking me up with the beautiful light.
O, keep me from naughtiness all the long day,
Blest Jesus, who taught little children to pray."

LESSON XI.—JUNE 11, 1876.

Subject, "The Apostles Before the Council." Acts v. 27-42.

Commit to Memory Verses 28, 41.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"If God be for us, who can be against us?" Rom. viii. 31.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—Christ is above all human authority.

READING LESSON.—Acts v. 27-42

HOME READINGS.—Monday, Acts v. 27-42.
Tuesday, Acts iv. 5-20.
Wednesday, Matt. xxvii 11-25
Thursday, Heb. ii 1-9.
Friday, John xiv. 15-26
Saturday, Jas. i, 1-12.
Sunday, Rev. ii. 1-11.

ANALYSIS.

1. The Apostles' Defense.—The high-priest charges the apostles with contempt of the council in not obeying the order to cease preaching. Peter nobly refers to the authority of God as above councils (verses 27-33). 11 Gamaliel's Plea.—He makes a most reasonable speech, to which the council agrees (verses 34-39). 111, The Apostles Set Free.—After a cruel and unjust beating, the apostles are released. They go forth rejoicing that they are accounted worthy to suffer for Christ. See Matt. v. 10-12; Rom. v. 3; 2 Cor. xii. 10; Phil. i. 29; Heb. x. 32-34.

QUESTIONS.

1 Who addressed the apostles in the council?—Verse 27.
2 With what did he accuse them?—Verse 28.
3 How did they answer?—V. 29.
4 With what did they accuse the council?—V. 30.
5 What had Jesus provided for Israel?—V. 31.
6 Of what were the apostles witnesses?—32.
7 What effect had their speech on the council?—V. 33.
8 Who quieted the council?—V. 34.
9 What order did he give?—V. 34.
10 What two facts did he state?—V. 36, 37.
11 What was his advice?
12 What reason did he give?—V. 38, 39.
13 How were the apostles punished? V. 40.
15 Why did they not obey?—V. 29.
16 In what did they rejoice?—V. 41.
17 In what did they engage?—V. 26. 42.

BIBLE-CLASS.

1 Who arrested the apostles?—V.
2 Of whym were the officers afraid?
3 What here shows the zeal of the apostles?—V. 28.
4 What is meant by "his blood upon us?"
5 What answer did Peter make to the high-priest
6 Was this a rule of action with them?
7 What is meant in verse 30 by "raised up?"
8 What is meant by "cut to the heart?"
9 What counsel did Gamaliel give?
10 What is said of Gamaliel?
11 What result was reached by the council?
12 How does this illustrate the Golden Text?
13 Why did the apostles rejoice?
14 What is meant by "counted worthy?"
15 What was their daily custom?
16 What is the difference between 'teach' and 'preach?'
17 What did the apostles preach?
18 Is Jesus Christ the only subject of gospel preaching?
19 We have in this Lesson a sound rule of obedience: what is it?
20 Read Matt. x. 192-6; 2 Cor. xii. 9, 10; Rom. v. 3-5.

"Now, George, before you go and play," said his mother, "are you quite sure that you know the lesson Prof. Borax gave you to learn?" "Oh, yes, mamma." "Well, now, tell me what causes heat without light?" Pickled peppers!"

There are four good mothers who have four bad daughters: Truth hath hatred, prosperity hath pride, security hath peril, and familiarity hath contempt.

Zion's Herald well says: "Some ministers seem to have the idea that their business is not so much to preach Christ as to fight the devil. They are always in fighting trim, always on the war-path. Now it is the Pope, now Huxley, now a Unitarian or Universalist, and now some other Satanic emissary. Their sermons are fuller of anti Christ than of Christ. With such preachers the devil is quite well-satisfied. He is willing to be preached down, provided Christ is not preached up.

History of the Onion.

Very few members of the vegetable kingdom exist that can boast an older record than the onion. Theophrastus alluded to it as follows: "There be divers sorts of onions which have their syrnames of the places where they grow; some also lesser, others greater; some be round, and divers others long.' This is ample proof that even in his early days, a variety of sorts were grown, and in many places. Pliny adds the questionable information that 'none grow wilde.' The onion is also spoken of in holy writ, where, in connection with the leek and other vegetables, it is referred to as a luxury belonging to the Egyptians, at the earliest date we possess any history in regard to them. Though Theophrastus shows by his statement above that distinct sorts existed, we are inclined to believe that there were not more than two or three distinct types then. They derived, however, a variety of names from the various places where they were known to be grown freely. Old authors describe a kind known as "Ascalonitides," a name said by Gerarde to be "of a towne in Judea, otherwise called Pompeiana." Singularly enough, however, the English name of this kind is given by this latter authority as "Scallions," and along with it is given an illustration and the following statement: "This hath but small roots, growing many together; the leaves are like to onions, but lesse. It seldom bears either stalke, floure or seed. It is used to be eaten in sallads.' Both Theophrastus and Pliny refer to this, the latter in the sixth chapter of his nine teenth book, where he says: "The one serving for a sauce or to season meat with." Can it be, then, that in Pompeii of old, chives, as we know them now, were used popularly.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

RAISING TOMATOES.—Burr tells us that the French mode of raising tomatoes is as follows: As soon as a cluster of flowers is visible they top the stem down to the cluster, so that the flowers terminate the stem. The effect is that the sap is immediately impelled into the two buds next below the cluster, which soon push strongly and produce another cluster of flowers each. When these are visible the branch to which they belong is also topped down to the level; and this is done five times successively. By this means the plants become stout dwarf bushes, not above eighteen inches high. In order to prevent their falling over, sticks or strings are stretched horizontally along the rows, so as to keep the plants erect. In addition to this, all laterals that have no flowers, and, after the fifth topping, all laterals whatever are nipped off. In this way the ripe sap is directed into the fruit, which acquires a beauty, size and excellence unattainable by other means.—Boston Globe.

MEALY POTATOES.—It has been found from experience that potatoes are very watery from the first of March till the market offers us new ones. In our kitchen we overcome the soggy disposition of these valuable vegetables by soaking them a few hours in cold water, and putting them into hot water to boil, without salt; then, when they are tender nearly all the way through, turn the water off, and refill the saucepan with cold water. Put in salt, and boil till they are quite done; drain off that water also, cover as tightly as possible, and set on the back of the range to steam, lifting the cover for an instant once or twice; then with one hand holding down the lid, shake the saucepan gently, quickly and steadily for a moment, and serve your potatoes hot. If rightly managed they will be like snow-balls.—The Housekeeper.

GRAHAM GEMS.—Two teacupfuls of buttermilk, a little salt, three even cupfuls of Graham flour, and one teaspoonfuls of soda. Stir well and bake in iron gem pans, which should be hot on the stove before filling; put them into a very hot oven and bake from fifteen to twenty minutes. If you want them of extra quality, take one teacupful of buttermilk, one egg, two teacupfuls of flour, with soda and salt as before. Very good gems are made by taking one teacupful of sweet milk or water, one and a half teacupfuls of the flour, half a teaspoonful of soda, one of cream tartar, with a little salt, and a spoonful of sugar; beat well until it looks smooth.

The Evil Fruits of weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and restore sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopœia or out of it. A wineglassfull of the Bitters should be taken before each meal.

The "Housekeeper" of our Health

The liver is the great depurating or blood cleansing organ of the system. Set the great housekeeper of our health at work, and the foul corruptions which render the blood and nerves the machinery of life, are gradually expelled from the system. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with small daily doses of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They cure every kind of humor from the worst scrofula to the common pimple, blotch or eruption. Great sating ulcers kindly heal under their mighty curative influence. Virulent blood poisons that lark in the system are by them robbed of their terrors, and by their prescription and somewhat protracted use the most inveterate cases may be completely renovated and built up anew. Enlarged glands, tumors and swellings disappear and disappear under the influence of their great remedies. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

"Grandie, a child about three years old, was greatly afflicted with sores on his legs and feet, so that he could not wear his shoes and stockings. Had a great deal of trouble with him. Had tried many remedies ineffectually. At last we tried the Golden Medical Discovery, and in about three weeks he was entirely cured, all sores were all healed, and health much improved.

Respectfully yours, J. W. HOYER,

THE
Buffalo Lithia Waters

Remarkable relief of GRAVEL, and still more remarkable relief of DYSPEPSIA of thirty years standing—a man who for years lived upon Crackers and Tea now eats Bacon, Cabbage, Turnips, &c

Case of Capt. James Covington, of Halifax county, Virginia:

MT LAUREL, HALIFAX Co., Va. Feb 9, 1876.

COL. T. F. GOODE:

Dear Sir.—Some eighteen months ago I was attacked by a very painful affection of the bladder. Under the treatment of two physicians of high standing, I grew steadily worse, until my sufferings were beyond description, and I was compelled to resort to morphia almost constantly for relief. I was unable to give any attention to my business, and had despaired of relief from any source, when in September last I was advised to try the Buffalo Lithia Water.

Though within less than a day's ride of the Spring, my condition was such that I was unable to get there, and consequently sent for the water and used it at home. After using it for a few days, I was so far relieved that I could do without the morphia, and continued to improve for some six weeks, when I had an attack of great violence from which I was relieved by the discharge of a large gravel, since which I have discharged three smaller ones, with but slight pain. I am now able to ride on horseback or to walk at pleasure, and I am now attending regularly to my business affairs.

For thirty years I had been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and forfifteen years I had been the using up yellow water from my stomach; for five years I had been unable to eat meat or vegetables of any kind, and during that period I lived entirely upon tea and crackers, and other similar articles.

In taking the water for Gravel, I was relieved of the Dyspepsia. I now eat bacon, cabbage, turnips and any thing else that I want, without inconvenience.

I believe the Buffalo Lithia Waters to be all that is claimed for them.

Very respectfully,
JAMES COVINGTON.

(In the above, Capt. Covington has added somewhat to his statement as first published.)

Statement of Dr. J. C. C leman, of Halifax County, Virginia, a former surgeon in the U. S. Navy, as to the above case:

Medicine affording Capt. J. Covington relief, I suggested to him a trial of the Buffalo Lithia Water, with the remarkable results which he has above stated. Neither his previous condition nor the extent of the benefit which he derived from the water is in the slightest degree over stated by him."

JOHN C. COLEMAN, M. D.
Halifax Co., Va. April 20, 1875.

These waters have in innumerable instance evinced extraordinary power in derangements of the DIGESTIVE and BILIARY ORGANS in DISEASES PECULIAR TO WOMEN, affections of the KIDNEYS and BLADDER, GOUT, RHEUMATISM and PARALYSIS

Poetry.

LOST.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

Once on a time she came to me,
As some small star from heaven might flow—
To be a mortal's sole delight,
A love by day, a dream by night,
The sweetest thing on land or sea,
My little darling crept to me.

A trembling, tender, fairy thing,
Too grave to smile, too sad to sing,
A wave of earth with grieved surprise,
An alien from her native skies,
A baby angel strange to see,
My little darling came to me.

But love and loving taught her smiles
And joy and song—baby wiles—
The way to cling, to coax, to kiss,
To fill my soul with deepest bliss:
My heart of hearts, my life, was she,
This little love who came to me.

What words she stammered, soft and low,
No other ear but mine could know.
More gentle than a cooing dove,
More fond than any voice of love,
So shy, so sweet, so tenderly,
My little darling spoke to me;

I know not how to tell the grace
That dwelt upon her wistful face—
The tinted skin, the lips pure bloom,
The clearest eyes that knew not gloom,
The hair as soft as moth wings by,
My little darling showed to me.

Alas! I know that all is gone,
That here I sit and grieve alone,
That every fair and precious thing
Loved and lost is but a sting;
Another thorn thy memory,
My little darling, brings to me.

But kindly night doth pity pain
In all my dreams she comes again;
Her precious head is on my breast
My happy arms caress her rest;
I hear her words of tender glee,
My little darling kisses me.

Oh! sweet is night—too sweet, too brief—
When day recalls our bitterest grief.
The hungry heart, the longing dire
That burns the soul with vain desire,
The quiescency of wild distress,
The Rachel mourning, comfortless,
O God! once more that face to see!
My little darling, come to me!

SKETCHES OF THE PIONEER METHODISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

BY REV. H. T. HUDSON.

NUMBER 10.

Methodism in the Yadkin region from 1784 to 1800—Jesse Lee—Smith—Hope Hull—McHenry—McGee—Ahair—Willis—a Primitive Conference.

Methodism was built up in the Yadkin country, not by the labor of any one man, but it was the work of the joint toil of a score of hardy, self-denying pioneers. The policy of the Itinerancy did not allow any one man to remain long at one place, but shifted the preachers rapidly from the salubriety of the mountain climate to the sickly fogs of the tide water.—They were marshalled over the wide field like soldiers to meet the enemy wherever he presented the most formidable attitude. Conquest was written upon the banner of Methodism though it cost the precious lives of men. For this reason, I am obliged to refer briefly to a great many men who may be considered among the founders of Methodism in the valley of the Yadkin. And yet while I use all possible brevity in my references, scores of worthy preachers must be passed over without a line to their memory, and only the more prominent ones sententiously sketched. I have already sketched some of the first pioneers of this section, chief among whom were Bruce, Ogburn and Cooper.

In the year of 1784, Jesse Lee traveled the Salisbury circuit. In the town, he says, was "a society of thirty affectionate Christians." "In entering upon this field of labor, he was greatly encouraged at meeting large congregations of anxious hearers at all of his appointments. Gracious influences attended his preaching to the comfort of believers and the awakening of sinners;—his own soul was greatly blessed while striving to benefit others." While preaching "at Hern's" his own soul was filled so full of love that he burst "into a flood of tears and there were few dry eyes in the house." "At C. Leadbetter's the hearers were much wrought upon."—"At Cole's the congregation was so large we had to go under the shade of the trees, and the friends wept greatly." "At Jersey meeting house, Col G.'s wife came to me and began to cry and say, 'I am the worst creature in the world; my heart is so hard I don't know what to do, and begged me to pray for her." "At Costus' an old man rose up and spoke in a melting manner with tears streaming from his eyes: 'I am almost ready to depart this life, and am not prepared to die, and you may judge how I feel." The force and pathetic power of Mr. Lee's sermons may be judged from these abreviated extracts from his journal. The Methodists had very few church edifices to preach in at this date.—Mr. Lee mentions only one regular church on his circuit—the Jersey Meeting House—located somewhere on the eastern side of the Yadkin river. Most of the preaching places were at private houses, in barns, under the shade of trees, or brush arbors. In the Spring, Summer and Autumn, the roof of their churches was of the blue firmament, the floor was carpeted with green grass, the seats were gray stones, and the window curtains shutting out the glare of the summer's sun were the swaying branches of umbrageous trees. The voice of the earnest preacher mingled with the songs of birds, the splashing of a stream gliding over roots and rocky shoals, and the neighing of the horses tied in the bushes. The poetic grandeur of these forest-built church-[illegible] with the perfect songs which were like the voice of many waters," the thunder of eloquence rolling out from the deep-chested itinerants, made the services doubly impressive and productive of incalculable good. The grandeur of these scenes was heightened when the primitive forest was illuminated at night by the stars above and torches below, and all nature was still save the pealing tones of the preacher ring out upon the air: "Death and damnation to the finally impenitent."

JESSE LEE

was one of the eminent Methodist pioneers—"a man of vigorous though unpolished mind, of rare popular eloquence, and tireless energy, an itinerant evangelist, from the British province to Florida." He labored as Presiding Elder 35 years—was chaplain to Congress—the first historian of American Methodism—the founder of the Methodist Church in the New England States,—and lacked only to be elevated to the episcopacy to make him equal to Asbury and Dr. Coke.—Some two or three times he came very near being elected bishop—lacking only one vote, on one occasion, of being elected to that office. His death scene was glorious as his life. "For several days preceding his death he was filled with holy joy. Frequently he cried out, "Glory, glory, glory!—hallelujah, hallelujah! Jesus reigns!" "Give my respects to Bishop McKendree," he said, "and tell him I die in love with all the preachers; that I do love him, and that he lives in my heart." Having finished his work he said but little more; but fell asleep on the evening of the 12th of September 1816. He was borne to Baltimore and interred in its old Methodist burial ground."—Dr. L. M. Lee.

ISAAC SMITH

was Jesse Lee's colleague on Salisbury circuit. He was a Virginian—born 1758—an officer in the Revolutionary War, and bore the scars of that conflict to his grave. In 1783, he became a soldier of the Cross and won many a victory for Methodism during his itinerant career. Most of his life was spent in the bounds of the S C Conference; and he was regarded as the "father" of that Conference. His Conference said in his obituary: "He was one of the fathers of the Church in this country and entitled to be held in everlasting remembrance." The fragrance of his steady and deep piety spread through all that country—his "memory is still precious as one of the purest and best of Methodist preachers." "He was the St. John of the early Methodist apostolate."

HOPE HULL,

a native of Maryland, traveled the Salisbury circuit in 1785. He shares the honor of laying the foundation of Methodism in this region. He became one of the powerful and successful pioneers of that day. The year after traveling the Salisbury circuit he was appointed to the Pee Dee—One year after this, he was sent to Georgia, where he did a great work in establishing Methodism. But I have not time to trace his long career of usefulness in the South and Northwest. He was a man of singular power in prayer and the pulpit; "of great purity and firmness of character, and soundness and largeness of mind." The following anecdote will show that he had the courage to beard the lion in his den. On one occasion he was invited by way of mockery to attend a ball. He went—was invited to dance—he took the floor, remarking: "I never engage in any kind of business without asking the blessings of God, so let us pray." Down he went upon his knees, and such a prayer rolled out from his eloquent lips as shook the whole party with terror. The gay dancers were thunderstruck—some fled from the house in consternation, others began to pray for mercy. Hull arose from his knees—gave out an appointment to preach there four weeks hence, and quietly retired. When the appointed day came, Hull was there and preached a most eloquent and powerful sermon to a large concourse of people. From that prayer in a ball room a wide extending revival began and spread in all directions.

BARNABAS MCHENRY

was one of the strong men who labored in this field. His first circuit in 1787 was the Yadkin, when it extended from the eastern slope of the mountains down into Davidson county. He was a Virginian, joined the Conference in 1787. "He was early remarkable for an admirable acquaintance with theology, a felicitous use of language in the pulpit. In both his excellence was beyond dispute, and so conversant was he with the whole range of theology as usually taught in the pulpit, and so accurately acquainted with the laws and structure of the English language especially, that his judgment, with those who knew him, had the force of law." In the early part of his ministry he was sent to labor in Tennessee where "he became a chieftain of Western Methodism."

John Sproul, less gifted than McHenry, yet a very useful man, did much good on the Yadkin in 1790.

John McGee, to whom is given the honor of being the originator of camp-meetings while a local preacher in Tennessee and laboring with others in a great revival, must be numbered among the founders of Methodism in this section.

John Ahair traveled the Yadkin in 1793. "He was a native of North Carolina; he was of a meek spirit, and was a zealous man. He was weak in body, but was strong in faith and in love. He traveled about three years, and then departed this life in 1794, aged 26 years.

WM. PARTRIDGE

was one of the strong men who labored in this section in 1787. He was born in Virginia in 1754, converted in 1775, and became well known as one of the useful pioneers of Methodism. He not only professed sanctification but lived it. "He was the greatest example of piety I have ever known," said a neighbor of his. He died in Georgia, exclaiming: "For me to die is gain." was the first Presiding Elder on the District embracing the Yadkin country. He was born in Virginia, and "was a man of very improved mind and of apostolic labors. The Minutes say: "Possibly not many such cases as that of Henry Willis have been known. He lingered along the shores of death, apparently dying, and feeble upon sunk quietly in the socket and disappeared. He died with unshaken confidence in his God, and triumphant faith in Jesus Christ as his Saviour." "The field of his ministerial toil extended from New York to Charleston, S. C., and Westward to the regions across the Alleghanies.—In all these places the name of Henry Willis is held in venerable remembrance."

HENRY WILLIS

Such able and laborious Presiding Elders as Reuben Ellis, John Tunnel, Isaac Lowe, Thomas Bowen, Wm. Spencer, Isaiah Askew, Henry Hill, Lawrence Mansfield and Thomas Rogers were chiefly instrumental in building up Methodism in the Yadkin country during the period under consideration.

A PICTURE OF A PRIMITIVE CONFERENCE.

In 1791 on the 2d of April, Conference was held at McKnight's meeting house on the Yadkin river near Clemmonsville. "There were," says Dr. Coke, "in all about 30 preachers present, some of whom came from the other side of the Appalachian Mountains. At this Conference a remarkable spirit of prayer was poured out on the preachers. Every night before we concluded, heaven itself seemed to be opened to believing souls. One of the preachers was so blessed in the course of our prayers that he was constrained to cry, 'O, I never was so happy in all my life! O what a heaven of heavens I feel. At each of our Conferences before we parted, every preacher gave an account of his experience from the first strivings of the Spirit of God, as far as he could remember, and also of his call to preach and the success the Lord had given to his labors. It was quite new, but was made a blessing, I am persuaded, to us all."—Asbury and Coke, on their way to this Conference, came up from Georgia and visited and preached among the Catawba Indians. Coke records how he was lost in the pathless forest, out of which he found his way by the preacher's mark—the split bush.

Coke explains what he means by the split bush thus: "When a new circuit is formed in these immense forests, the first preacher arriving on the circuit, when he comes to the forks of the roads splits two or three of the bushes on the side of the road the preacher should take, that the preachers who follow him may find their way with ease." In one circuit the wicked discovered the secret and split bushes on the wrong side to deceive the preachers.

It is a question with us whether one's success in life is enhanced as much by the applause of his friends as it is by the hissing of his enemies.—Whitehall Times.

An old bachelor says he always looked under the head of "marriages" for the news of the weak.

For the Advocate.

MESSRS EDITORS: In the ADVOCATE of May 3rd, I see a short communication signed "A Local Preacher" to which I wish to reply. I am not going to discuss specially, the subject of making preachers, but I must think the assertion made, and the spirit manifested are wrong. He has evidently written without due consideration. "Local Preacher" is rather hard on us and I think perhaps after seeing his production in print he may change his mind. I hope nothing I may write will be construed as reflecting on those servants of God [illegible] work for very little. Worthy Pedlers ation," or as wanting in that "charity which envieth not, is not puffed up, and seeketh not its own." I would not, if I could, depreciate their value. Itinerants know very well their services and have often written and spoken of them in terms which ought to be entirely satisfactory. Many of them have been efficient workers in the church, and I am sorry that any want of courtesy should wound the feelings of "A Local Preacher," or any other man who is called of God to preach. An Itinerant should be above giving offence, "A Local Preacher" should be above taking offence to exceptional, sometimes, imaginary cases.

A STARTLING CHARGE.

Here it is, speaking of "making preachers," he says: "Men and Colleges are trying to do it in this age; and a fine education is thought of much more importance than the inbuing influence of the Holy Ghost upon a somewhat rough exterior." If this is so, the N. C. Conference may consider me transferred or located as they please. I cannot remain in a church where such sentiments are likely to prevail. But I think Local Preacher is mistaken. I know that education, where it is not sanctified by divine grace is very easily puffed up, but we have too many noble preachers among us who have worked their way from comparative obscurity, and who now hold the finest positions in our Church, to be frightened by a few pitiable aspirants, who perhaps of much more importance than the imbuing influence of the "Holy Spirit." No, Bro. these old veterans, who were called by the Holy Ghost, and who commenced their labors with the somewhat rough exterior, hold the power, and I should be sorry to think the time would ever come in the Methodist Church, when a worthy man disposed to develop the talents committed to his care as they have done, could not find a place to work, the "bars" notwithstanding

PETER AND JOHN SLANDERED.

As usual, Peter is brought forth as an irrefragable argument against an educated ministry. Poor man, I am truly glad that he is dead and in heaven; where the wicked and the ignorant cease to trouble. Very few men have been slandered so much. For ages this has been going on. The backslider finds him very convenient, and says, I am Peter. The polished ecclesiastical when he wishes to encourage the brethren of "somewhat rough exterior," says why just think of the wonderful works of Peter, while thousands throughout the land, writers and preachers, in justification of their own want of qualifications, scream out Peter, Peter, Peter!

Fine logic. I have not the acuteness to perceive the conclusion. It reminds me of a scene in one of my churches. A good sister was teaching a very young class in Sunday School. "Julia, who made the Ark? With eyes flashing in every direction, she said, "Adam,' No, Adam was the first man, we have passed him. Lenora, you tell me who made the Ark? She looked wonderfully wise for a moment and answered—Adam. O dear me, do let Adam rest. Jimmie, tell these girls who made the Ark. With one eye askant toward me, he exclaimed, confidently, Adam."

Poor little innocents, they were not disposed to so use the wrong man, but knew no better. Perhaps it may be so with some who use Peter. They have nothing else on hand, or think the world will still be deceived into the opinion that Peter was an ignoramus. The times of such ignorance God may have winked at, but now He commands all men to repent. It would be strange indeed after the time Peter went to school to the "Great Teacher," if he were so egregiously illiterate, as some men I wot of, seem to think. The times demanded higher grade of education in our ministry, and hence more than ordinary efforts are being made. This is what has frightened "A Local Preacher" and others. But, begging pardon for the inelegancy of the expression, he is barking up the wrong tree, not only in chasing Peter, who would have had no difficulty in finding admittance among us, but also in his fling at the Itinerants and College men. The laity make the demand. They want intelligent preachers, and ought to have them. The preacher ought to be intellectually superior to those to whom he preaches.

"Cant get over the bars,"—too many already. Climb Bro. climb! yes, that's the word, climb! Others have done so before you. Some of the best men we have found it rough work, but they got over. Many in the local ranks have gotten over too, and demand a higher grade of mental culture. "ITINERANT."

A Long Speech.

The longest speech on record is believed to have been made by N. De [illegible] Columbia, when a measure was pending whose passage would take from many settlers their lands. De Cosmos was in a hopeless minority. The job had been held back till the close of the eve of the session; unless legislation was taken before noon of a certain day the act of confiscation would fail. The day before the expiration of limitation De Cosmos got the floor about ten A. M. and commenced a speech against the bill. Its friends cared little, for they supposed that by one or two o'clock he would be through, and the bill would be put on its passage. One o'clock came and De Cosmos was speaking still—hadn't more than entered on his subject. Two o'clock—he produced a fearful bundle of evidence and insisted on reading it.—The majority began to have a suspicion of the truth—he was going to speak till the next noon and kill the bill. For a while they made merry over it; but as it came on to dusk, they began to be alarmed. They tried interruptions, but soon abandoned them, because each one afforded him a chance to digress and gain time.

They tried to shout him down but that gave him a breathing space, and finally they settled down to watch the combat between strength of will and weakness of body. They gave him no mercy. No adjournment for dinner? no chance to do more than wet his lips with water; no wandering from his subject; no sitting down. Twilight darkened; the gas was lit, members returned [illegible] to dinner in relays, and De Cosmos went on. The speaker, to whom he was addressing himself, was alternately dosing, snoring trying to look wide awke. Day dawned, the majority slipped out in squads, to wash and to get breakfast, and the speaker still held on. It can't be said it was a very logical, eloquent, or sustained speech. There were digressions in it, repetitions also. But still the speaker kept on and at last noon came to a baffled majority, livid with rage and impotence, and a single man, who was triumphant, though his voice had sunk to a hasky whisper, his eyes were almost shut, and were bleared and bloodshot, his legs tottered under him, and his baked lips were cracked and smeared with blood. De Cosmos had spoken twenty six hours, and saved the settlers their lands.

A venerable man of eighty having been asked. Which is the happiest season of life? thus answered the question: When spring comes, and under the influence of the gentle warmth of the atmosphere, the buds commence to show themselves and to turn into flowers, I think to myself, Oh, what a beautiful season is spring! Then when summer comes and covers the trees with thick foliage, when the birds are so happy in singing their pretty songs, I say to myself, O summer is a fine thing! Then when autumn arrives, I see the same trees laden with the finest and most tempting fruits, I cry out, Oh, how magnificent is autumn! And, finally, when the rude and hard winter makes its appearance, and there are neither leaves nor fruits on the trees, then, through their naked branches I look up and perceive, better than I could ever do before, the splendid stars that glitter in the sky.

The Richmond Advocate says: "The Methodists in North Carolina must be a superior race to their brethren in Virginia. Four of the Congressmen from that State are of that "persuasion." Non here.

When the foremost man in this State was mentioned for Congress, he was shocked. 'Virginia had negro suffrage and was just from under the heel of the Yankees, but he prayed that she might be spared the scandal of a Methodist in the Senate of the United States.'—So a Catholic and an Episcopalian represent the four hundred thousand Dissenters in Virginia."

Rev. Mr. Davis writes from Kyoto, Japan, very encouragingly. The Bible is now sold in places where, three years ago, that act would have insured imprisonment. At another, a Christian newspaper has been started by permission of the Government. Two years ago they could hardly find a place to stop over-night; now congregations greet them. At Laredo the church is organized, and holds its meetings in the house of the damio.

Dr. Hopkins on God

The incomprehensibility of God was the subject of the third lecture by Dr. Hopkins before the Yale Divinity School. God is incomprehensible, he said, because His mode of being is different from ours, and just so far as it is different; and again, because He has modes of being that do not come under those laws of thought which regulate our thinking in regard both to other beings and other things. By the law of time we reach unlimited duration in both directions; but that does not compel the law of space we reach abstract infinite unlimited extension; but that does not compel belief in a being that is extended. But by the law of causation, making but a single necessary step, we do reach being that never began to be, and so was uncaused. If the mind passes to absolute infinity of being at any point, he thought it did here. We can know such a being as incomprehensible, but that is all we can know.

The first natural attribute of God, according to Scripture, is His omniscience. He is also declared to be omnipotent. All these natural attributes constitute God the almighty one. This conception of God is not anthropomorphic: though this complaint is frequently made. So far as His natural attributes are concerned, his conception is in harmony with the teachings of modern science.

In the fourth lecture, Dr. Hopkins showed that the Scriptural idea of God is not Pantheistic. The Scriptures represent God as a spirit, and as such, separate from matter; while matter is originated by an act of will. God is a person and this person is not incompatible with infinity. Infinity of perfections is impossibility without personality. God is represented as being Creator, Upholder, and Moral Governor of the universe.

So far as we are in God's image, we can know Him. The qualities of God's personality are the same in essence, at least, with our own. The immutability of God is to be considered [illegible] power, is by contrast necessity, while that of His goodness is by another. The immutability of His character is not that of fate. This immutability requires that He should treat every one according to his works. It requires, also, that He should always hear prayer. While, therefore, the Scriptures retain the stability and grandeur that belong to the reign of an immutable God, they also give us a God who constantly adjusts Himself to the varying condition of His creatures.

Keeping at It.

A man who inherits wealth may begin and worry through three-score years and ten without any very definite object. In driving, in foreign travel, in hunting and fishing, in club houses and society, he may manage to pass away his time; but he will hardly be happy. It seems to be necessary to health that the powers of a man be trained upon some subject, and steadily held there day after day, year after year, while vitality lasts. There may come a time in old age when the fund of vitality will have sunk so low that he can follow no consecutive labor without such a draft upon his forces that sleep cannot restore them. Then, and not before, he should stop work. But so long as a man has vitality to spare upon works, it must be used, or it will become a source of grievous, harassing discontent. The man will not know what to do himself, and when he has reached such a point as that, he is unconsciously digging a grave for himself, or fashioning his own coffin. Life needs a steady channel to run in—regular habits of work and of sleep. It needs steady, stimulating aim—a tendency toward something. An aimless life can never be happy, or, for a long period, healthy. Said a rich widow to a gentleman, still laboring beyond his needs. "Don't stop: keep at it." The words that were in her heart were:

"If my husband had not stopped, he would be alive to-day." And what she thought was doubtless true. A greater shock can hardly befall a man who has been active than that which he experiences when, having relinquished his pursuits, he finds unused time and unused vitality hanging upon his idle hands and mind. The current of his life is thus thrown in eddies, or settled into a sluggish pool, and he begins to die.—Scribner for April.

One of the relics to be exhibited at the Centennial is the pulpit used by Whitfield in his open-air meetings. It was made of pine wood, and can easily be taken to pieces. From this pulpit he is said to have preached over two thousand sermons in the fields in England, Wales, and America. The exhibitor is the American Tract Society.

Keep Preaching

What is it? How "deep" must it be to satisfy critical hearers? How "deep" must it go into the hearts of the people of any congregation that is favored with it? From what depths of the preacher's own knowledge, and wisdom, and grace, and experience must it come up? Jonathan Edwards was a "deep preacher" in the best sense of the word, but we doubt if his sermons would suit a modern audience. But some preachers are so "deep" that no ordinary hearer can measure the depths of their learning, intellect or meaning. They have the breadth of a perpetual fog. Others are like the sea, where there are plenty of huge waves and no soundings. But after all, is this the right standard? Must a minister of Jesus Christ be "deep in the common sense of that word—intellectually, learnedly—in order to have the Master's approval, and a blessing upon his labors? Some deep wells are very dry. Many a profound thinker, like the celebrated John Foster, has been an utter failure in the pulpit. Many a philosophizing theologian, like Dr. Hopkins, of Old Princeton fame, has preached his church empty, and left behind him only a heresy and a controversy.—Christian Intelligencer.

A HEALTHY CHURCH.—It is the mission of a Church to do good. To this end it must be healthy. It is a fact—sorry we are to have to state it—that too many Churches, so called, fall short of doing the work they ought. They are not healthy. Some of them are very rich. During their whole existence some of them have been living at a "poor, dying rate," and they might as well be dead for all the good they accomplish. Their trouble is that they do not observe the laws of health. When a man violates well known health laws he need not be surprised if he becomes weak and emaciated, spends his days in wretchedness, and sinks prematurely to the grave. What is true of th man is true of the Church. Dr. C. [illegible] who is himself a [illegible] that characterize every Church that is in the highest condition of spiritual health." The one is, that they all worship, and the other, that they all work. The first appertains more directly to the heart: the second appertains as well to the head, the hands, and the purse. The fullest combination of the two would almost realize the ideal of Church life in its highest form.

WHAT THE MICROSCOPE REVEALS.—Lewenhoeck tells us of an insect seen with the microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite.

Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand.

Mold is a forest of beautiful trees, with the branches, leaves and fruit.

Butterflies are fully feathered.

Hairs are hollow tubes.

The surface of our bodies is covered with scales like a fish; a single grain of sand would cover one hundred and fifty of these scales, and yet a scale covers five hundred pores. Through these narrow openings the perspiration forces itself like water in a sieve.

Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of living creatures, swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea.

Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing on it, like cows on a meadow.

An Indian missionary, in a speech lately made, said, "Brahmins were trying to evolve the existence of God from nature, but they repudiated Christ and the atonement and revelation, and were bitter enemies of Christianity. They were pure deists, cultured and educated, and were more formidable enemies to Christianity than the old orthodox divines ever dreamed of."

The quarrel between the Rev. Dr. Moran, of Bethany church, Baltimore, and the Bakers pere et fils, respecting the appointment of a steward, has culminated in the resignation of Dr. M. says the Richmond Advocate and the subsequent adoption of a resolution censuring him and endorsing his opponents. The Bakers are rich, and helped build the church.

An aged divine said to his ecclesiastical body, "Brethren, you may desire to know how I have occupied my time during the past year. I will tell you: It took just six months of the year to attend to my own business, committed to me by the Master, and the other six months to let other people's business alone."

Never did there exist a full faith in the Divine Word which did not expand the intellect while it purified the heart, which did not multiply the aims and objects of the understanding while it fixed and simplified those of the desires and feeling.—S. T. Coleridge.

AN OBSCURE SENTENCE.—A good story, no doubt mythical, is told of Jacob Boehme, the cobbler, famous for his profound philosophical works. On his death-bed his disciples came to him, eager to obtain explanations of obscure passages in his writings before he was taken-away. He relieved their difficulties with a single exception. One passage puzzled him, and he said: "My children, when I wrote this I understood its meaning, and no doubt the omniscient God did. He may still remember it, but I have forgotten." A similar incident is told of the German poet Klopstock, which [illegible] from Gottingen to Hamburg, to see him in his old age, and ask him to explain a difficult passage in his works. They were young students, full of enthusiasm. Klopstock received them graciously, read the passage, and then said: "I cannot recollect what I meant when I wrote it; but I remember it was the finest thing I ever wrote, and your cannot do better than devote your lives to the discovery of its meaning."

TRUTHFULNESS TO CHILDREN.—A parent, unlike a poet, is not born—he is made. There are certain things which he has at once to learn, or he will have no more influence over his child than if he were a common stranger. To gain obedience, you must first set yourself to deserve it. Whatever you promise your little one, however small the thing seem to you, and whatever trouble it costs you, perform it. Never let the doubt once enter that innocent mind that you say what you do not mean, or will not act up to what you say. Make as few prohibitory laws as you possibly can, but, once made, keep to them. In what is granted, as in what is denied, compel yourself, however weary, or worried or impatient, to administer always even-handed justice. "Fiat justitia, ruat coelum," is a system much more likely to secure your child's real affection than all the petting and humoring so generally indulged in, to give pleasure or [illegible] Church, by Miss Muloch.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A PAPER.—A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper, because he reads of names and things which are familiar, and he will progress accordigly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Every father must consider that information is connected with advancement. The mother of a family being one of its heads and having a more immediate charge of children, should herself be instructed. A mind occupied becomes fortified against the ills of life, and is braced for emergency. Children amused by reading or study are, of course, more considerate and more easily governed.

The shallow stream rattles along its course; but when it is met and drowned by the majestic tides rolling in from the seas, there is silence on the hills. In the great tide there is the power of more than a hundred rivulets, yet its coming is almost as quiet as the celestial forces that bring it. The tide flows down, and shallow grows the stream; and again the empty clattering goes on. And this is what we wish to say, that things most potent, although demonstrative, as indeed they must be from their effects, are not necessarily noisy. A strong and earnest life need not make what people are in the habit of calling "a fuss." Is is better to know by the lead that strikes, than by the bang of the gun that sends it.—Selected.

The other night a lady in London reminded Mother Stewart that St. Paul advised Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach's sake. "Yes," replied Mother Stewart, "but unless you are sure that you have Timothy's complaint, and can get the same kind of wine that Timothy used, you are not sure that you are following the word of God."

An Englishman has analyzed the causes of railroad accidents, and comes to the conclusion that human machinery is responsible for 41 per cent, of them.; defective signals for 28 per cent.; defective railways for 18 per cent; and defective rolling stock for 13 per cent.

When air balloons were first discovered, some one flippantly asked Dr. Franklin what was the use of it? The philosopher answered the question by asking another. "What is the use of the new-born infant? It may become a man."

A geologist says that he never heard of secondary formations without pleasure—the ladies being the secondary formations, for they were formed after the men.

It is a remarkable fact that, although common sheep delight in verdant fields, religious flocks are not always to have green pastors.

Trinity College Commencement

The Commencement exercises of Trinity College came off on the 7th and 8th instant. The sermon before the Theological Society was preached on Sunday at 11 o'clock, A. M., by Rev. J. R. Griffith of the North Carolina Conference. It was not our pleasure to hear the sermon, bnt there was but one opinion as to its merits. His theme was the call and work of the Christian ministry, which was eminently appropriate for the occasion. The discourse was thoroughly prepared and well delivered. Wednesday at 11½ o'clock, the annnal sermon was preached before the graduating class by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., from Prov. 1: 17. At 8 P. M., the Alumni Association was addressed by Rev. W. C. Willson of our Conference. Thursday was Commencement Day. The interesting exercises began at 10 A. M., with appropriate religious services, after which the Salisbury Band discoursed sweet music to the delight of the vast audience. The salutatory oration was delivered by Wm. Parsons Ivy, of Lenoir, son of Rev. G. W. Ivy, succeeded by the speeches of the graduating class, in the following order, interspersed at brief intervals with charming music by the Salisbury band:

Wisely Chosen, Firmly Held. By James Clay Welborn, of Trinity.

The Centennial Problem. By Shubal Gardner Coltrane, of Trinity.

What is to be Done.—Honorary Oration. By Peter Jefferson Kernodle, of Guilford Co.

Internationalism. By James Franklin Tanner, of Georgia.

The Talent of Evil Doing. By Jos. Wesley Coltrane, of Rockwell.

The Past Lives in the Conscious Present. By Edward Crosby Hackney, of Chatham Co.

Dualism. By Bollin Jones Reynolds, of Leaksville.

After the Victory: By Thomas Marion Cross, of Chatham Co.

The Politician. By George Samuel Bradshaw, of Trinity.

The Statesman. By Wm. Gray Burkhead, of Raleigh.

Methodism then and now. By Nences Elbridge Coltrane, of Trinity.

Enthusiasm. By Wilfred Dent Turner, of Iredell Co.; after which followed the conferring of degrees and the presentation of Bibles and Society Medals to the graduates.

Then came the Valedictory Address by Charles Lee Heitman, of Lexington.

After a recess of 15 minntes, the annual address to the Literary Societies was delivered by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., which closed the exercises of the most brilliant commencement ever witnessed at Trinity College by its oldest and most ardent friends.

It was estimated that the crowd in attendance on Thursday was twenty five hundred. The new chapel, with a seating capacity of more than two thousand, was found insufficient to accommodate the multitude who came, not only from the adjacent country, but from all parts of the State to do honor to this noble institution of learning by their presence and words of approval. While there was a feeling of regret that all could not be comfortably seated, we felt a degree of satisfaction and denominational pride in the fact that it was the most commodious college chapel in the State and in the South, and that we would not have it enlarged or changed in any particular. Its architectural arrangement and its wonderful adaptation for its legitimate uses are so near perfection, without any undue display and extravagance, that any attempted improvement would fail of success. Dr. Talmage, whose opinion is worth as much perhaps as any other public speaker in the whole country, after his sermon on Wednesday, remarked that the acoustics of the chapel were perfect. This is but the opinion of other distinguished orators who were present and took prominent part in the commencement exercises of last year.

There is one fact, however, to which we would call the attention of the Methodists of North Carolina and to all the friends of the institution — In the erection of this chapel and in making other important additions to the college building, a debt of several thousand dollars was contracted, which as yet has not been liquidated We have agents in the field actively canvassing, not only for Trinity, but for Greensboro and Davenport.—They are meeting with good success, but it will of necessity require years of incessant labor to secure the entire amount needed to cancel the debt and place these institutions on a safe and permanent basis without the hearty co-operation of all our preachers and People. There must be unity of action, liberality on the part of all. Trinity, we believe, only needs the first five thousand dollars. A part of this has already been secured by cash, subscriptions and bonds The remainder should by all means be raised during the present year. It can be done and we are encouraged to believe it will. During the past scholastic year there have been one hundred and forty matriculates The prospects for the fall session are bright. New applications are already coming in, and a large increase in patronage is expected.

The sermon of Dr. Talmage was a grand success. We shall attempt no analysis of it It would be unwise in us to undertake so hopeless a task. We were so enraptured with his thrilling eloquence that we did not even so much as take notes. It is enough to say that this distinguished divine, with his national reputation fully met the expectation of all who heard him He preached as Dr. Talmage only can preach. His descriptive powers are unsurpassed—his pictnres are most graphic; but the crowning glory of his preaching is the soul force which sparkles and shines in every sentence. An account of his address, and the commencement exercise proper, together with the president's official report, will appear in a subsequent issue

The Alumni address by Rev. W. C. Willson was received with great favor. His delineation of the past, the present and the future prospects of Trinity was complete and eminently appropriate. After the conclusion of his address, Gov. Brogden and Judge Dick, in response to repeated calls, came forward and made brief impromptn speeches. In the course of their remarks they took occasion to pay a deserved compliment to Dr. Craven touching his ability and the distinguished success which has crowned his labors as president of the College.

The addresses over, the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity enjoyed their annual banquet in the old College chapel. The address of welcome was delivered by Mr. G. S. Bradshaw of Trinity College The members of the fraternity, each with their sweethearts, we take it, and visitors, formed around the table, burdened with the richest collations.—Prayer was then offered by the writer, followed by an oration by Prof. W. Staley of Graham. It was a pleasant evening for the young people, and the old ones too, who were so fortunate as to be present.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev John W North of the North Carolina Conference, and Rev S S Bryant of the Missouri Conference, and the degree of A. M. upon George B Everitt, Esq., of Concord, and others whose names we cannot now call to mind.—From long acquaintance with the operations of Trinity, and as one of her curators, we take pleasure in saying that her prospects were never more flattering than they are at present.

Emory College.

We are in receipt of the annual catalogue of Emory College, Oxford Ga., for 1875-6. The board of trustees, twenty seven in number, is composed of distingnished ministers and laymen from Georgia and Florida. Among the number, we notice the names of Dr. Lovick Pierce, Bishop G. F. Pierce, Dr. Alex Means, Dr. W. H. Potter, Dr. A. G. Haygood, Dr. J. S. Key, Dr. O. L. Smith and Dr. E. H. Myers. Bishop Pierce is President of the board of trustees. The faculty is one of the best in the whole country—no instittution can boast of a better. Rev. Atticus G. Haygood, D. D. is president, and professor of Mental and Moral Science, and Biblical Literature. Rev. G. W. W. Stone, A. M. professor of Mathematics, Rev. A. Means, M.D. D.D, LL D., professor Emeritus of Natnral Science, Rev. O. L. Smith, D.D. professor of English Language and Literature. John M. Doggett, A. M. professor of Greek Language and Literature. J. M. Bonnell, A. M. professor of Natnral Science; and Rufus W. Smith, A. M. principal of the Academic Department. The whole nnmber of matriculates during the scholastic year is 156. Bishop Pierce will preach the annual sermon Snnday July 15. Oration before the Literary Society will be deiivered by Rev. A. W. Wilson, D. D. of Washington City.

The Jnnior sends us an account of the commencement exercises of Davenport Female College, from which we learn that Bishop McTyeire, failed in meeting his engagement to preach the commencement sermon on Wednesday.

We direct attention to the notice of Rev. R. L Abernethy. Those who wish to visit Beanfort will have a most favorable opportunity of doing so on the excursion train which will leave Henry's on the Western Road on the 11th July. The fare will be very low, and all the proceeds over and above actual expenses will be applied to the payment of debts contracted in new college buildings at Rutherford College.

PLEASANT GARDEN.—The Annual Sermon will be preached June 21st at 11 A. M. by Rev S. D. Adams of the North Carolina Conference. At 2 P. M., the Literary Address by John A. Barringer, Esq., of Greensboro. Exercises at night Thursday 25th. 10 A. M., the usual exercises. 2 P. M., an address by Rev. J. Henry Smith, D. D., of Greensboro.

R. P. TROY.

Davenport Female College

The Commencement Exercises at this excellent institution took place on Wednesday and Thursday of last week Bishop McTyeire who was expected to be present and preach the sermon to the graduating class on Wednesday, did not arrive to the great regret and disappointment of all. The address before the College which was intended for Thursday, was delivered on Wednesday morning by the Junior editor of the Advocate—President Robey hoping that the Bishop would arrive in time to preach on Thursday. There was a large audience present on Wednesday, and the kind and courteous attention which they paid must be ascribed, rather to the native politeness of the congregation than to any merit of the speaker.

Following the address, Rev. J. A. Cunninggim explained the method adopted by the Conference to discharge the debts of our Colleges, and the plan of operation worked by himself and Bro Sharpe, as agents The exercises of the morning were interspersed with music by the young ladies on the piano and organ.

At night a concert was given by the young ladies which reflected credit upon the training they had received at the hands of Miss Lelia Robey, daughter of Pres. Robey, and the instructress of music. Both she and her sister possess marked mnsical talent—the latter being gifted with vocal powers that charm by their strength and loveliness. It would occupy more time and space than I have now at command to mention all who are entitled to credit for the entertainment they afforded and the gifts they exhibited. The writer was not present at the concert, to his regret, but heard from reliable lips a report of the pleasant concert.

On Thursday, the Bishop not having arrived, Rev. J. A. Cunninggim took his place and preached a highly appropriate, able and edifying sermon. He is always ready with something instructive and pleasing and the expressions of satisfaction and pleasure were frequent and decided on the part of all who listened to his sermon.

After the sermon. the graduating exercises took place, three young ladies receiving diplomas and reading essays: to wit: Miss Laura Healan—subject, "With the night, come the stars." Miss Ella Nicholson—snbject, "The Ideal." Miss Clara Ivy, subject "Failures," and valedictory addresses. The compositions were exceedingly tasteful and elicited from the audience marked proof of their appreciation.

In addition to the diplomas conferred upon the graduating Senior class, certificates of graduation were also conferred upon four "preps" who have completed the course of studies prescribed in the preparatory department of the school and are entitled to enter the College proper. This is "a new departnre" in the diploma system and it is rightly thonght that the innovation is a good one and will result in much benefit to the younger pupils of the school.

On Thursday night a festival was held in the College Chapel, the hall being handsomely decorated and ice cream and other refreshments served. Young and charming ladies presided at the tables, a large crowd was present and we opine that there were gratifying proceeds which are intended for the purchase of furniture and books for the society library and an organ for the Church in the town.

The entire occasion has been pleasant and profitable and I am more than ever impressed with the importance of liberally supporting the College which has struggled and prolonged its existence in the face of many untoward difficulties and which has done much for Methodism and the general educational interests of this section and will accomplish much greater good if its patronage shall become more liberal.

I write hastily in order to catch the mail and am compelled to postpone for another issue a more extended account of the commencement and the College and of the beautiful town and section in which it is located.

I leave to morrow for Hickory, to attend the Shelby District Conference, and will send an accnnt of the proceedings for the next issne of the ADVOCATE.

St. Paul Baptized Standing Up.

A correspondent of the New Orleans Advocate has this to say in reference to Paul's Baptism:

Of all the apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ, the baptism of only one is explicitly mentioned. This is a remarkable fact in view of the hue and cry of modern times about baptism. It cannot be proven by scriptural statement that the original "twelve" were baptized with water. However, the baptism of Paul is recorded; and the language employed and circumstances detailed warrant the belief that he was "baptized standing up." The fact of his baptism is twice mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. In the first instauce it reads: "And he received sight forthwith, and arose and was baptized.' In the second instance the record says: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." 'Arose and 'arise' are translations of the participle anastas, which is the aorist participle of the verb compounded of ana, up, and istemi, stand—stand up. With these definitions the first quotation may be read: 'And having stood up, he was baptized.' There is but one conjunction ('and') in the Greek. In the second quotation there is no conjunction ('and') between 'stand up' and 'be baptized.' Besides, the verb 'baptize' is in the aorist infinitive, and not in the nnperative The Latin is baptizare. With these explanations the passage will read: "Stand up to be baptized, and to wash away thy sin," etc

St. Paul was baptized 'in the house of Judas,' on 'the street which is called straight,' in the city of Damascus. While yet blind, Paul had a vision in which he saw a man 'named Ananias coming in where he was. This vision was actually fulfilled. 'Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and, puttfng his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, • • • hath sent me, that thou might est receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forth with; and, having stood up' (in the house where he had been for there days,) 'he was baptized.'

The mode of his baptism is settled by the use of two words. The words are baptidzo and louo. However, louo is united with apo in this use of it. The reading is as follows: 'Anastas baptisai, kai apolousai tas hamartias sou, etc; which is translated: 'Stand up to be baptized and to wash from thy sins.' Here it is very clear that baptidzo and louo are interchangeable If the words are equal, as here employed, to find the meaning of one settles the meaning of the other. The meaning of louo is found, as used, in the instance of the Philippian jailor. It reads: 'And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes' The original reads: 'Elousen apoton plegon'—he washed from the stripes only, he did not wash the whole body; therefore the water was applied to the stripes, and not the stripes to the water. Now this word—louo, wash—is interchanged with baptidzo in Paul's baptism; and as louo means the application of the cleansing element to the subject, and not the subject to the element, and as Paul was baptized by the water applied to him in the house of Judas while he was standing up, therefore Paul was baptized by pouring. And in the manner of ponring the water upon Paul, the work of the Holy Ghost, as to mode, was symbolized. Accordingly the Holy Ghost was poured upon him until he was filled.'

So long as we have such example as is farnished in the conduct of the great apostle to the Gentiles we are upon solid and safe principles in administering baptism by ponring upon subjects, either standing, sitting or kneeling.

MESSRS EDITORS: Last week while on the wing, we paused in Greensboro' most propitionsly—it being "Commencement at Greensboro' Female College. Always proud to pay our respects to the institution we love so much, of corse it was our intention to tarry until the exercises closed. Pleasant acquaintances and old friends were numerous and warmly greeting us, we most happily fell into the general excitement incident to an occasion so intensely interesting. Unfortunately we did not arrive in time to hear the address of Maj. Gales of Raleigh, N. C.

Judges pronounced it masterly, in every respect. Maj. Gales—though, not a Methodist, is a christian and a patriot, an orator and a scholar, and here, we would like to say that he is but a reflex of his noble, elegant father, the late Weston Raleigh Gales, whom to know was to admire and to love him.

At 8 P. M. Dr. Duncan, President of R. M. College Va preached in the College chapel to a large and very attentive audience. Dr. Duncan is one of the finest pulpit orators in the States. His heart and his mind are beyond measure, and seem to rest on his will in perfect poise. The Dr. is the right man in the right place, whether preaching to girls of G. F. C. or "red taping" the boys of Asheland. The style and tenor of his sermon were elegantly adapted to the peerless characters of the fair daughters of N. C. His theme was "The destiny God would have us attain, by the diligence as directed in his word." We shall never forget his lessons of truth. Next morning the writer found himself seated in the Chapel near the rostrnm at least half an honr in advance of the appointed time for assembling. The weather was delightfully charming—the air bracing, balmy—sweet with the fragrance of flowers and choral with the music of birds—while the very foliage seemed to tremble with emotions of pleasure.

Just at 10 A. M. the President of the College, Rev. T. M. Jones, D. D. led up the aisle the senior class—numbering 15 young ladies, who ascended the rostrnm amid the timely and whole souled applanse of the dense crowd. The exercises were opened with an earnest prayer by Rev. W M. Jordan, of the S. C. Conference. Next on the programme was the reading of essays by the young ladies' of the graduating class—as a relief, fine classical music, superintended by Prof. Hahr, was interspersed—greatly to the enjoyment of the crowd. These essays were read most charmingly—the enunciation clear and full of melody. They were beautiful in composition and rich in thought. The East (as far as Wilmington,) and the West stood forth in unconscions rivalry making us, more than ever before, appreciate education and accomplishments in woman. Educate the women—it matters not who rules the nation If they be staminated in wisdom, knowledge and virtue—they will govern in the world whether we elect Wings, Democrats, Conservatives or Radicals.

Next in order was the distribution of diplomas and Bibles by the President.

Dr. Jones then presented the cases with a most beautiful Cactus Phyllanthoicles, in full perfection—bearing some dozen or more large blossoms—not one withered, or fading—perfect types of the seniors, in delicateness of tissnes, richness of hues, and sweetest fragrance It seems that the Floral donor Miss Kirkman must have had in her mind a poetical simile—that the splendid plant was but a type of those fair and lovely girls who were then on the eve of launching their frail barques on a treacherous sea where so much is dark and fearful.

Dr. Jones performed his task in a highly polished manner. The Rev. F. Bryant, of the Missouri Conference was now introduced to, and addressed the audience. His speech was short, animated and as appropriate as we ever heard.

At 8 P. M the concert opened, and for two and a half hours a packed house was delighted.

Prof. Hahr and the young ladies' did themselves great credit on this occasion—the rendering of every piece seemed to be faultless. We have now tried to give a plain statement of facts. The commencement was a round success.

We heartily commend G. F. C. to all within reach of her blessings.

With Dr. Jones at the head—an unsurpassed corps of teachers, with all the advantages and appliances, she holds in her impartial hands a sanctified education for thonsands May God bless her with the happiness of bestowing it.

A VISITOR.

Thunder and Eloquence.

The manner in which Whitefield once turned a thunder storm to his purpose has been thus narrated. Before he commenced his sermon, long, darkening columns crowded the bright, sunny sky of the morning, and swept their dull shadows over the building, in fearful augury of the storm.

His text was: 'Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able.' 'See that emblem of human life,' said he, pointing to a shadow that was flitting across the floor. 'It passed for a moment, and concealed the brightness of heaven from our view; but it was gone. And where will ye be, my hearers, when your lives have passed away like that dark cloud? O my dear friends. I see thousands sitting attentive, with their eyes fixed on the poor, unworthy preacher. In a few days we shall all meet at the judgment seat of Christ. We shall form a part of that vast assembly that will gather before the throne, and every eye will behold the Judge. With a voice whose call you must abide and answer, he will inquire whether on earth you strove to enter in at the strait gate; whether you were supremely devoted to God; whether your hearts were absorbed in him. My blood runs cold when I think how many of you will then seek to enter in, and will not be able. Oh, what plea can you make before the Judge of the whole earth? Can you say it has been your whole endeavor to mortify the flesh, with its affections and lusts? that your life has been one long effort to do the will of God? No! You must answer: I made myself easy in the world by flattering myself that all would end well; but I have deceived my own soul, and am lost.

'You, O false and hollow Christian, of what avail will it be that you have done many things; that you have read much in the sacred word; that you have made long prayers; that you have attended religious duties, and appeared holy in the eyes of men? What will all this be if, instead of loving him supremely, you have been supposing you should exalt yonrself in heaven by acts really polluted and unholy?'

His eye gradually lighted up as he proceeded, till toward the close it seemed to sparkle with celestial fire.

'Oh, sinner,' he oxclaimed, 'by all your hopes of happiness, I beseech you to repent. Let not the wrath of God be awakened. Let not the fires of eternity be kindled against you See there!' said he, pointing at the lightning, which played on the corner of the pulpit. 'Tis a glance from the angry eye of Jehovah! Hark!' continned he, raising his finger in a listening attitude, as the distant thnnder grew louder and louder, and broke in one tremendons crash over the building. 'It was the voice of the Almighty as he passed by in his anger.'

As the sound died away he covered his face with his hands and knelt beside his pulpit, apparently lost in inward and intense prayer. The storm passed rapidly away, and, the sun bursting forth in his might, threw across the heavens a magnificent arch of peace. Rising and pointing to the beautiful object, he exclaimed: 'Look upon the rainbow, and praise him that made it. Very beautiful is the brightness thereof. It compasseth the heavens about with its glory, and the hands of the Most High have bended it.'

Religious Intelligence.

The Baptists of Connecticut have collected $25,000 toward the proposed Centennial fund of $100,000 for Suffield Institnte.

In England the total number of the clergy of the Established Church is 23,738, as follows: "Dignitaries, 172, incumbents, 13,300; curates, 5,-765; masters in schools, 700; chaplains, heads of training schools, etc., 465; unattached, 2,893; clerical fellows in universities, chaplains in India, and missionaries, 434."

Lin Yeet, an island, had a short visit from Dr. Medhurst in 1835, as he was on his way to North China, who distributed books and tracts. Some years after some of the Lan-Yeet people visited Foochow and were delighted to find the missionaries preaching the same doctrines they had read in the little books and had learned to love. A mission was soon established on the island, which has grown prosperously, and those who as boys read the tracts given by Dr. Medhurst are now efficient native preachers.

The Spanish Epoca declares that the Cortes will approve the principle of religious toleration. The Vatican will be compelled to accept it. But the Espana says it is authorized by the papal nuncio and the Archbishop of Toledo to deny the statement that the Vatican ever granted Senor Sagasta a ministry the least concession in relation to liberty of public worship. Of course it never did, and never would. It only accepts seemingly the situation when it cannot help it and then does its best to change it.

Dr S. Wells Williams, of Peking, has recently published the concluding portions of his "Syllabic Dictionary of the Chinese Language," an immense work, on which he has been engaged for forty years. The amonnt of labor he has performed, single-handed, may be estimated when it is known that the dictionary contains abont 53,000 examples and phrases, grouped under 10,094 articles, the number of separate characters given being 12,577. Not only is the Peking pronnnciation given, but also that of Shanghai, Amoy and Canton. This magnificent achievement of Christian scholarship, incited and sustained by Christian love, is of inestimable value

A burial bill has jnst been carried at Florence, after a fourteen years' conflict. The project first took shape in the mind of Francisco Madiai. To save the persecuted Italian evangelicals from the indignities to which they were subjected in the public grave-yards, he started a subscription for a special cemetery for the native Protestants of Florence. Very little came of the effort till Mr. Macdongall, of the Scotch Free Church, and his friends took up the scheme and obtained £1,000 from the friends of Italy. Twice they purchased grounds in the vicinity of Florence, and twice had to sell it, through priestly opposition. But now, by a vote of 13 to 4, the city has forbidden any further interference.

We find in the Missionary Herald a brief summary of the great work of the London Society. The fields in which this veteran association is engaged are China, North India, South India, Travancore, Madagascar, South Africa, West Indies and Polynesia. The strongest mission is, of course, that on the Island of Madagascar. Here 33 English missionaries, 201 native ordained ministers, and 2,637 native preachers are engaged in the work, and around them are gathered 63,896 church members and 246,376 native adherents. The totals of 8 mission fields are as follows: English missionaries, 155; native ordained ministers, 481; native preachers, 3,446; church members, 94,212; native adherents, 403,-553; pupils in school—boys 36,571, girls 25,354.

According to the Deutsche Merkur, the most of the Old Catholic associations have grown stronger during the year, some of them very considerably, and many new ones have been formed. The greatest progress has been made in Baden, where the influence of Wessenbnrg and Hirscher is still felt, and where the State has consistently protected the reformers. Old Catholicism has made great progress in the past year. Whole parishes have embraced it, and churches and their endowments have fallen in for its use. If the movement continues to spread on a similar scale, we may yet see a national Catholic Church in Baden and an Old Catholic Archbishop of Freibnrg. In Writemberg the ecclesastical peace has been maintained throughont the year; but everything seems to indicate that the bolligerent faction of the clergy is fast losing patience.

We are encouraged by the action of the Board of Missions and the College of Bishops in providing for an Episcopal visit to China. Bishop Marvin will go after visiting the three conferences on the Pacific coast. We regard this movement as an expression of the awakening zeal of the church respecting the mission work. Our church has too long held the position of spectator, while other branches of the church of Christ have been extending among the natives the kingdom of the Redeemer. Bishop Keener is already in Mexico. The activity of our bishops should be an inspiration to the entire body of the ministry, and should arouse the liberality of the church.—Texas Advocate.

A Rare Chance.

DEAR BROTHER BOBBITT: We will run an excursion train from Henry's on the Western road to Beanfort, N. C. on Tnesday 11th of July, in the interest of our new College House. The fare will be only obont $5 or $6 from Henry's, decreasing as we go down the road.

Persons can have tickets stamped at Morehead City, and remain a week or so at Beaufort, if they choose.

Yours truly,

I have used it exclusively for several years in my family, and find that I know of nothing so effectual for checking and curing Coughs and Colds. Having had occasion frequently to call the attention of the public to the subject of medicines, I have also recommended Ayer's Cherry Pectoral to others, who, in every instance, have learned to value it as highly as myself, and have since used it in their families. I have also recommended it to the students of Pacific University, and have found it to be the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, and Bronchitis, with which they are troubled, that I have ever known. I shall continue to recommend it on all suitable occasions, and feel confident that it will prove as beneficial to others as it has to me and my family. Rev. J. H. Incredulity.

How patent is this trait of the human ind! The Bible refers to it and says: Were an angel to come down from heaven, would not believe." It is the case to day. We are disposed to doubt the sincerity of our best friends and so fearfully ged that it often leads to misanthropy.

This is particularly applicable to the virtues of many truly valuable remedial agents, however strong they may be endorsed.

Reader! If you have Dyspepsia, Fever and Ague, Sick Headache, Torpid Liver, Bilious Colic Kidney disease, Flatulence, Costiveness Pain in the Bowels or General Debility, and decide to use Dr. Pierce's Liver Pills which we can safely say will furnish you with hundreds of testimonies from the most reliable men and women in the country who have been cured by them, of whom you can make direct inquiry. It will cost you but a postage stamp the proprietor solicits the investigation of all who need a truly valuable medicine.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment may be used to advantage where my Liniment is favorable. In cases of severe cramps and pains in the stomach, it is undoubtedly the best article that can be used internally.

Habitual constipation leads to the following results: Inflammation of the kidneys, sick and nervous headache, biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, piles, loss of appetite and strength in short a weight may be avoided by being regular in your habits and taking say one of Parsons' Purgative Pills regularly for four or six weeks.

Mrs. Marina Young, widow of the late Wright Young, died at her residence in Franklin Co., N. C., on 31st May 1876, at 7 P. M. She was willing to die.

Mrs. Nancy, consort of Reuben Taylor, died at her husband's residence in Granville co., N. C., on the 17th Dec. 1875, aged about 65 years, and from 1871 to her death was an acceptable member of the church.

For many years her bodily afflictions, at times, were very great, but her patience, resignation and cheerfulness under them, showed abundantly the sustaining grace of God, and her triumphant death proved most clearly that she had not followed cunningly devised fables but had lived and believed to the saving of the soul.

Yes, the christian's course is run,
Ended is the glorious strife;
Fought the fight, the work is done,
Death is swallowed up of life!

Mrs Nancy Bryant, wife of Redding Bryant of Sampson Co., N. C., died suddenly, April 16th 1876 in her 52 year. She made a profession of religion, and attached herself to the M. E. Church at Goshen in her 17th year, under the ministry of the Rev. Henry Gray, and ever after lived a consistent and devoted christian life, and was greatly beloved by all who knew her. She was the mother of twelve children six of whom preceded her to the world of spirits, all the rest except one are members of the church and trying to walk in her footsteps.

May they, together with her bereaved husband, meet again where there will be no more separation!

Died in Craven county, N. C., on Sunday 30 1875, Mrs Elizabeth Gracie, wife of Mr H S Gracie in her fiftieth year sister Mrs Lydia Bell for many years a member of the Methodist Church and adorned her profession with meekness and charity, with a spotless life and Godly conversation. As a neighbor she was social and kind and had many warm personal friends, as a christian she was ever ready with her heart and hand in promoting the cause of Christ. It was a great pleasure in entertaining the servants of Christ and preachers always found her house a hospitable welcome. She leaves a husband to mourn her loss and we all miss her in the community, but have reason to believe the stormy Jordan of death at last found her and is resting on the other side of Eden from all her labors.

C.

Mr. Jesse Council was born in Davie county, joined the M. E. Church in 1831 and died 7th of May 1876 commenced life poor in money, but rich in the graces of natural endowments. He was elected of sin under the ministry of Rev. Council and converted to God. Thus natural endowments were added the graces of a new and spiritual life, which ever after adorned his character. He was a great christian, and a devoted Methodist. The Methodism of liberality in him richly. He was a steward in which he many years and never allowed church to fall behind with the pastor's support in full.

His children are all converted and are members of the church. Brother Council sent roll from district for several years which greatly by undermined his strength so that he was confined to his room for months and sixty days he read with us New Year's day we remarked to his family in the last New Year's day we shall gather on earth.' As he approached the final hour, he saith grew and he remained confident in God, and full of the assurance of hope. Armed with a divine supply, he met approaching death with the confidence of an assured victor, saying to his children who were weeping around him: "I hope you may all die as I am dying." I am not to go home." was the expression frequently falling from his lips. How is it with you now? was addressed to him by one of his children, during his struggle with death. He answered, "All is well, thank God I—praise him for it." Thus triumphantly passed Bro. Jesse Clemmont to his reward with the saints in light.

THE CASTLE BUILDER.

A gentle boy, with soft and silken locks,
A dreamy boy, with brown and tender eyes,
A castle-builder, with his wooden blocks,
And towers that touch imaginary skies.

A fearless rider on his father's knee,
An eager listener unto stories told
At the Round Table of the nursery,
Of heroes and adventures manifold.

There will be other towers for thee to build;
There will be other steeds for thee to ride;
There will be other legends, and all filled
With greater marvels, and more glorified.

Build on, and make thy castles high and fair,
Rising and reaching upward to the skies;
Listen to voices in the upper-air,
Nor lose thy simple faith in mysteries.

Lesson-hymn, 642.

PRAY ON MY PLATE TOO.—A little bright eyed three year old was seated in his high chair at the dinner table. Mamma had arranged the little uneasy, while for the moment his sprightliness and fun had made him observed of all the family. She had placed him snugly up to the table, pinned on his bib, and succeeded in getting his little mischievous hands quiet, and making him "hush," when the father proceeded to ask the blessing. While this was in progress our little chubby made a discovery. It was that all the plates on the table, except his own little plate, were in one pile at "papa's place," and as it seemed to him, were put there to get the benefit of the solemn ceremony. So, scarcely waiting for the "amen" he held out his own plate in both hands, saying: "Please, papa, pray on my plate too." May that little fellow always be just so eager to share the benefit of his father's prayers.

Rural and Domestic.

The Herald of Health recommends the frequent anointing of the body with cocoa butter in scarlet and other fevers. It is said to lower the temperature of the body, and hasten the desquamation, besides producing a soothing and refreshing effect on the patient.

CURING CORN FODDER.—A method of curing partly dried corn fodder is to cut it with a fodder cutter into chaff, and mix it with straw cut in the same manner, then, pack it away in a mow, tramping it down closely. A little salt is scattered among the layers as they are packed in. When thus put up fermentation takes place, and a gentle heat is produced, which improves the straw, making the whole equal and even in flavor, so that it is readily eaten by cattle or horses. Those who have the material might usefully prepare a quantity of fodder in this way as an experiment. American Agriculturist.

CAUSE OF HOG CHOLERA.—A correspondent of the Prairie Farmer reaches the main cause of this troublesome disease when he writes: "It is my candid opinion that our running streams are the greatest agents for carrying and spreading this disease, and that so long as there is a lot of cholera hogs allowed to have access to any running stream, so long will all hogs that have access to the same stream, below where the diseased hogs are, be in jeopardy. I have as yet, failed to hear of any hogs dying with the cholera that were not allowed to run at large, nor to drink from a running stream (unless a spring or near the source of a stream), nor in any way come in contact with diseased hogs, while thousands of dollars' worth of hogs have been lost by this disease within a small range, all of which obtained their water from streams of running water.

TRAINING A HEIFER TO MILK.—Cows usually become addicted to kicking when heifers, from being milked by abusive milkers I have never seen an old cow become a kicker unless abused. Instead of cows being averse to being milked when giving a large quantity, I have ever found it the reverse. When pasturage is good, and cows come home at night with udders distended with milk, they seem grateful to have it removed. Milking a heifer for the first time requires patience, for they will almost invariably kick. In such a case put a broad strap around their body, just in front of the udder, and buckle it up moderately tight, and as soon as she gets quiet (for she may dance around a little at first) take your pail, sit down and go to milking, for she is as helpless as a kitten. Do not attempt to use a rope instead of a strap, for it will not answer. This is a much better method than tying the legs, etc., as it does not hurt the animal in the least. A few applications of the strap, with plenty of patience and kindness, will cure the most obstinate case.—Farm and Stock Journal.

How and When to Salt Dairy Cows.

I would say that, until, five or six years ago, I had the old-fashioned idea that to throw them a handful of salt once a week along a path in the pasture was all they required. About that time my attention was called to the fact that once a week, for a couple of days after salting, there was an increase in the quantity of milk. Acting on this suggestion, I tried salting twice a week, and found a decided improvement. I then thought that if twice a week was good, perhaps every other day would be better. Here, again my attention was called to the fact that on the days they were salted they gave more than on the other days. I milk some eight or ten of my cows myself, so that I note these things more closely than I otherwise would. I therefore concluded to try it every day, and liked the result, and noticed that when they missed their salt there would be a decrease in the milk. When salted every day, a very small amount will do, say a tablespoonful just before they are turned out of the stable in the morning. I tried salting in the evening in the stable, but found that had a tendency to shrink the flow of milk; so, after several trials, I gave that up. In trying the above experiments it was not for a period of a few days or weeks, but of a year or two.

Another thing: I find that the corn I feed my cows (which I grind and rescald to mash,) if it is salted, will decrease the precentage of cream, all other feed being just the same. The reason, I presume, is that the salt in this case has a tendency to run more to fat than to the production of milk—William S. Nivins, in Rural World.

The Evil Fruits of weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopœia or out of it. A wineglassfull of the Bitters should be taken before each meal.

Answers to Corespondents.

In answer to "Alphabetical," in your last issue, for a remedy for consumption in its first stages I can recommend Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," if taken according to directions, for it has been thoroughly tried in my family, and the results were glorious. "Alphabetical" must not expect one bottle to do the work—my wife took three bottles before she could discover any change, but after the third bottle every dose seemed to strengthen the lungs, and now she is well and hearty. If "Alphabetical" will write to me I will get witnesses to the above

THE

Buffalo Lithia Waters

Remarkable relief of GRAVEL, and still more remarkable relief of DYSPEPSIA of thirty years standing—A man who for years lived upon Crackers and Tea now eats Bacon, Cabbage, Turnips, &c.

Case of Capt. James Covington, of Halifax county, Virginia:

MT LAUREL, HALIFAX CO., VA. Feb. 9, 1876.

COL. T. F. GOODE:

Dear Sir.—Some eighteen months ago, I was attacked by a very painful affection of the bladder. Under the treatment of two physicians of high standing, I grew steadily worse, until my sufferings were beyond description, and I was compelled to resort to morphia almost constantly for relief. I was unable to give any attention to my business, and had despaired of relief from any source, when in September last I was advised to try the Buffalo Lithia Water.

Though within less than a day's ride of the Spring, my condition was such that I was unable to get there, and consequently sent for the water and used it at home. After using it for a few days, I was so far relieved that I could do without the morphia, and continued to improve for some six weeks, when I had an attack of great violence from which I was relieved by the discharge of a large gravel, since which I have discharged three smaller ones, with but slight pain. I am now able to ride on horseback or to walk at pleasure, and I am now attending regularly to my business affairs.

For thirty years I had been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and forfifteen years I had been throwing up yellow water from my stomach; for five years I had been unable to eat meat or vegetables of any kind, and during that period I lived entirely upon tea and crackers, and other similar articles.

In taking the water for Gravel, I was relieved of the Dyspepsia. I now eat bacon, cabbage, turnips and any thing else that I want, without inconvenience.

I believe the Buffalo Lithia Waters to be all that is claimed for them.

Very respectfully,
JAMES COVINGTON.

(In the above, Capt. Covington has added somewhat to his statement as first published.)

Statement of Dr. J. C. Coleman, of Halifax County, Virginia, a former surgeon in the U. S. Navy, as to the above case:

Medicine affording Capt. J. Covington no relief, I suggested to him a trial of the Buffalo Lithia Water, with the remarkable results which he has above stated. Neither his previous condition nor the extent of the benefit which he derived from the water is in the slightest degree over stated by him."

Religion and Doctrine

BY JOHN HAY.

He stood before the Sanhedrim
The scowling rabble cursed at him
He recked of not of their praise, or blame
There was no fear, there was no shame
For upon one whose dazzled eyes
The whole world poured its vast surprise
The open heaven was far too near
His first day's light too sweet and clear
To let him waste his new-gained ken
On the hate clouded face of men.

But still they questioned "Who art thou?"
What hast thou been? What art thou now
Thou art not he who yesterday
Sat here and begged beside the way
For he was blind.

— [illegible]

He still the story over and o'er:
It was his full heart's only lore
A prophet on the Sabbath day
Had touched his sightless eyes with clay.
And made him see who had been blind
Their words passed by him like the wind
Which raves and howls, but cannot shock
The hundred fathom-rooted rock.

Their threats and fury all went wide.
They could not ton h his flinty pride.
Their sneers at Jesus and his band,
Nameless and shameless in the land
Their boast of Moses and his Lord—
And could not change him by one word.

[illegible]

They were all doctors of renown,
The great men of a famous town.
With deep brows, wrinkled, proud, and wise
Beneath their wide phylacteries;
The wisdom of the East was theirs,
And hoary crowned their silver hairs
The rash they heeded and laughed to scorn
Was all unlearned, poor, and humbly born
But he knew better far than they
What came to him that Sabbath day
And what the Christ had done for him
He knew and not the Sanhedrim

SKETCHES OF THE PIONEER METHODISTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

BY REV. H. T. HUDSON.

NUMBER 11.

Methodism in the Catawba region—Daniel Asbury—William Gassaway and James Russel

As early as 1790 Methodism began to spread up the valley of the Catawba river. Two circuits were formed this year, viz: the Lincoln and Catawba circuits These circuits embraced about the same territory now included in the Shelby District extending over eight counties. At this period the Catawba country was almost a pathless wilderness. The great fertility of the bottom land lying along the meandering river attracted emigrants, who began to form settlements, clear out the forest and turn the wild regions into fruitful farms. The tribes of the Catawba, Cherokee and Creek Indians were skulking about in the Western forest and mountain coves, watching with zealous feelings the encroachment of "the pale face men." The new settlers had to be on the alert, carrying the loaded rifle ready to protect themselves against the assault of wild beast or prowling savage.

DANIEL ASBURY,

assisted by Jesse Richardson, was the first and most prominent pioneer of Methodism in the Catawba region.—He came to the Lincoln circuit in 1790—just 86 years ago, and but a few years after the close of the Revolutionary War. He was born in Fairfax county, Virginia, in 1762. After passing through a variety of hardships during the Revolutionary War he was made a partaker of the great salvation, and in 1786 he was admitted into the traveling ministry, a member of the South Carolina Conference.—His sincerity and the exceeding simplicity of his manners commended him to the friends of Jesus, and marked him as a man deeply devoted to God With the exception of nine years, in which he was located, he labored in the vineyard of his Lord as a traveling preacher, from 1786 to 1824, when he took a superannuated relation. During all this time our beloved brother gave unequivocal testimony of his deep devotion to God and the utmost fidelity in his service. His death was peaceful. Returning from a walk into the yard, he looked up to heaven with a smile on his countenance, uttered a few words and sank away into the arms of death, leaving behind him a sweet savour of Christ."—Minutes for 1826. He was properly the real pioneer of Methodism in Western Carolina. He kept a journal of his travels, containing an account of the spread of Methodistic principles in this State; but this can not be found or rather is supposed to be among the records of the South Carolina Conference. Dr. Doub in his Historical Incidents: "Mr. Asbury and my father were very intimate and frequently held meetings together.—He lived in the county of Lincoln, not far from Beattie's Ford on the Catawba river. My father sometimes visited him (although it was nearly a hundred miles off) and held meetings among the Germans of that county, preaching in German in the morning, and the same sermon in English in the evening. Their joint labors were instrumental in the awakening and conversion of many persons and forming them into classes; and thus Methodism was introduced into several sections of Lincoln county. Mr. Asbury spent much of his itinerant life in the Western portion of North Carolina, and may be considered as the apostle of Methodism in that region. He was a very pious, holy and devoted Christian. His son (the late Rev. Henry Asbury) informed me that his father was born on Sunday, converted on Sunday, and died peacefully and triumphantly on Sunday. Mr. Asbury was one of the most laborious ministers of his day, and was very successful in introducing Methodism wherever he labored." I have been recently informed that while Daniel Asbury was preaching near Rutherfordton, he was arrested on a warrant sworn out by a Hardshell Baptist preacher and charged with heresy—such heresy, I suppose, as St. Paul preached, which may be found by consulting the doctrines of the New Testament—and tried before a magistrate well known in that county by the name of Hampton. Hampton being a man that understood his business and well disposed towards the Methodists, dismissed the case with contempt for the would be persecutor, and then turned to Asbury and invited him to preach at his house, giving him assurance that he would arrest any man who offered to disturb him Asbury was a man of remarkable coolness and self possession. While standing in the door of a private residence and preaching, on one occasion in Lincoln county, a hawk dashed down among the chickens. Asbury jerked down a rifle hanging in a rack above the door, killed the hawk, put back the gun, and then proceeded with his sermon without any disturbance. It is well known that the late Henry Asbury, a prominent local preacher, whose labors and influence have done so much in building up Methodism in Lincoln county, was a son of Daniel Asbury. His grand children are numerous and all worthy members of the Methodist Church.—I have been recently informed by Isaac Lowe, Esq., a prominent Methodist now living near Beattie's Ford, Catawba river, that the first Methodist Church ever built in Lincoln county, was located at a place called "Grassy Branch." And on this spot, tradition says, was the first camp-meeting ever held on the American continent. The truth of this statement, however, has not been sufficiently established to satisfy my own mind, and consequently will be reserved for future investigation.

WILLIAM GASSAWAY

is remembered by the old Methodists as one of the princes in Israel, whose labors did much to build up Methodism in the Lincoln and Catawba country. "He was one of those lowly men whom Methodism so often rescued from vice and obscurity, and made princes in Israel—a wild, profligate youth, a hard drinker, a formidable pugilist, a famous fiddler in baccanalian scenes, and afterwards as ardent a saint and apostle." The Gospel preached by Methodist preachers stopped him in his wild career and changed him into an apostolic itinerant His frolicking companions said: "What shall we do for a fiddler. He is gone—The Methodists have got him—He will never play the fiddle, or drink, or fight any more." Joining the Methodists, he laid aside his fiddle, dashed from his lips the cup of sparkling wine, and entered into the good light of faith: first becoming a stirring exhorter, then an effective local preacher, and finally a heroic pioneer of Methodism; traveling about a quarter of a century as a laborious and successful itinerant in the Western portion of North Carolina and much more in South Carolina. Gassaway had the honor of calling out to the field of the itinerancy the eloquent and distinguished Bishop Capers, who speaks of him as "that most godly man and best of ministers." Bishop Capers began his fruitful ministry by riding a circuit with William Gassaway and "exhorting" after his sermons.

JAMES RUSSEL

was another of those lowly young men reached by the long arm of the Methodist ministry and brought up out of the dark pit of obscurity, ignorance, poverty and sin, and polished on the revolving wheel of the itinerancy until he glowed and sparkled as a brilliant star in the firmament of the Gospel. He was a native of Western Carolina, being born in Mecklenburg county in 1785. He was left a poor, uneducated orphan boy to work his way up as best he could. Dropped as a lamb solitary and alone in a pathless wilderness infested by an enemy, that goeth about as a roaring lion, he was providentially found by the itinerant shepherds, who were climbing the hills and mountains seeking the lost sheep and lambs of Israel. So illiterate was Russel that he failed on his first application to get license to exhort. But perseverance and the promise of his natural gifts finally enabled him to succeed in getting license as a preacher; and he started on his circuit, carrying around with him a spelling book and learning from the children where he lodged the rudimentary elements of education. He soon became a good English scholar, commanding by his natural eloquence the admiration of the learned and the illiterate. He became a shining star among his brethren of the South Carolina Conference, and famous in three States as one of the most powerful preachers of his day. It is said that when he preached he had great power to move, melt and sway his congregation. "He could move," says one who knew him, "a multitude of five thousand hearers at a camp meeting with the ease of one born to command, and with the overwhelming power of an avelanche." Thousands of souls won from Satan to Christ by his ministry are the shining testimonials of his wonderful preaching power.

Dr Lovick Pierce.

A correspondent of the Southern Christian Advocate of June 6th, writes thus of a great sermon recently preached in Sparta Ga., by Dr. Pierce. He is a grand preacher and we wish every body could hear him as he stands on the verge of heaven:

The almost universal talk in our town to-day is the great sermon Dr. Pierce preached in the Methodist Church yesterday morning. The only other sermon preached by him this year was at Culverton, March 12th So long a time between his sermons had never intervened before. These eleven weeks he had spent in his room and on his bed, under painful but patient suffering constantly looking and waiting for the summons to depart and rest from his labors.

We all seriously feared that we would never again see him in the pulpit. Imagine our surprise, when on Sunday morning, without any previous notice we saw him enter the church and with hesitating step ascend the pulpit He had a message from God and he had come to deliver it. We thought of the lines,

"Redeeming love has been my theme,
And shall be till I die."

The words of his text were: If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1, 6 7.

I cannot attempt a synopsis of the sermon It was too heart searching and soul-stirring, too grand from beginning to end, for me to abridge and do it justice. The only visible signs of decline were in his wasted form and feeble voice. At first some apprehension was felt that he would fail to be heard, but, as he advanced, his voice so increased in clearness and volume that he was heard with distinctness and ease by the remotest auditors. Never did he reason more clearly, more logically, never were his words more fitly chosen and spoken with more impressive and touching emphasis and pathos. It was not one of his usual sermons; to me it was the very best I had ever heard from him. And I was not peculiar in this. There was present a Presbyterian brother, one of our most talented citizens, who says: "I listened attentively and criticised him closely, and I must say that it was not only the best thing I ever heard from the Doctor, but that it was one of the ablest sermons I ever heard in my life from any man."

A good sister says: "I have heard Dr. Pierce all my life, and it seems to me he preaches better every time I hear him." And such is the unanimous verdict of the large congregation present on that occasion. I believe he was on that day 61 years, 2 months and 4 days old. And yet he preached fifty five minutes—sustaining himself, and delighting and thrilling his audience, throughout.

What a marvel! Thank God for such, an able and faithful preacher of righteousnes

The hearers present were not all who rejoiced on that occasion; the preacher himself was happy. He fairly luxuriated in the "rich provision" spread before us. While he fed us he feasted himself. He will be better hereafter. I look for him to go out somewhere every Sabbath now. He is one man whose physical condition preaching benefits. Does this fact account for his long life?

We all regret that he could not go to Baltimore. Next to that, we are sorry that his entire address was not read before the General Conference and given to the whole body of Episcopal Methodists in the United States. But we defer to the judgment of our good brethren who were present, and could better decide what was best to be done.

Dyspeptics to the Front.

We have just read the announcement that as last summer there was a meeting of hay fever victims in the White Mountains, so we are this summer to have a convention of dyspeptics. Most appropriate. If there are any people whom we pity, these are they. May something be done by the approaching meeting for their alleviation! Some man, no doubt, with three breakfasts undigested will be chosen as chairman. He will rise, with his hand on the pit of his stomach, and say: "Gentlemen of the convention, come to order immediately or I will ring this gavel at your head." The sexton will please peremptorily pick out all who are not dyspeptics. Put those sleek, fat, and oleaginous men out of the house. But all ye cadaverous and thin and wasted and choleric people will take your seats.' It will give snap and explosion to the meeting if there be no ventilation. The sexton will keep the doors and windows closed.

We can imagine what the spirit of the resolutions will be. When the subject of Health is proposed, some one will rise and say:

"Resolved, first, that man is a failure, and the inheritor of innumerable ills for which there is no medicament, He comes into the world with a pang and goes out of it with a groan.

"Resolved, secondly, that everything is out of joint: the sky too blue, the earth too green, the morning too gaudy, and the night too dark; and the sooner the torch is applied to the world for its final conflagration, the better

"Resolved, thirdly, an everlasting war against chicken salad, lobsters, spices, clams, lemon pie, and gravy.

"Resolved, fourthly, that these resolutions be sent to all the boarding-house keepers in the land, and also published in The Grumbleton Advocate and The Hardscrabble Observer."

If the subject of Temperance should be presented for discussion, there will be an exciting scene Some one may rise and offer the following:

"Resolved, first, that temperance lecturers are a nuisance, and that all tectotalers drink when they get a chance; and that entire absitnence is unscriptural, PAUL having advised TIMOTHY, with a dormant liver, to take a little wine for his stomach's sake.

"Resolved, secondly, that the land is full of drunkenness, notwithstanding the labors of these reformers, and that if they are going to clear the land of intemperance, it is high time they do it.

"Resolved, thirdly, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to JOHN B. GOUGH, JOHN STEARNS, and all other temperance fanatics, and also be published in The Jugtown Inquirer and The Brandywine Chronicler."

If the subject of Religion should be brought before this convention, some one may rise and offer:

"Resolved, first, that the Church is a collection of hypocrites, and ministers preach only for the salary paid them, and that church property ought to be taxed as well as any other property.

"Resolved, secondly, that the world is getting worse and worse under the preaching of ecclesiastics, and that the Millennium is a humbug.

"Resolved, thirdly, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the "Tom Paine Club" of Boston and the Infidel Inquirer of New York, and copy published in The Beelzebub Spy and The Darwinian Herald."

O, if some skilled Christian humanitarians could break in upon that convention, throwing back the shutters to let the sunlight enter, and would give the delegates a brisk horseback ride between the sessions, and take them through a course of healthlifts and gymnastics, all such resolutions as we have mentioned would be voted down, and the tide of feeling would be turned; and after a breakfast on beefsteak the convention would open with the Doxology, "Praise God from whom all Blessings Flow," and resolutions of good cheer would pass by acclamation and with applauding hands and feet. They would move something like this:

"Resolved, first, that, through grace, man is a success, and on his way to conquest.

"Resolved, secondly, that reformers are to be encouraged and prayed for and in every way helped, and that their names are to be held in everlasting remembrance.

"Resolved, thirdly, that, in order to good health, it is important to take bright views of things; that the world is a very good place to live in, and will yet become a paradise, and that it is every one's duty to help make it so.

"Resolved, fourthly, that these resolutions be published in The Morning Chronicle and The Hallelujah Quarterly, and that a copy of them be sent, by of way cure, to every grumbler in the universe."

In other words, our view of things is much affected by the condition of our physical health. We can in public assemblages generally make up our mind what kind of a speech a man will make by the appearance of his diaphram and the condition of his epidermis. The world, no more than the Church, has an interest in the deliberations of the abproaching Convention of Dyspeptics.—Dr. Talmage in Christian at Work.

Defrauding.

You have defrauded your neighbor. You have done him an injury. You have done him an injury, not accidently but on purpose. You have sought your own profit by inflicting loss upon him. You have taken what does not belong to you but to him. You must then proceed to make restitution. Go at once. Go to-day, if you can. State the facts frankly and honestly. Acknowledge your wrong doing, and repair the harm as fully as you can.

It will cost you a struggle to do this. When, however, you have made up your mind to the struggle, you will probably find it easier than you expect. But whatever you do, don't keep this burden upon your conscience. It will stand between you and God. It is an obstacle which you cannot get over. You may forget that it is there; but there it is; and you are on one side, and Almighty God is on the other.—Dean Howson.

CAIRO is the most Mohammedan city in the world. It has the finest library of Moslem literature and its printing press has a reputation wherever the name of Mohammed is revered. There are upward of 500 mosques in the city. The chief of them is called Al-Azhar (the splendid) and has 10,000 enrolled students, who are instructed in theology, law, and mathematics. But, although Cairo is externally more religious even than Mecca, the faith of the people in their system is dying out. The wave of Wahabi revival does not seem to have reached Egypt. The mosques are poorly attended, and educated Mohammedans are skeptical.

Yellow Jasmine

BY MARY BARR.

Do angels come as flowers, O golden stars!
That I can hold within my small white palms
Or were you dropped from o'er the crystal bars,
Filled with the perfume of celestial psalms?

Why did you come? For fear I should forget?
Nay, but, sweet flowers, you would not judge me so,
Are there not memories between us set,
No later love, no future days can know?

Cool bosky woodlands that were jasmine bowers,
With misty haze of bluebells up the glade;
Then, had I met an angel pulling flowers,
I had not been astonished or afraid.

Insnt fic children, innocent and bright,
O Golden Jasmine! for Love kissing you:
I see them yet, with hair like braided light,
And eyes like purple pansies, wet with dew.

Could I have known, could I have but foreseen
How near the pearly gates their feet had won,
How had I clasped those hands my hands between—
Those tiny hands, whose little work is done.

Calm graves, lapped in sweet grasses, cool and deep;
Where winds do sing and whisper through all hours;
O starry flowers, for me Love's vigil keep,
With scent and shadow, and sweet dropping flowers.

AN English lady observed an aged yeoman peasant, stooping in his little patch of ground, all his earthly possessions, to pick the peas which fell from its one tree, and said to him, "you must grow weary in such labor, at your time of life, so bent and burdened with infirmity." His reply was a delightful illustration of the serenity which true faith induces, for he said: "No madam! I have been in my time God's working servant: He has promoted me to be His waiting servant. One o. these days, when I fall as these pears are falling, He will pick me up."

"Perfect in Christ Jesus."—Col. i, 28. Doth not thy heart leap for joy at the thought of it? Black as thou art, thou shalt be white one day; filthy as thou art, thou shalt be clean. Oh, it is a marvelous salvation this. Christ takes a worm and transforms it into an angel: Christ takes a black and deformed thing and makes it clean and matchless in his glory, peerless in his beauty, and fit to be the companion of seraphs O my soul, stand and admire this blessed truth of perfection in Christ—Spurgeon.

REFINEMENT of language is often carried too far. For the foot we have the "pedal extremity;" for money, "the circulating medium;" for newspapers, "the ordinary channels of information;" a legislator, be he ever so great a nnmskull, is the "honorable gentleman," etc. On his return, your Representative calls on you. You want to send a five-cent piece for the latest newspaper. How would this sound: 'My male offspring, take five of the smallest particles of the circulating medium, repair to the least distant dispenser of literary pabulum and convey hence an ordinary channel of information."

A Christian has nothing to call his own, save Christ and his salvation; all the rest is surrendered to God.

Thomas Paine.

The following, touching the last illness of Tom. Paine, appeared in a recent issue of the New York Tribune:

SIR: I am much pleased with your editorial, "Thomas Paine's Bnst." In the journal of Stephen Glellet, a noted and most worthy minister of the Society of Friends. I find the following record made in the Fall of 1809:

I may not omit recording here the death of Thomas Paine. A few days previous to my leaving home on my last religious visit, on hearing he was ill and in a very destitute condition, I went to see him, and found him in a wretched state; for he had been so neglected and forsaken by his pretended friends that the common attentions to a sick man had been withheld from him. The skin of his body was in some places worn off, which greatly increased his sufferings. A nurse was provided for him, and some needful comforts were supplied. He was mostly in a state of stupor, but something that had passed between us had made such an impression upon him that some time after my departure he sent for me, and on being told I was gone from home, he sent for another Friend. This induced a valuable young Friend (Mary Roscoe,) who had resided in my family and continued at Greenwick during a part of my absence, frequently to take him some little refreshment suitable for an invalid. Once when she was there, three of his deistical associates came to the door, and in a loud, unfeeling manner, said:—"Tom Paine, it is said you are turning Christian, but we hope you will die as you have lived;"—and then went away. On which, turning to Mary Roscoe, he said. "You see what miserable comforters they are." Once he asked her if she had ever read any of his writings, and on being told she had read but very little of them, he inquired what she thought of them, adding, "From such a one as you I expect a correct answer." She told him that when very young his "Age of Reason" was put into her hands, but that the more she read it the more dark and distressed she felt, and she threw the book in the fire. "I wish all had done as you," he replied; "for if the devil has ever had any agency in any work, he has had it in my writing that book." When going to carry him some refreshment, she repeatedly heard him uttering the language, "Oh. Lord," Lord God," or "Lord Jesus have mercy upon me."

Thus the poor infidel, wretched in body and mind, received at the last his only ministrations of comfort from hands prompted by hearts filled with the love of the Lord Jesus, whom he had denied and reviled

Very truly, &c.,

THE Grecian excavations at Olympia resulted in many discoveries during March. Among many very interesting inscriptions, there is a pedestal that bears the name of the sculptor Sophocles (third or fourth century before Christ), and another in honor of the Olympian Victor Lykomedes; lions' heads in terra cotta, richly colored and perfectly fresh in appearance, were also found on this spot, and likewise an inscription supposed to be that of L. Mummius, described by Pausanias as belonging to the statue of Jove. The discoveries in March are of especial value in their relation to architecture, as they illustrate the details of several successive styles. During the summer the work will have to be suspended.

Meerschaum shavings and dust are used when compressed for making inferior or imitation pipes. Forty one thousand hundred weight of this waste are annually consumed in Vienna in the production of pipes, cigar-holders, etc., and the imitation has been carried to such perfection that connoisseurs sometimes find it difficult to distinguish these articles from similar ones of the genuine substance. Of the meerschaum itself twelve thousand cases, each weighing fifty or sixty pounds and worth £35 a case, are used up in Vienna alone. In working up the shaving and dust into materials, about sixty women are employed in Vienna in sorting, sifting, washing and cleaning the refuse and rubbing it through silken sieves.

At the recent Electoral Convention of the Northern New York Conference (Methodist Episcopal) a lady appeared as a delegate, duly elected. Bishop Andrews being consulted upon the question of her eligibility, decided that she was "a layman in the meaning of the provision of the Discipline directing the appointment of delegates."

EVERY heavy burden of sorrow seems like a stone hung around our neck, yet they are often like the stones used by the pearl divers, which enable them to reach the prize and to rise enriched.

I have Kept the Faith.

Paul kept the faith at Antioch, even when the infuriated crowd attempted to drown his voice with their clamor, and interrupted him, contradicting and blaspheming.

He kept the faith at Iconium, when the envious Jews stirred up the people to seize him.

He kept the faith at Lystra, when the fate of Stephen almost became his, and he was dragged, wounded and bleeding, outside the ramparts of the town, and left there to langnish, and, for aught they cared, to die.

He kept the faith against his erring brother Peter, and withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

He kept the faith when shamefully treated at Philippi, and made the dungeon echo back the praise of his God.

He kept the faith at Thessalonica, when lewd fellows of the baser sort accused him falsely of sedition.

He kept the faith at Athens, when to the world's sages he preached Him whom they ignorantly worshipped as the unknown God.

He kept the faith at Corinth, when compelled to abandon that hardened and obdurate city, and to shake off the dust from his garments, as a testimony against it.

He kept the faith at Jerusalem, when stoned by the enraged and agitated mob—when placed upon the torturing rack, and bound with iron fetters.

He kept the faith in Cesarea, before the trembling Felix, when he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come.

He kept the faith before Agrippa, and by his earnestness compelled the king to say, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," and even in the closing hours of his life, when the last storm was gathering over his head, when lying in the dark and dismal Roman cell, he wrote these triumphant words, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day."—Macduff.

Sayings of Mr Moody.

We might as well be honest and own that we all do like to shine; and we all may, "for they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament." Look at the great men of Daniel's time. What becomes of them all? But here is Daniel, after 2,500 years hence he'll be shining brighter than ever.

Many of our prayers are not indited by the Spirit, and it would be bad if we receive for answer what we ask. Moses did not get what he as . and how much better for him to 'be his life out alone on the bosom of his Lord than to have to go fighting up and down the land with Joshua!

God loved Elijah too well to answer that prayer of his when he lay there under the juniper tree scared out of his life by one bad woman. Elijah was to go up to heaven in a chariot, instead of sneaking out of the world that way.

The world says earnest Christians are mad; if they are they have an uncommonly good keeper of the way, and a capital asylum at the end.

The Gospel has made these three of my old enemies my friends: Death, the grave, the judgment. I used to be afraid of them, now I have no fears of them. They are my friends.

Recognition in the World to come

When we long to regain our dear ones, we wish to see them, not in the condition of mere spirits, but embodied. What we love in them is not only their characters, but we love the forms they wore, the forms which constituted their personalities to our eyes. It were small comfort to have them again as spirits, and such an incomprehensible intercourse, something so unlike the intercourse we remember, is but an unsatisfying prospect. But to have them again, as we know them, with their bodies, and with those bodies glorified beyond our fondest dreams of loveliness, purged of every taint, freed from every deformity; this is something that can compensate for delay. Surely, we can all say that rather than have a recognition and a companionship so unsatisfying and peculiar as any that can occur in the intermediate condition, we would wait as long as God may see fit, for those which will be so raptnrous, so enchanting, so adequate to all the yearnings of our loving hearts.—G. Z. Gray.

Tried and Proved.

A TRUE STORY.

'Jessie's grandfather is sick, ma'am,' said one of my little scholars,' as I inquired after the absent Jessie.

'I am very sorry,' said I: and, to prove that I was sorry, I started bright and early the next morning to visit Jessie and her grandfather. I knocked at the door of one of their two rooms, and the grandfather's voice said: 'Come in.' I found only old Mr. Fuller in the room; he said he felt better, and that Jessie had gone with her matches as usual.

Mr. Fuller was a shoe-mender, and near his work-bench stood a little table that held all the books he and Jessie owned between them. I noticed that from one of them a number of threads were hanging, and said: "Does your Bible need binding?'

'No, miss,' said he; 'those threads all tell me something. I will tell you,' he added, as he saw the puzzled look. 'When I was a yonng man I was very bad and wild, and did not care for God and the Bible; but when my poor old mother died she had nothing to leave her wayward son but a Bible—her marriage Bible. I didn't care for it any more then than I did before. But one day I found a tract that was headed; 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' I could not get those words out of my head, and as I went to my work everything seemed to say: 'Come, and rest.' I wasn't tired, and didn't want rest, and therefore tried to get the words out of my head.—But God wanted me to 'come,' and so he took his own way to bring me. A few weeks after I had found the tract Jessie's mother died, and then her father went off to Australia, and left little Jessie for me to take care of.

"Then I was hurt so that I couldn't walk, and still came the word: 'Come.' At last I thought: 'May be God will give me rest from my pain, if I try him.' So I took the old Bible, and, strange to say, I opened just at the very words; so I thought: 'I will try and see.'

'But you see, miss, I wasn't used to the Bible, because I had wasted all the best years of my life, and it took a long time to find the places. So one day, as I was sewing an old shoe, I thought, 'I'll just put a thread in at my verse, so that I can find it when I want to read it, and think if God really wants me to come to him,' for by that time I had begun to think of my sins and wasted life. So I put the thread in, and after that I found many other verses, and at each one I put a thread.

"At last I really came to God with my sins, and found that he was waiting for me. And so I tried first, and then proved that the 'Come' was for me; then I put a knot in the end of the thread to show that it was proved; for my eyesight is poor, and I can't read very well, and the thread saves time and eyes. I have found many other verses to try, and at each I put a thread, and as they become clear, and I can use them and prove them, as I call it, I put in the knots, as you see.

'And God has been very good to me, and has not thrown me off, for I have tried and proved him through his word. There are many others just as good. 'Seek, and ye shall find,' has a knot too.'

Old Mr. Fuller's way was not entirely new to me. 'Tried and proved,' I thought, as I walked homeward soon after, thinking of how he had found God's words so kind that they can be tried and proved.—Shatemuc.

I LOVE the quaint saying of a dying man, who exclaimed, "I have no fear of going home; I have sent all before; God's finger is on the latch of my door, and I am ready for Him to enter."—'But,' said one, 'are you not afraid lest you should miss your inheritance?' 'Nay,' said he, 'nay; there is one crown in heaven which the angel Gabriel could not wear, it will fit no head but mine. There is one throne in heaven which Paul the Apostle could not fill; it was made for me, and I shall have it.' O Christian, what a joyous thought! thy portion is secure: 'there remaineth a rest.' But cannot I forefeit it! No; it is entailed. If I be a child of God I shall not lose it. It is mine as securely as if I were there.—Spurgeon.

Rev. J. P. Etchison, of the Baltimore Conference, died at Pikesville, Md., on the 31st ult.

A new word—Vanderbiltiana—has been coined at the Vanderbilt University.

The Greensboro Patriot says that the Baptist Church in Greensboro was dedicated on the 4th inst., by "Bishop Durham, of Durham." A new title for a worthy Baptist brother.

Our office was visited last week by Rev. Dr. Craven, Prof. O. W. Carr, C. G. Montgomery Esq. of Concord, J. W. Mauney, of Salisbury, Geo. S. Cole, of Jouesboro' and several others, all in attendance upon the State Democratic Conventi on which met in this city.

We invite particular attention to the advertisement of Greensboro Female College. The president and faculty at once commend the school to the patronage of our Methodist people, and others, who wish to send their daughters to a first class college.

We have received an interesting address, in pamphlet form, delivered by Rev. E. L. Perkins before an assemblage of four Sunday Schools at Belmont Carteret county on May day 1876. It is published by N. S. Richardson, Book and Job Priuter, Newbern. The subject is "Formation of Character" and is treated in an able and pleasant manner.

The Episcopal Church, with two or three thousand members, tries to control the public offices in Virginia and Dissenters have very little showing in the distribution of favors. Bro. Lafferty, of the Richmond Advocate, is determined that its presumption shall not go unrebuked, and his editorial squibs are frequent and scathing. One reads as follows:

"The frog in the well jumping twelve inches up each day, and dropping back two feet every night, would get out about as soon as a certain church will "evangelize the world" at a loss of four thousand members a year.

If that Church was the sole bulwark of Christianity on this Continent, losing thousands every twelve months, it is clear the California Chinese would set up the creed of Confucius in the "Monumental" by the next Centennial."

The Junior has given us an interesting account of the commencement exercises of Davenport Female College. He fails, however, to tell us about his address, and we will let the Caldwell Messenger supply the missing link:

"We expected that this commencement would be of more than ordinary interest on account of the presence and services of Bishop McTyeire and other gentlemen of note. In this however, we were in part disappointed, for the Bishop failed to make his appearance. But the Literary Address of R. T. Gray, Esq., of Raleigh, cannot be too highly complimented. His subject was "Christianity and Woman," and the subject matter, of which we will not attempt to give a synopsis, was of a character which reflected great credit upon the mind and heart of the young speaker, and stamped him as a man of much more than ordinary culture and talent."

Excursion to Beaufort.

Rev. R. L. Abernethy writes us that he has changed the time of the excursion from Henry's to Beaufort, (which is an enterprise for the benefit of Rutherford College) from the 11th of July to 18th of July (Tuesday.) The fare from Henry's, all points on the Western Road and from Salisbury will be $5 for the round trip. The fare will be graded for Salisbury, Greensboro', Raleigh Goldsboro' and Newbern. Capt. Rhiem, Prof. J. T. Abernethy and Rev. R. L. Abernethy will have control of the train, and no drunkenness or disorder will be allowed. Arrangements will be made for persons, who desire to do so, to remain at Beaufort a week or two longer, and return on same ticket.

This affords an excellent opportunity to visit the sea-coast and enjoy the sight of old ocean and the delightful sea breezes. There are many points of interest in and around Beanfort which will well repay a visit. The objects of the excursion commend themselves to all, as the proceeds of the enterprise are to be devoted to the rebuilding of the College edifice which had been partially built but was destroyed by the violence of a storm not long since. Give it your patronage and enjoy a visit to the sea.

Shelby District Conference.

The Conference of the ministers and delegates belonging to what has been called the "Empire District" was held at Hickory, on the W. N. C. R. R. commencing June 8th, Rev. R. G. Barrett presiding, it being the first District Conference held under his administration.

There was a large attendance and the session of the Conference was pleasant and profitable. The writer arrived late on Friday evening and attended only on Saturday and Sunday, and having been disappointed in receiving the official report of the proceedings, has not the mrterial for a full account of the doings of the Conference.

Rev. B. F. Dixon, whose failing health compelled him to abandon the itinerant work a year or two since, btu who is accomplishing much good at Shelby by his work as a local minister, was Secretary of the Conference, and from him we expect a full and complete report of the proceedings.

Bro. Barrett had arranged an attractive Centennial programme for the Conference, but three of the speakers who were expected to deliver addresses—Rev. [illegible] Leard and Rev. Dr. North were prevented from attending by sickness of themselves or families, while Bishop McTyeire, though eagerly looked for up to Saturday, did not arrive or explain his absence. Many visitors came from a distance to see and hear a Methodist Bishop, and were sorely disappointed to find that he was not present. Rev. Dr. McFerrin, Missionary Secretary, was present and spoke and preached to the edification of the people. His genial wit, humor, good feeling and piety were observable on all occasions and his participation in the proceedings of the Conference added much to the pleasure of those who attended. On Friday night he delivered an address, as per programme announcement, on Methodism and its Missions. The address was in the Doctor's peculiar vein and contained interesting and instructive statistics showing the great progress of Methodism in its relation to the missionary work.

On Saturday at 10 o'clock, Rev Dr. Burkhead, of Raleigh, delivered an address on "Methodism—the Grounds of its Success." We cannot give a synopsis of the really able and eloquent address of the distinguished divine, or speak in too exalted terms of the admirable effect it produced on those who heard it. It was asked for publication, we learn, but we do not know what response was given. We hope that the Doctor will be invited to deliver it on other occasions, and at other places: it is worthy of constant reproduction.

On Saturday afternoon, Rev J A Cunninggim, one of our College Agents, addressed the Conference and visitors on the subject of education and our educational institutions. We were not present, but heard it spoken of in high terms.

On Saturday night Rev H T Hudson spoke on the Introduction and Growth of Methodism in North Carolina. It was one of Bro. Hudson's greatest successes and was highly interesting, instructive and polished. We heartily second the suggestion made by some one, that Bro. Hudson be requested to write, in full, the history of Methodism in North Carolina. He is thoroughly competent—in fact peculiarly fitted by bent of mind, extended information and literary culture,—for the successful performance of a work so much needed. His sketches in the ADVOCATE are attracting great attention and are read with interest and profit.

On Sunday morning Rev. Dr. McFerrin preached at the Methodist Church; Rev. Dr. Burkhead at the German Reformed and Rev J. A. Cunninggim at the Baptist. On Sunday after noon a Sunday School Mass Meeting was held at which Dr. McFerrin, Rev. B. F. Dixon and Col. W. G. Andrews made addresses. At night Rev. Dr. S. S. Bryant, preached at the Methodist Church, Rev. L. Shell at the Baptist Church. Several penitents presented themselves at the altar in the Methodist Church and the meeting was protracted after the adjournment of the Conference.

The town of Hickory has sprung into existence as if touched by the magic wand of a sorcerer. Five years ago a few scattered houses constituted the hamlet: now it is a thrifty active place of, it is said, twelve hundred inhabitants. Two first class hotels afford entertainment for weary travellers and summer tourists and visitors. Last Summer there were about five hundred visitors seeking rest and health in Hickory.

Our stopping place was the Western Hotel kept by Mr. Marshall to whom, and his excellent lady, we are indebted for much of the pleasure of our sojourn in Hickory. The fare at the hotel is excellent, the accommodations very good, while we have never met, North or South, with better servant attendance.

During our stay we enjoyed the hospitality, also, of Mr. Gaither Hall, a friend of former years, and Mr. A. Shuford, a staunch and devoted Methodist

A Trip to the West.

The Junior, in the last number of the ADVOCATE, gave a short account of the Commencement Exercises at Davenport College which he attended on the 7th and 8th inst., but by reason of the haste in which he wrote, had little or nothing to say of the delightful section which he visited for the first time.

Lenoir, the seat of Davenport College, is nineteen miles from Hickory, a station on the Western North Carolina Railroad, from which point there is run a daily hack-line The infelicities of a bumping back on a rugged road can only be relieved by the felicities of genial and pleasant companionship, and this the writer had in the persons of Rev. J. A Cunninggim and Mr. Bascom Nicholson, of Bladen county, whose entertaining talk enlivened the trip and dispelled the tedium of the ride. The mountains, too, rising around us on all sides, clothed in their summer verdure, looking straight down upon us and stretching away in the distance, afforded a means of busying eyes and mind with variety in landscape, and destroyed the monotony from which one suffers in jogging along through an unbroken and level country.

As one approaches Lenoir his attention is attracted to the College buildings, situated upon the summit of a high and mound-like hill overlooking the little town that nestles at its base and reclines upon the rising [illegible] beyond. The buildings are delightfully situated and are fanned by the fresh, fragrant and almost continuous breath of the Spirit of the Mountains. Health has its home upon the lofty hill and entrenched there feels safe from the attacks of the creeping diseases and ills that infest the plains, swamps and lowlands of the East. As one stands in the portico of the building, or in the observatory, and looks out upon the encircling mountains and inhales the fresh currents of mountain air, his lungs expand and an invigorating sense comes suddenly upon him, causing him to feel that if there is a place where youth can be perpetually preserved, and lasting strength and health secured, it is in the hill-country where the air is the untainted breath of heaven, and the water as pure and sweet as ever flowed from springs and fountains blessed by the presence and favors of Hygeia herself.

DAVENPORT COLLEGE

was founded in 1858. Its history is as follows: about the year 1850, the Presbyterians of that section concluded to establish a Female College and determined that whichever of the towns, Salisbury, Statesville and Lenoir, should contribute most liberally toward its erection, should be its seat. Lenoir subscribed $10,000—the largest sum—but for some reason the College was located at Statesville and is now the flourishing Simonton Female College. Dissatisfaction was caused at Lenoir, and the Methodists, seeing the turn of the tide took it at its flood and, with the aid of liberal Presbyterians and Episcopalians, projected a plan for a Female College at Lenoir. A stock company was formed and ten thousand dollars readily subscribed. Wm. Lenoir donated the land—sixteen acres—for the site of the College, and Col. Wm. Davenport donated $3,000. Col. D. was a devoted Methodist and when a boy frequently piloted Bishop Asbury across the mountains to Kentucky. The stockholders, against his protest, named the College "Davenport." The main building cost $10,000: the addition $6,000. These are substantial and strong, built in the honest days when workmen observed care and caution in the selection of materials and the erection of houses. The whole property is safely estimated to be worth $20,000.

When the buildings were completed, the stockholders sent a committee to the S C Conference and tendered the College as a gift to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and requested the appointment of a Board of Trustees and the election of a president. The first president appointed was Rev. Henry Mood, of the South Carolina Conference: 2nd, R. N. Price, now Editor of Holston Methodist at Knoxville: 3rd, Rev. A. G. Stacy, author of "The Service of Song:" 4th Rev. J. R. Griffith, of the S. C. Conference, but now of the N. C. Conference: 5th Rev. S. Lander, now President of the Williamston (S. C) Female College: 6th Rev. Wm. Robey, its present faithful and able president, and primus inter pares.

President Robey at no little pecuniary expense and an outlay of much time and labor, has improved and beautified the grounds, and has planted a vineyard which is flourishing and full of promise.

In 1865 the Federal troops sacked the college, destroyed its apparatus, scattered its library and committed other deeds of vandalism.

The college has an efficient corps of teachers, devoted to their work and beloved by their students. It has done and is doing much good for the cause of female education. The moral training is regarded as of prime importance and is closely watched. A remarkable revival has been in progress at the college and in the town, Bro. Robey being pastor as well as President of the college. For six weeks or more it continued without abatement of interest, and Methodism has been greatly strengthened in that town.

We would urge upon North Carolinians the necessity of giving a liberal share of their patronage to Davenport, and of subscribing liberally to the fund for the discharge of its indebtedness. It is a noble institution, commended to our favor by the facts of its history and by the Conference from which it came to us. Having received and promised to cherish it, North Carolina Methodists should take care that the promises are faithfully fulfilled.

The town of Lenoir, though small at present, is destined to became an important and active place as soon as the narrow guage railroad, now in course of building, is completed. The citizens are remarkably intelligent and refined, hospitable and correct in deportment. An admirable enterprise, set on foot some months ago, is a circulating library containing about 500 volumes of select books which are read and not simply looked at on the library shelves. The number of books is gradually increasing and the enterprise has already effected great good and promises still greater results.

While in Lenoir we had pleasant headquarters at the College, but also enjoyed the excellent hospitality of Rev. J. S. Ervin, (whose house and farm are delightfully situated and almost too good for a Methodist itinerant), of "Uncle" Round, and Mr. M. V. Moore.

We also visited the "Happy Valley"—the home of the Pattersons, the Joneses and Lenoirs the prettiest spot we have over visited, famed throughout the State for the elegant hospitality of its people, their culture and kindness. It takes its name from its resemblance to the happy valley described by Johnson in his "Rasselas." We spent a night at the beautiful and hospitable home of an old friend and college mate, Sam L. Patterson, Esq. whose sterling character will be of service to his county and State, as he grows in years.

Displeased.

Pious Pope Pius IX is evidently, "out of sorts" with the presumptuous and bold opponents of his creed and rule who have carried their banners up to the shade of his palace. The Protestants have made great progress in their missions in Italy and the Pope is displeased. Says he:

"The Albigenses and the disciples of Almeric of Prague, and William of Saint Amour, who, sure enough, possessed nothing holy but the name, contracted with one another a monstrous alliance, fabricating and heaping together in the strangest manner errors and blasphemies of every kind, and protected, as they unfortunately were by certain rulers, like Raymond, Count of Toulouse, and several others, they exerted all their efforts to infect and corrupt the people.

Now, for modern heretics, such as Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists, and Presbyterians, who have established Missions in Rome: "I will not speak of this swarm of heretics who have precipitated themselves in an entirely characteristic manner upon this poor Italy which they are overrunning in all directions with the most deceitful words and the most seductive means of corruption upon their lips, trying to sully this beautiful country. No, I will not speak to you of this miserable and confused collection of errors and wanderers, because by their disorders and teaching they are destroying one another.'

DR PIERCE AND HIS ADDRESS.—DR. LOVICK PIERCE writes to the Southern Christian Advocate concerning his Fraternal address. We should judge he is not pleased with the omissions made when read to the Northern General Conference. He says:

"I took the precaution in January and February to write out what I intended as my address, but my colleagues judged it best to withhold all but the purely courteous part. The body and pith of my address was on American Methodism as an Ecclesiastical polity approaching more nearly in my opinion the Divine gospel commission and Apostolic economy than any other in use.

"It is not to be supposed that my noble colleagues withheld this part of my address because they dissented from my views of Methodism. They give their reason. Their relation to it as acting for me is peculiar. A few friends have desired me to have my address published as I wrote it. This is my wish, if I can recover it."

Trinity College Commencement—June 4-8.

ARRANGEMENTS.

The whole commencement was thoroughly organized, with the rail roads, stages, hotels, boarding houses, and every other matter that needed attention. Few places can collect, accommodate and regulate so large a multitude with pleasure to everybody. Every contingency is provided for.

BUILDINGS AND CAMPUS.

Trinity makes a fine appearance.—The buildings are fine and neat as any private dwelling. The Campus is beautiful. Dr. Talmage said the Chapel had no superior anywhere, and the seats are as comfortable as seats can be. No college has better accommodations than Trinity. None but those who have visited Trinity have any idea what it is.

ATTENDANCE.

This was larger than at any previous time, and from greater distances. Almost every part of the State was represented. About sixty persons, including the Governor, were on the rostrum; two thousand visitors were present on Wednesday, and over three thousand on Thursday, and at least three fourths came from a distance. The chapel groups an audience finely, and the remark was common that a grander audience had never assembled in the State.

FRESHMAN CLASS.

The representatives of this class declaimed on Saturday evening, and did what Freshmen ought to do, and spoke as boys ought to speak.

REV. J. R. GRIFFITH

preached the Theological Sermon on Sunday. It was in every sense a superior sermon. It has been asked for publication, not as a compliment, but because it deserves it. It is worthy any preacher, would do credit to any church, and its perusal would benefit every reader.

SOPHOMORE CLASS,

was represented by eight members on Monday evening. This was rather better than Sophomore speaking.—The friends of each thought he surpassed, but the public gave special praise to J. J. Partridge of Jonesboro, and J. P. Everheart of Texas.

JUNIOR CLASS

was represented Tuesday evening as follows:

Orations by members of the Junior Class.

1. Outlook of the Coming Century. By D. S. Koonce, of Onslow Co.
2. Life by Daylight. By W. P. Mercer of Edgecombe Co.
3 Unity of Action. By Owen Parker, of Sampson Co.
4. Nothing but a Man By W. G Bradshaw, of Trinity
5. Determination. By D B. Parker, of Sampson Co
6 Harmony By P I. Groom, of Rockingham Co.

These orations elicited much applause, especially those by Messrs Mercer and D. B. Parker. Life by Daylight was one of the most popular performances of Commencement.

DR. TALMAGE

preached on Wednesday, and delivered the Address on Thursday. He cannot be presented on paper,—a verbatim report would not report him at all. He is a wonderful man, much greater every way than his printed sermons and his paper would indicate. He is richly endowed with both genius and talent, which is a rare combination of mental riches His information, logic, humor and wit each seems to be his special gift. He is philosopher, orator, poet and theologian all combined. In seven years he has increased his membership in Brooklyn from twenty nine to sixteen hundred. Everybody ought to hear him. Socially and in public he charms every one. He came admired and went away beloved; all wanted to hear him, and all who heard him desire to hear him more than before he came.

ALUMNI MEETING.

The Alumni met on Wednesday evening. The attendance was large, and much enthusiasm was manifested. The Alumni are contributing greatly to the success of the College. The Annual Address was delivered by Rev. W. C. Wilson. It was universally praised. The theme was: The past and future of Trinity College. In thought, elegant diction, and delivery, it was admirable. After the Address, Gov. Brogden was called out, and made a short address He was followed by Judge Dick who made a very gem of a speech.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The graduating addresses have already been given in the ADVOCATE.—They were a great success Dr Talmage said that he had never heard them equalled. The society medals were presented by Judge Dick, and the Bibles by Rev. S. S. Bryant.

The degree of A. B. was conferred upon W. P. Ivy, J. C. Welborn, S. G. Coltrane, P J. Kernodle, J. F. Tanner, J. W. Coltrane, E. C. Hackney, B. J. Reynolds, T. M. Cross, G S. Bradshaw, W. G. Burkhead, N. E. Coltrane, W. D. Turner and C. L. Heitman.

Master of Arts upon R S. Bynum, of Texas; J. A. Barringer, of Greensboro; G. B. Everitt, of Concord; J. D. Hodges, of Monroe; J A Lockhart, of Wadesboro; and G J Watson, of Hyde.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was given to Rev J W North. of the North Carolina Conference, and to Rev S S Bryant, of Mo

The distinctions are as follows:

Senior Class—C L Heitman, first; W P Ivy, second; B J Reynolds, third.

Junior Class—P L Groom, first, D B Parker, second; D S Koonce, third. O G McMullon had first in the studies he pursued, but has not finished all that is required.

Sophomore Class—C N Mason, first; J E Thompson, second; J E Field, third.

Freshman Class—R P Pell, first; E Tanner, second. W B Trogdon, third.

The grades in study will be published next week.

A Good Quarterly Meeting.

Our 2nd Quarterly meeting on Mt. Pleasant Circuit was held at Gold Hill.

The lay brethren began a week before, intending to have prayer meeting every night. Fortunately, Rev. M. V. Sherrill was passing and preached Thursday and Friday night.

The P. E. Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, came in on Saturday and preached three sermons. Rev. W. H. Cone, Pastor of the Lutheran Church, furnished one sermon; and the Circuit Pastor one. The Lord blessed his word.

The Love Feast, on Sunday morning, was full of Christian joy.

Some of the most beautiful and truly eloquent expressions I ever heard, came from the lips of plain Christian people, last Sunday.

They have class meeting every week.

A. D. BETTS, Pastor.

That "Gulf Stream Again."

MESSRS EDITORS: More than 40 years ago Bishop Bascom, of the Southern Methodist Church, in preaching a sermon on the "Messiah's Kingdom," made use of the following language: "Let your eye range along the history of the world, and you will see that for ages, as now, it (the gospel) has been the Great Gulf-stream of moral influence."

"Every hour in every direction, its light and power are invading inert resisting masses of mind and feeling, like the electric forces breaking loose from the poles, and throwing their cornuscations over the fields of heaven and the homes and wastes of earth."

And in that same powerful sermon he thus refers to the Jews: "Look at the Jews—cursed, scathed and scattered, "a nation peeled and trodden down," crushed and trampled beneath the insulting hoof of an unfeeling world."

Because of what has already been published on the subject, I ask that this be published also.

Yours &c.

M. V. SHERRILL.

Revival at Harlowe.

MESSRS EDITORS: Please say in the Advocate, we have had another gracious revival of religion on the Carteret Circuit. We closed a meeting at Harlowe Creek Church last night, which embraced 13 days: a great many souls were converted. Many that had joined the church, as seekers of religion last year, were converted during this meeting, 19 joined the church. Between 50 and 60 members of the church rose to their feet and testified, that they had received a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost To God be all the praise and glory!

Religious Intelligence.

Rev. Saml. Smith, son of Rev. Dr. Smith, of Greensboro, has accepted the charge of the Presbyterian Church in Pittsboro.

In Canada, from 1861—71, the Romanists increased about 8 per cent., Episcopalians a trifle over 6 per cent., Presbyterians about 15 per cent, Methodists about 27 per cent., and the Baptists a trifle over 19 per cent.

The Presbyterian Assembly (North) has ordained that hereafter when speaking of the Lord's day "Sabbath" shall be used instead of "Sunday."

From May 23 to October 17 there are to be in Philadelphia no less than 64 Conventions, Conferences, and Congresses, of a State, national and international character.

The Rev H. F. Johnson, of the Mississippi Conference, has been elected by the Book Committee a member to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of the Rev. James E. Evans, of the North Georgia Conference.

Rev. Dr. C. H. Fowler has been appointed orator for the State of Illinois by the Centennial Commissioners, to deliver an address in Philadelphia, some time during the Exhibition, on the resources of the State.

The Nashville Advocate says Dr. Sargent will embark for England about the first of July. He visits England in the interest of the Wesley Monumental Church in Savannah, Georgia He hopes to be present at the British Conference, which meets July 26th.

The Irish correspondent of the London Methodist is gratified to hear that the English and Irish lawyers selected for legal opinion as to whether lay representation could be admitted to the Conferences, consistently with the provisions of the "Poll Deed," have decided in the affirmative.

The Louisville Courier Journal, of the 4th instant, says: "Rev. E. W. Sehon, D. D., one of the oldest preachers of the Louisville Conference, M. E. Church South, was stricken with paralysis on Thursday last, and was lying in a very critical condition last night. Dr. Sehon has recently suffered a long spell of sickness, but had recovered his health sufficiently to enable him to travel or walk about the city. On Thursday afternoon, just after finishing some letters to friends, he was stricken down with paralysis in the right side, and has ever since remained speechless.

The Pacific Methodist of the 2nd says:—"Bishop Kananaugh arrived in the city on Tuesday last in good health, and was joined by Mrs. Kavanaugh from Petaluma.—They will attend the Commencement Exercises of Mills' Seminary, and then make their way toward Yosemite. The Bishop preached last Sunday at Linden to a large audience, and, returning to San Jose on Monday, married a couple, and on Tuesday was in our office. Brisk work for one who has long passed the allotted "three score and ten." He will return from Yosemite, and probably preach his farewell sermon in St Paul's church on the 18th of June."

The News says that a mandamus of 41 pages, was served on the present Board of Commissioners of Raleigh, Monday, including the Mayor, City Treasurer and Clerk. It demands the common seal, and all the insignia of the city government, and is returnable before Judge Watt's at the Court House in Raleigh, the 23d day of this month.

DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING.—We learn that on Saturday evening the barn of Mrs Julia Bost, living near Bost Mills, was struck by lightning and entirely destroyed, together with two horses, one buggy and all the contents of the barn. Mrs Bost is an estimable lady and the sympathy of the community is tendered her in this, her hour of misfortune.—Concord Sun.

SUPREME COURT.—This tribunal met on Monday, all the Justices being present. After spending Monday and Tuesday in the examination of applicants, the following licenses were granted to practice law:

Samuel Strother Allsop, of Halifax county; John Lancaster Bailey, Jr., of Mecklenburg county; Maurice Bauman, of Cumberland county; James Morris Bryan, of Bladen county; Robert Emmett Carr, of Orange county; Charles Angus Tans Carson, of Rutherford county; Edward Thorne Clark, of Halifax county; Walter Stevens Cushman, of Buncombe county; James Franklin Davis, of Wilkes county; Rufus Pickens Davis, of Union county; Allison Barnes Deans, of Wilson county. Alonzo Jerkins Flanner, of Craven county; William Richardson Gordon, of Pasquotank county; Edward Philip Green, of Warren county; William Augustus Potts, Jr., of Beaufort county; William Alexander Smith, of Rutherford county; James F. Terry, of Orange county; Thomas Brown Womack, of Chatham county.

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.—This body met at Metropolitan Hall in this city on the 14th inst. It is said to have been the largest convention ever assembled in the State, and was composed of delegates from every county. Many distinguished and able men were present and the number of seekers for nominations was "like the stars for multitude."

The convention was called to order by Gen. Cox, Chairman of the State Executive Committee, who nominated for temporary Chairman J. S. Dancy, of Edgecombe, and for secretaries Robt. Furman and H. A. London. Committees on Platform, Permanent Organization, etc, were appointed; the latter recommended Hon. F. E. Shober for President and a number of gentlemen for vice presidents and secretaries. The nomination of a candidate for governor was entered upon. Z. B. Vance, D. G. Fowle, D. S. Reid, W. R. Cox, J. A. Gilmer, C. C. Clark and W. F. Martin were put in nomination, Gov. Vance was nominated on first ballot, almost unanimously.

Capt. Jarvis, of Pitt, and Gen. Cox, of Wake were put in nomination for Lieutenant governor Capt. Jarvis was nominated by a majority of 13 votes. For Secretary of State, Maj. J A. Engelhard, New Hanover, Dr. S. J. Love, of Haywood, D. K. Speed, of Pasquotank, and H. T. Jordan were proposed. Maj. Engelhard was nominated.

For Attorney—General, Col. T. S. Keenan, of Wilson, Col. J. I. Scales, of Guilford, H. A. Gilliam, of Granville, Ed. Conigland of Halifax, P. D. Walker, of Richmond, Giles Leitch, of Robeson, and others were proposed. Col. Thos. S. Keenan was nominated, his principal and most formidable competitors being Col. J. I. Scales, and Platt D. Walker, Esq. The latter, though a very young man, developed great strength and popularity in the convention and it was thought by many that he would be the nominee for Attorney General, an office for which his legal abilities render him thoroughly competent.

Dr. J. M. Worth, of Randolph, was nominated, by acclamation, for Public Treasurer. Dr S. J. Love, of Haywood, was nominated by acclamation for auditor.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction Rev. C. H. Wiley, P. M. Wilson, O. W. Carr, C. B. Denson, Rev. N. B. Cobb, and Mr. Scarborugh, of Johnson were mentioned. Mr Scarborugh received the nomination.

Hon. D. G. Fowle and Gen. J. M. Leach were appointed Presidential Electors for the State at large. Delegates to St Louis convention, T. L Clingman, Paul C Cameron, W. J. Green, and H B Short

Opinion of Dr. R. S. Stewart, President Maryland Hospital, Baltimore: "I have used Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator for more than a year, and recommend it as one of the most efficient preparations I have ever met with. It combines the virtues of food and tonic in a remarkable way."

INDEX TO NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Buffalo Lithia Springs, in Mecklenburg county, Va. Some remarkable cures are ascribed to the use of the waters and it is said to be a pleasant place of resort in the summer.

We invite particular attention to the new advertisement of Marcus Harris & Bro., which appears in another column. These gentlemen have recently established, in our city, a first class wholesale and retail boot and shoe house, and we take pleasure in commending them to our people. They promptly fill all cash orders from a distance. Having had long experience in the boot and shoe trade, they are prepared to guarantee satisfaction to buyers. They have only one price, which fact at once commends them to all right-minded people. Give them a call.

Marriages.

A Beautiful Head of Hair.

When tresses, glossy, black whiskers of luxuriant growth are desired by all, and admired by everybody. The want of which Burnett's Cocoaine would restore this indispensable ornament of beauty, when old age or disease has robbed us of it has long been felt. After many worthless efforts, science has at length succeeded in. Chemistry has furnished us with that magic. It is to Burnett's Cocoaine—the wonder of the age. It is a perfect, pure and delightful dressing. It promotes the growth of the hair, and restores it to its youthful color. It cures humors, allays all irritation and scaliness of the skin, and keeps the hair cool, clean and healthy. Its fragrance is delightful and lasting. Sold by druggists.

Deaths.

Obituary notices of twenty lines or less inserted without charge. The excess over twenty lines or eight words to be charged for at the rate of 10 cents per line. Count the lines and allow short words to the line. In this way you may always know the amount to enclose. Resolutions of respect are charged at the same rate.

Departed this life Tuesday morning the 16th of May 1876 at the residence of her father Hill's Store Randolph co. N. C. Miss Dorcas Kearns wife of Silas Kearns, and daughter of Hill and Dorcas Lassiter in aged 24 years 11 months and 1 day. Her death was unexpected to her relatives and friends having only been complaining a short time and not being confined to her bed but a few days. She had long been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and died her membership at D. K. Brooks on Uharie circuit. Her life was one of exemplary christian character to the end. Her death was calm and peaceful. She was buried in the grave yard at Bethel church in Davidson county, by a large concourse of people. Bro. Kilian was a man of much piety, and especially for his love of industry and economy and by these traits he became the builder of his own fortune which was ample. Truthful, honest and just in all his dealings with his fellow men he was left to his family a character as dear and as glorious as we trust to the church of God, and the Church and the world as well as his family have lost a dear friend. He leaves a widow and one child to mourn and all members of the family of their father, and all professors of the faith of Christ, and the youngest son a local preacher of great promise in the church. May the blessing of God, and a kind providence sustain, defend and comfort them in their bereavement and finally to meet them in heaven.

THE BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS

IN THE

DISEASES OF THE HUMAN CHILDREN.

Extract from letter of Drs. Jones, Indian, and Shelton, all of whom have, at different times, occupied the position of Resident Physician, Virginia Springs, Va.:

"We have used the Buffalo Lithia Water in Dyspepsia, in the worst form, in Diabetes, in Gravel, in Bright's disease of the kidneys, in Rheumatism, in Neuralgia, in Chronic Diarrhœa, in Dysentery, in Scrofula, in Chronic Skin diseases, in Female diseases, in Catarrh of the bladder, in Gout, in Nervousness, in Sick Headache, in Debility, in Dropsy, in Jaundice, in Torpidity of the Liver, and in Malarial diseases, and we have never failed to relieve, and in many cases to cure, when the water was used faithfully and persistently."

Extract from letter of Dr. Thomas, of Buffalo Springs, Va., of July 28 '75:

"Three years ago I found it here on this Rock, and I attributed my restoration to health to it. I began to raise upon it healthy. He was so emaciated that he had to be nearly fed. He could not sit up without support. Now he is a stout, healthy boy. He has been kept well ever since. I kept him on the water two weeks, and I carried him home well and strong. I believe that I owe my life to the water and this Rock."

Case of chronic rheumatism, by Dr. Harris, a prominent member of the Virginia bar.

Extract from letter of Dr. Harris, dated Buffalo Springs, August 23 '75:

"Three years ago I found it here on this Rock. I was a confirmed cripple. I was so emaciated that he had to be nearly fed. He could not sit up without support. Now he is a stout, healthy boy. He has been kept well ever since. I kept him on the water two weeks, and I carried him home well and strong. I believe that I owe my life to the water and this Rock."

CASE OF CHRONIC RHEUMATISM OF FIFTEEN YEARS' STANDING.

Extract from letter of Dr. Thomas, of Buffalo Springs, Va., May 23 '76:

"Col. L. L. ——, Bear Spring, the summer I fixed the Rock and Spring, was standing, bent over extremely so that he could walk only with a crutch, without the support of which he was helpless. He suffered excruciating pain. To-day he is as straight as a gentleman and can walk from one to two miles a day. He is happy over the restoration of his health. He has recommended the water to everybody around him. Many of the neighbors have been to see it. I attribute his recovery entirely to the use of the Buffalo Water."

Part II—The Sunday School.

Chapter I. The Children's Column.

The Little Bird.

A little bird, with feathers brown,
Sits singing on a tree;
The song was very soft and low,
But sweet as it could be.

And all the people passing by
Looked up to see the bird
That made the sweetest melody
That ever they had heard.

But all the bright eyes looked in vain,
For birdie was so small,
And with a modest, dark-brown coat
He made no show at all.

"Why, papa," little Gracie said,
"Where can this birdie be?
If I could sing a song like that I'd sit where folks could see."

"I hope my little girl will learn
A lesson from that bird,
And try to do what good she can—
Not to be seen or heard.

"This birdie is content to sit
Unnoticed by the way,
And sweetly sing his Maker's praise
From dawn to close of day.

"So live, my child, all through your life,
That be it short or long,
Though others may forget your looks,
They'll not forget your song."

6. The Church Forming its Economy—seven deacons chosen.

Lesson-hymn, 887.

Rural and Domestic.

Thoughts for the Month.

CORN.

Where corn has not been sufficiently manured, an additional supply may be given it now, say at its second plowing. Supposing it not to be exceeding one foot in height, run a shovel or twister pretty near to the corn on each side, drop manure in each furrow opposite the stalk, and cover with the next furrow. It is a point worthy of decision by careful experiment whether it is best to apply all the manure intended for corn at or before the time of planting, or a part then and a portion afterward. In our climate the tendency with corn is to produce too much stalk compared with the ear. It is rather the reverse in the Northern States—smaller stalks and larger ears in proportion, with better yield. Now if corn is well supplied with manure from the start, is it not probable that stalk product on might be encouraged at the expense of earing; and, on the other hand, if most of the manure is applied after the stalk has pretty well fixed its size, might not the manure tend then almost wholly to the development of the ear? Without being able to decide the matter from test experiments, we may state, however, that we have obtained most satisfactory results from manure applied as above to corn in bottom land, increasing the yield from thirty to forty bushels above the natural production of the land.

PEAS

should be planted in the corn fields now as soon as possible. It is important to have them dropped in such a manner as not to interfere with the next plowing. Where the corn is checked this is easily done. Also in very wide rows, as they can then be planted in the middles, equidistant from the rows of corn. Where the drills are too narrow to admit of this the best plan is to plant with hoe between hills of corn. Drop not less than six peas in a hill.

COTTON.

Bring cotton to a stand now as quickly as possible, and work it rapidly, to hasten growth of stalk, that it may be ready for fruiting early in the season. When fruiting fairly begins the workings may be at longer intervals, as slower growth is then desirable. Be sure to kill all the May grass. This done, your crop is safe.

HARVEST.

Look well ahead and have everything ready; better to hire extra hands and clean the crop, so that your regular hands may do the harvest work, than to hire extra hands for harvesting; the latter will be sure to charge extravagant prices. Put up grain in small shocks, and in four days of good weather it may be housed or stacked. It is very bad policy to leave grain long in the field after it is cut. "Save that already made" is the best maxim for the farmer—one certainty is worth a great many uncertainties. In stacking oats, make a platform eight to ten inches above ground (two logs, with others laid across, will answer,) on which to build the stack. The oats will keep drier, and the cats will have a better chance at the rats. If oats are stowed away in the barn, put butts against the wall and heads out. This will also check the ravages of rats. Select the best field of oats you have, let them get quite ripe before cutting, and save them for seed. Those intended for feeding purposes should be cut as soon as they fairly begin to "turn."

Thresh wheat as soon as possible: dry the grain thoroughly; grind up a year's supply at once; then sun the flour thoroughly; put in sacks and store away in a dry place. It will be just as sweet and good a year hence as the day it was ground.

SWEET POTATOES.

Put out slips as fast as they are ready. Never wait for rain. Groot the slips in a mush of clay and cow dung, put them in a hole, partly fill the latter with dirt, then add a gill of water, and afterward fill with earth. If done late in the afternoon very few will die; but be sure to draw dry dirt to them after the water is applied.—Southern Cultivator.

Agricultural Notes.

An old farmer says of his boys; "From sixteen to twenty they knew more than I did; at twenty-five, they knew as much; at thirty, they were willing to hear what I had to say; at thirty-five, they asked my advice; and I think when they get to be forty, they will acknowledge that the old man does know something."

The Practical Farmer recommends the following wash for the bodies of fruit trees: "One ounce of copperas to eight or ten gallons of water forms a good wash, and is advised for a trial as a preventive against blight. One pound of bleachers' soda and one gallon of water forms a wash that cleans off all insects, and leaves the trees with fresh, young-looking, healthy bark."

A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says: "Set a tomato plant into each hill of cucumbers or melons, and you will have no trouble with the striped bugs that are so destructive to these plants. The plants can be tied to stakes, and if well pruned when large, both subjects can proceed with their fruiting without detriment to one another."

President Fayville made the following remark on taking care of cows, at a Dairy Convention at Elgin, Ill.. "In everything consult, so far as possible, the comfort of the cow. Let all the arrangements that appertain to her keeping, such as food, drink, shelter, treatment and general management, be such as shall tend to her comfort and quiet: then, and not till then, can we reasonably look for the best results.

The Evil Fruits of weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopœia or out of it. A wineglassful of the Bitters should be taken twice each meal.

Liver Complaint.

By R. V. PIERCE, M. D., of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., Author of "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," etc., etc.

The Liver is the great depurating (purifying) organ of the system, and has very appropriately been termed the "housekeeper" of our health. I have observed in the directing room, and also in making post-mortem examinations of the bodies of those who have died of different diseases, that in a large proportion of cases, the liver has given evidence of having at some time been diseased. Liver affections are equally prevalent in locals. Every butcher knows that the livers of cattle, and sheep, and swine, are ten times as frequently diseased as any other organ. A healthy liver each day secretes about two and a half pounds of bile. When it becomes torpid, congested, or if, from any cause, it be disabled in the performance of its duties, it is evident that the elements of the bile must remain in the blood, thus irritating, poisoning, and perverting every vital process. Nature attempts to rid the system of these noxious materials by means of other organs, as the kidneys, lungs, skin, etc., which become overtaxed in performing their additional labor, and are unable to withstand the pressure.

The brain, which is the great electrical center of all vitality, becomes overstimulated with unhealthy blood, and fails to normally perform its functions. Hence there is dullness, headache, impairment of the memory, dizziness, gloomy forebodings, and irritability of temper. When the blood is diseased, the skin manifests discolored spots, pimples, blotches, boils, carbuncles, and scrofulous tumors. The stomach and bowels, sooner or later, become affected, and constipation, piles, dropsy, dyspepsia, or diarrhœa, is the inevitable result.

SYMPTOMS OF LIVER COMPLAINT

A sallow color of the skin, or yellowish-brown spots on the face and other parts of the body; dullness and drowsiness, with frequent headache, dizziness, bitter or foul taste in the mouth, dryness of the throat, and internal heat, palpitation of the heart, a dry, teasing cough, sore throat, unsteady appetite, sour stomach, raising of the food, and a feeling resembling in the throat sickness and vomiting, distress, heaviness, and a bloated, or full feeling about the stomach and sides; aggravating pains in the sides, back, or breast, and about the shoulders; colic pains and soreness through the bowels; constipation, alternating with diarrhœa; piles; flatulence; nervousness, coldness of the extremities, rush of blood to the head, with symptoms of apoplexy; numbness of the limbs (especially at night), and chills, alternating with hot flashes; kidney and other urinary affections; dullness, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings. Only a few of these symptoms will be likely to be present in any case at one time.

TREATMENT—Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with small doses of his Pleasant Purgative Pellets, which acts as an alterative on the liver. For Liver Complaint and the various affections caused by a diseased liver, these remedies are unsurpassed. The Golden Medical Discovery does not simply palliate the disease, but it produces a lasting effect. By its use, the liver and stomach are changed to an active, healthy state, the appetite is regulated, the blood purified and enriched, and the entire system renovated and restored to health.

VALUABLE

Real Estate for Sale

—AT—

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 300 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine nutmeg lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, four and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved. The land is well timbered, watered and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,000 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, fine well, and is well adapted for dairy, stock, raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there is a good grist, flouring and saw mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 321 acres, lying on Rutledge and Speed Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State.

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystock, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

Poetry.

The Angel of Patience.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

In weary hearts, in mourning hours,
God's meekest angel gently comes:
No power has he to banish pain,
No gift to bring our lost ones back,
But with a tenderer love, our dear
And heavenly Father sends him here.

There's quiet in that angel's glance,
There's rest in his still countenance!
He meeks no grief with idle cheer,
Nor wounds with words the mourner's ear.
But tells us Love is keeping watch
Above our sorrow, sure to watch
And make us sure our Father's will!

Angel of Patience! sent to calm
Our feverish moods with counsels calm,
To lay the storms of hope and fear,
And reconcile life's smile and tear,
The throbs of wounded pride to still,
And make us feel our Father's will!

Communicated.

For the Advocate.

MESSRS. EDITORS: For some time I have desired to express in your columns my admiration of the "Sketches of Pioneer Methodists in North Carolina" by Rev. H. T. Hudson. Only those who have attempted similar work know the pains taking labor requisite to the collection of such historic information as he is publishing. An item is gleaned here and there, from some old book, pamphlet or paper, a kind letter is occasionally received from some aged custodian of sacred facts, a hint is secured, by many questions, in a conversation with the too indifferent descendant of one of the Methodist fathers; and from such imperfect and often tangled material, the thread of history must be spun. In the name of North Carolina Methodism, past, present and future, I thank Bro. Hudson for the faithful and effectual manner in which he is performing his difficult task. I am glad that it required no more than a century for our church in the State to find a pen willing and able to record the heroic lives of the pioneers and the changeful yet ever-advancing fortunes of the loved and holy work which they were so devoted. It should be remembered that Bro. H. is doing what he was formally requested to do by the Historical Society of the Conference. He ought to receive the co-operation of all who have or can get valuable information about his important subject.

It need no one should exercise his own judgment as to what is valuable or otherwise respecting the old preachers, itinerant and local, the founding of the first churches in neighborhoods, the meetings that gave impulse to the divine cause, and incidents of any character connected with the rise and progress of Methodism in any part of our State. Let me say to all, write to Bro. H. and send him all you know of the olden time. Send him your books, papers, pamphlets or letters that contain relevant matter. He will preserve and return them. He must write on until the whole history of the Methodist Church in the State is completed. It has been deferred much too long. Let it be finished by one who has so well begun it.

Coming from the past to the present, I rejoice to know that this Centennial finds N. C. Methodism blooming and flourishing. It is not like a Century Plant, blooming for the first time in a hundred years; but like a plant in God's glorious garden, always blooming, always bearing, always growing. What a wonderful man that divine instrument, John Wesley, was! I would not magnify Methodism as an end, or Wesley as a mere man; but I glory in both as the veritable creation and inestimable gift of our God; and in them I would see His glory, and for them I would give Him praise!

But whither have thought and feeling borne my pen? I sat down to write you a short, familiar letter. I am trying to enjoy and improve my welcome vacation. Here I am tempted to branch off again. I mean that I would like, from my disinterested stand point, to make an appeal in behalf of the hard-worked preachers—those who make many sermons and preach them—those who have many afflicted members and visit them.—Perhaps I will write on that or a cognate theme before long. Meanwhile you must editorialize it. My vacation is too short to justify much writing. The active members of the Board of Trustees of the University are in earnest and working hard themselves, and they evidently intend that both Faculty and Students shall do likewise. Well, that is right. A man who has been an active Methodist preacher, must be active at something till he dies; and therefore it is not new or irksome for me to work.—Resting is the most difficult business. I study it, however, and recommend it as a duty. Man must rest. It is duty and necessity even for an editor. You ought to have taken respite enough to attend our Commencement. You might have found it pleasant and profitable. You would have seen the fallen University in its restored vigor, radiant with its long lost but recovered splendor. There were great rejoicings here, as true North Carolinians witnessed the fulfillment of their long-cherished hopes. There was such speaking and preaching as any pure taste would enjoy. The whole occasion was grand success. Of course you must not understand me as embracing in this expression the much mentioned dancing. You know that I, as a Methodist, never approve that. I oppose it every where and have sufficient argument to justify my opposition. Others view the matter in a different light. Let the patrons of the University exercise their rightful control over their children in regard to it. It is something about which members of the Faculty cannot use either a "shall" or a "shall not," at Commencement. It is hardly necessary, however, to write more about this, in connection with the Commencement of a State institution, when so many unfaithful members of the church in other places break their sacred vows and virtually defy even pastoral authority by practicing this irrational relic of the pleasures of less advanced ages and races.

Before closing my remarks about the Commencement I must mention, specially, the admirable sermon before the students by my old confrere, Dr. T. H. Pritchard. Like Dr. Talmage, to whom we listened with so much delight at Trinity, he magnanimously sacrificed mere literary display to the nobler purpose of doing good. He made a fine impression upon the students and is entitled to the sincere thanks of all the friends of the University, for his excellent sermon. One of the best little sermons I ever heard was delivered by Judge Kerr in the Dialectic Hall. Judge Dick, in the same place and also in his more public address in the Chapel, showed himself worthy of grateful praise from good men for his peculiarly appropriate counsels founded on the Word of God.

Our prospects are bright and brightening. May God make the old University a fountain of pure truth!

Truly,

A. W. MANGUM.

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 14th, 1876.

For the Advocate.

MESSRS. EDITORS: As many of my friends are readers of your paper, and as it is impracticable to address them all by private letter, if you will allow me a small space in your columns, I will undertake to say a few things of this country, its people and its surroundings, and of my location in this goodly little town. I reached this place on Thursday the 17th of February last, and entered on my duties as Principal of the Greensboro District Conference School, on the Monday following (21st). It was a late beginning and no public notice had been given of it. The consequence was that the school was small at first, but it has steadily increased until now it averages well with the schools of similar grade in the surrounding country. The prospect is for a much larger increase for the next session which will commence on 31st July next. Apropos, the present session will close on the 16th June, at which time Prof. Will C. Doub, of Greensboro Female College, has promised to be with us, and deliver an address.

Kernersville is represented as about the highest point in this section of country. It is said that streams rise within less than two miles of this place, that find their outlet into the ocean, respectively one through the Roanoke, another through the Cape Fear, and a third through the Pee Dee. Notwithstanding its high elevation, having all the healthful advantages of the mountain region, it is comparatively a level plain, free from the disadvantages of steep hills and roughroads.

In addition to its healthy location, its cheap living and its superior facilities for thorough educational instruction, Kernersville is very desirable for the opportunities it affords for social intercourse and religious privileges. It is a quiet pleasant village, free from that bane of most communities, the dram shop. We have two churches (Methodist and Moravian), in one or the other of which, services are held every Sabbath. I have much more to say, but time and space admonishes me that I ought to stop, so to my friends in Halifax and other sections I say for the present, good bye.

About Liars.

Liars are numerous; they are found everywhere, and they lie on all sorts of subjects in all sorts of ways. You do not need to light a candle when you begin the search for one. The Psalmist said, in haste, "All men are liars;" and a Scotch parson thought he might have said it in the utmost deliberation. For, at bottom, a lie is found in all sinning, and are not all men sinners? Happily a great deal of the lying is self destructive, and a lot more is balanced by other lying. There is no region where one may say, "Here, at last, I am beyond the reach of lies;" and there is no subject upon which one may be sure that all men tell the truth.

Liars mean to deceive. That a thing is not true as stated counts for nothing. We are all "poor creatures," and hit pretty wide in shooting at the truth. A great deal of hurtful untruth cannot be laid on a personal conscience. It grows out of ignorance, loquacity, pig headedness, and imperfect hearing or seeing. Very few men can be trusted to see or hear a complex occasion—a battle, for instance—and report what occurred. Do not blame people too hardly for false reports; they did not consciously make the reports: they grew. A liar is a deceiver. He states the thing as it is not; and he does it in malice. Lying is the sword of evil purpose. Nothing else cuts so deep or kills so many as this sword called a lie.

Liars are foolish. The folly is varied and complex. A liar's possible work and his actual work are fortunately far apart. A cool liar, holding himself in balance, lying occasionally, lying judiciously, would ravage society like a pestilence. But a liar cannot hold his tongue. He lies too much. He blunts the edge of his sword by hacking at everything. Presently only greater fools than he believe him. His folly is deeper. Hacking folks does him less good than he thinks. Even the pleasure of it is as problematical as that of getting drunk; the results of it are seldom up to his expectations, and usually one hundred per cent. below them. Still deeper folly is shown in the tendency of things to get right side up even though scores of liars are holding them wrong side up. Lying is a business that does not stay done. The inverted truth flops over while our liar is busy on another falsehood. The truth pays better and is safer even in a world full of lies.

Liars put out their own eyes. A man who lives in darkness loses the power to endure the light, and one who continually looks upon distorted objects loses all sense of harmony. So a liar gets as blind as a bat to the real truth. He is all contorted and doubled over himself, and his possible manliness, decency, and spirituality are killed by self inversion. He can not grow with his head in a dust heap, or be shapely with his body twisted and battered in throwing and catching moral boomerangs.

Liars are a wasteful nuisance. They block up every road to truth: they double the work of honest men. They do worse things; but their obstructive work is the most annoying. It is a constant torture for truth-seekers to have to anticipate the liar, hide from the liar, set his lies aside and answer his follies with discretion. The world would go twice as fast if the liar did not keep down his wicked brakes. Divide a man's working life into four periods, and three of the four are lost in contests with liars: in a world without lies one fourth would turn out as much work as the whole does now.

Liars are wicked. The Bible gives them a precedence among sinners as the progeny of the devil; and all human wisdom has confirmed this sentence and added many more special dishonors. But it is strange that kinds of lying get favor. Graceful lies, lies that assist our plans, lies that favor our theories—who has not given them hospitalities?

What shall be done with the liar? The good Book tells us what will come of him at last, but what shall we do with him here on the earth? The best proceeding is to get him soundly convicted and then soundly converted. Nothing short of that will cure him. His nature, whatever you may think of your own, is corrupt, prone to evil and that continually. We can think of nothing short of a new birth that will make a man out of a liar. "But converted men lie," one will say. Well, they need converting over again. Nothing so surely unmasks a hypocrite as the discovery that a professing Christian tells lies. —N. Y. Methodist.

At the last stated meeting of the board of managers of the American Bible Society it was reported that the receipts for March were $96,880 91, and the entire receipts for the year ending March 31 were $527,198. The volumes issued in March were 53,057. The whole number issued during the year from the Bible House, not including those issued in foreign lands, was 684,328.

A Word to Young Men.

The grand mistake that young men make during the first ten years of their business and professional cares, in idly waiting for their chance. They seem to forget, or they do not know, that during those ten years they enjoy the only leisure they will ever have. After ten years they will be absorbingly busy. There will then be no time for reading, culture and study. If they do not become thoroughly grounded in the principles and practical details of their profession during those years, if they do not store their minds with useful knowledge; if they do not pursue habits of reading and observation, and social intercourse, which result in culture, the question whether they will ever rise to occupy a place where there is room enough for them, will be decided in the negative. The young physicians and lawyers who sit idly in their offices and lounge away the time "waiting for something to turn up," are by that course fastening themselves for life to the lower stratum where their struggle for a bare livelihood is to be perpetual. The first ten years are golden years that should be filled with perpetual reading and observation. Everything that tends to professional excellence, should be an object of daily pursuit. To such men the doors of success open of themselves, at last. Work seeks the best hands as naturally as water runs down hill. Young men don't know much any way, and the time always comes to those who become worthy, when they look back with wonder upon their good opinion of their acquirements and themselves.

There is another point that ought not to be overlooked in the treatment of this subject. Young men look about them and see a great measure of worldly success awarded to men without principle. They see the trickster crowned with public honors; they see the swindler rolling in wealthy; they see the sharp man, the over reaching man, the unprincipled man the liar, the demagogue, the time server, the scoundrel who cunningly manages, though constantly disobeying moral laws and trampling on social courtesy, to keep himself out of the clutches of the legal police, carrying off prizes of wealth and place. All this is a demoralizing puzzle, and a fearful temptation: and multitudes of young men are not able to stand before it. They ought to understand that in this wicked world there is a great deal of room where there's integrity. Great trusts may be sought by scoundrels, but great trusts never seek them: and perfect integrity is at a premium even among scoundrels. There are some trusts that they will never confer on each other. There are occasions when they need the services of true men, and they do not find them in shoals and in the mud, but alone and in pure water.

In the realm of eminent acquirements and eminent integrity, there is always room enough. Let no young man of industry and perfect honesty despair because his profession is crowded. Let him always remember that there is room enough at the top, and that the question whether he is even to reach the top, or rise above the crowd at the base of the pyramid, will be decided by the way in which he improves the first ten years of his active life in scouring to himself a thorough knowledge of his profession, and a sound moral and intellectual culture.—Dr. Holland.

The following statistics of the Methodist E. Church were given at the late General Conference: "The aggregate number of Sunday Schools in the Conference is 19,287, with 207,182 scholars and teachers.—since the last General Conference 73,874 members of the Church and 476 ministers have died; during the same time the net increase of membership was 159,236, and of ministers 1,221; and the total number admitted to fellowship within the past four years was 234,640; the total membership being 1,580,559; and of ministers 10,923. The whole number of churches is 15,633 with a value of $14,441,334; the number of parsonages 3,017, valued at $3,731,628.

RUM'S DOINGS.—Dr. DeMarmon, in the New York Medical Journal, says: "For the last ten years the use of spirits has: 1. Imposed upon the nation a direct expense of $600,000,000. 2. Has caused an indirect expense of $700,000,000. 3. Has destroyed 300,000 lives. 4. Has sent 100,000 children to the poor house. 5. Has committed at least 150,000 people to prisons and work houses. 6. Has determined at least 1,600 suicides. 7. Has caused the loss, by fire or violence, of at least $10,000,000 worth of property. 8. Has made 200,000 widows and 1,000,000 orphans.

Carlyle once said to a distinguished American: "America is a great country, but no system can last which would give Jesus and Judas precisely the same vote on public affairs."

Timidity of Great Men.

Turenne, being asked whether he was frightened at the beginning of a battle, said: "Yes, I sometimes feel great nervous excitement, but there are many subaltern officers and soldiers who feel none whatever." Conde was much agitated in his first campaign. "My body trembles," he said, "with the actions my soul meditates." Frederick the Great, at Molwitz, gave but little promise of ever becoming a soldier. It is reported of one of the early friends of Washington that in his first battle his nerves quite gave way, and that he had to be held to his post by two soldiers: it was as if the hero's legs tried to carry him off in spite of himself. It is obvious to remark that distinguished men, whose nerves have thus completely broken down, may thank their stars for being distinguished. Much is forgiven them, for they did much service. Had they been common soldiers they would have received as little indulgence for the automatic action of their feet as the poor receive for the malady of kleptomania. There is, however, a special reason why allowance should be made for generals whose presence of mind has failed them. A private has only to shut his eyes to danger, and to confront it with that chien de courage of which a great commander spoke with envious disparagement. But the skilled courage of a general is a virtue of a very different order. He must, as it were, have two selves. In deliberation he must calculate the exact amount of danger to which he exposes his troops; and then, in action, this calculation must be erased from his mind. He must often say to himself, "Peace, peace," when he feels there is no peace, and by a sort of military faith he must fight as seeing a safety which is invisible. It is true that Nelson exclaimed: "What is fear? I never saw fear!" But at that time Nelson was young, and against his remark may be set the saying of Charles the Fifth when he saw written on a tombstone: "Here lies a man who never knew fear." "Then," observed the Emperor, "he can never have smelled a candle with his fingers," or, we would say, such a man can never have felt the first touch of the forceps of a dentist. Charles the Fifth, no doubt, spoke from a commander's point of view: and he may, like other commanders, have felt the difficulty of emulating the happy fearlessness of his soldiers. —Fortnightly Review.

RULES FOR DAILY LIFE.

Begin the day with God
Kneel down to him in prayer
Lift up thy heart to his abode
And seek his love to share.

Open the Book of God,
And read a portion there,
That it may hallow all thy thoughts,
And sweeten all thy care.

Go through the day with God,
Whate'er thy work may be
Whether at home—abroad—
It shall be near to thee.

Converse in mind with God,
Thy spirit heaven-ward raise;
Acknowledge every good bestowed,
And offer grateful praise.

Commune the day with God
Thy sins to Him confess
Trust in His Lord's atoning blood,
And plead His righteousness.

Lie down at night with God,
Who gives his servants sleep,
And when thou hear'st the vale of death
He will thee guard and keep.

The Man who Swallowed a Fork.

[From a Paris Letter.]

Some of my readers may remember l'homme a la fourchette, or the young man who swallowed a fork, and they may be glad to hear further of this singular case. We have had two of the kind—the Italian, Cipriana, and the Frog clerk, Lesuer. Nearly two years ago he was at table with some comrades, who were conversing about the Indian jugglers and their trick of swallowing a sword. Lesuer claimed that it was very simple, and, to prove his assertion, took a fork by the tines and pushed it down his throat. A spasmodic contraction of the organs took it from his fingers and carried it down the passage into the stomach. For a long time efforts were made to reach the fork by the mouth, but it was finally ascertained to lie in his stomach, and Lesuer was given up for lost. He was shown at clinical lectures, and then went into the country. A report came that he was dead, and I believe that I published it as a fact.

But as Lesuer did not fail in health, and continued strong and hearty for over a year, some of the doctors thought that the fork could be removed. Baron Larrey and Drs. Labbe, Lepere and Professor Gosselin undertook the operation—began some weeks ago. They began by turning down slowly to the stomach with caustic, and determing an adhesion of the coat of the stomach with the outer edges of the hole thus made with the corrosives. When this adhesion was complete an incision was made in the stomach and the fork drawn out with forceps. It was as black as ink, but not worn to any extent. Lesuer is now regarded out of danger.

The Origin of Diamonds.

Some philosophers have supposed that diamonds are, in all probability, a cosmic product—chips of original creation, so to speak—which the earth has picked up in the course of her travels through space—in short, that they are of meteoric origin. To the popular mind there must be something plausible in the suggestion. Indeed, what could be more plausible to those whose knowledge of the diamond is embraced by the one word —carbon—and whose acquaintance with it is limited to some little familiarity with the appearance of the cut gem? How pure, how hard, how brilliant! What finer product could there be of the heavenly spaces?

But facts are earthly and very stubborn—prone ever to take the shine out of splendid theories. It is true that the diamond is a puzzle even to chemists; that the mode of its formation is a mystery; that even its place in the order of nature is a matter of doubt. Like amber, it is found among mineral. Amber is known to be a vegetable product, and the diamond is thought by some to show strong evidence of a similar origin. As surely as flies in amber prove the presence of animal life during some stage in the formation of that singular substance, the vegetable organisms found in diamonds are proof that these gems were formed amid surroundings not consistent with the presence of vegetation, perhaps in water—a supposition that finds support not only in the fact of their inclusion of organic matter, but still more in the presence of dendrites, such as form on minerals of aquatic origin.

Crystals of gold, iron and other minerals, have also been found inside of diamonds. Still other diamonds are superficially impressed by sand and crystal—which leads some to believe them to have been originally soft. But it is quite as probable that these foreign substances may have interfered in some way with a perfect development of the diamond crystals, forcing them to grow around the obstructions. Though supremely beautiful in its best estate, the diamond appears to be but an earthly product after all, subject, like everything else, even theories—to earthly imperfections. There may be a diamond factory up in the sky somewhere, but the evidence of it is not strong.

George Washington.

Washington was a conspicuous and beautiful instance of a man who minded his own business. Suppose that an intelligent person living in one of the European centers of civilization had been asked, about the year 1770, what man then over thirty seven years of age was most likely to be the typical great and good man of the modern world. Would he have singled out the Virginia militia officer, as that time busying himself with the care of his plantation on the Potomac, and whatever social duties and delights, or whatever polite politics were convenient and appropriate? The strong point about Washington was that the duty or the pleasure, the ceremony or the self-sacrifice that lay in his way, he enjoyed or performed without shirking, and to the very best of his ability. He did not, as a youth, lie awake o'nights wondering "what he would be when he grew up to be a man." When he became a man he showed neither imagination nor genius; but he had one of the traits of genius, namely: concentration. He put his mind upon his present occupation, without looking ahead. He engineered, fought the Indians, rode horseback, wrote letters, went fox-hunting, attended church, proposed to young women, conducted campaigns, and governed the United States—each at the proper time, and each with sincerity of purpose and assiduity. We do not hear of his swearing often: but when he did, it was thoroughly and effectively done. If he seems not to have been as successful in the matter of matrimonial proposals as in other occupations, we must remember that the centennial revived old wives' tales, of early and indiscreet refusals of Washington by the said old wives themselves must be taken with a few grains of deferential allowance.—Scribner's Monthly.

Two kinds of machine are in use in Colorado to exterminate grasshoppers. Both are drawn by side draught, and cover a somewhat greater breadth than an ordinary grain drill. One carries a broad surface covered with tar, on which the grasshoppers are taken as the machine passes over the ground. The other has an iron cylinder, in which a fire is built. When in action, a current of heat strikes downward and kills whatever insects come in its way.

The Philosophy of After Marriage.

"You love me no longer," said a bride of a few months to her better-half in his gown and slippers. "Why do you say that, Puss?" he asked quietly, removing a cigar from his lips. "You do not caress me nor me pet names, you no longer seek so anxiously for my company," was the tearful answer. "My dear," continued the aggravating wretch, "did you ever notice a man running after a car? How he does run!—over stones, through mud, regardless of everything till he reaches the car, and he seizes hold and swings on. Then he quietly seats himself and reads his paper." "And what does that mean?" "An illustration, my dear. The car is as important to the man as he gets, in as when he is chasing it: but the manifestation is no longer called for. I would have shot any one who put himself in my way when in pursuit of you, as I would now shoot any one who would come between us; but as a proof of my love you insist on my running after the car."

SCIENTIFIC.

THE HISTORY OF ZERO.—Zero, on the common thermometer, like the fanciful names of the constellations, is a curious instance of the way wise men's errors are made immortal by becoming popular. It may be worth while to stop and say that the word itself, "zero" comes to us through the Spanish from the Arabic, and means empty—hence nothing. In expressions like "90o Fahr." the abbreviation Fahr. stands for Farenheit, a Prussian merchant of Dantzic on the shores of the Baltic sea. His full name was Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit.

From a boy he was a close observer of nature, and when only nineteen years old, in the remarkably cold winter of 1690, he experimented by putting snow and salt together, and noticed that it produced a degree of cold equal to the coldest day of that year. As that day was the coldest that "the oldest inhabitant" could remember, Gabriel was the more struck with the coincidence of his little scientific discovery, and hastily concluded that he had found the lowest degree of temperature known in the world, either natural or artificial. He called that degree zero, and constructed a thermometer, or a rude weather glas, with a scale graduated up from zero to the boiling point, which he numbered 212.

Time showed that this arrangement, instead of being truly scientific, was as arbitrary as the division of the Bible into verses and chapters, and that these two points no more represented the real extremes of temperature than "from Dan to Beersheba" expressed the exact extremes of Palestine.

But Fahrenheit's thermometer had been widely adopted, with its inconvenient scale; and, as it happened, none thought of any better form until his name became an authority; for Fahrenheit finally abandoned trade, and gave himself to science. Then habit made people cling to the established scale, as habit makes the English cling to their old system of cumbrous fractional money.

Our nation began to use Fahrenheit's thermometer about the middle of the last century, or not far from the time when "Old Style" was exchanged for "New Style" in the writing of dates.

The three countries which use Fahrenheit are Holland, England and America. Russia and Germany use Beaumur's thermometer, in which the boiling point is counted 80 degrees above freezing point. France uses the centigrade thermometer, so called because it marks the boiling point one hundred degrees from freezing point.

On many accounts the centigrade system is the best, and the triumph of convenience will be attained when zero is made the freezing point, and when the boiling point is put 100 or 200 degrees from it, and all the subdivisions are fixed decimally.

If Fahrenheit had done this at first, or even if he had made it one of his many improvements, after the public adopted his error, the luck of opportunity, which was really his, would have secured to his invention the patronage of the world.

GULF STREAM HEAT.—Simon Newcomb's review of "Croll's Climate and Time," in the American Journal of Science and Arts for April, says:

"The influence of the Gulf Stream in modifying the climate of northeastern Europe receives especial attention, and his views of this influence seem quite well grounded. We had supposed the view that the warm and equable climate of that region was due to the Gulf Stream to be one universally held, although none had attempted to render it probable by an actual calculation of the amount of heat conveyed by that stream. This calculation Mr. Croll has made, and having reduced his own estimate of the volume of the stream to one half, in deference to the views of some of his opponents, he shows that the amount of heat annually conveyed away by the stream is equal to the whole amount which a belt of earth, sixty-four miles broad, extending all round the equator, receives from the sun. We make the quantity a little less, but yet equivalent to more than the total amount of heat which falls on a million of square miles at the equator. Making all allowances for the fact that only one of the two branches of the Gulf Stream passes over to northeastern Europe, it must be admitted that the quantity of heat which that region receives from the Gulf Stream is not an inconsiderable fraction of that which it receives from the sun."

In a recent letter published in the New York Union Christian Worker, Rev. O. H. Gulick, missionary in Japan says:

"Pure Buddhism is scarce in China, compared with Japan; and that the Chinese are in some respects a superior people. Their literature is much more valuable; they are better dressed (more decently at least.) As compared with the masses of Spain and Turkey they are well fed, well clothed and well housed, and they are more democratic in their ideas." He speaks highly of the Confucian system of morals.

DID you ever think how every part of your house can remind you of the great truth which Jesus Christ taught about himself? The corner stone says, "Christ is the Corner stone;" the door, "I am the Door;" the burning candle, "Christ is the light of the world." You look out of the window, and the sight of the starry sky bids you turn your eyes to "the bright and Morning Star."

Norman M'Leod was once preaching in a district in Ayrshire, where the reading of a sermon is regarded as the greatest fault of which the minister can be guilty. When the congregation dispersed, an old woman, overflowing with enthusiasm, addressed her neighbor: "Did ye ever hear ony thing sae gran? Wasna that a sermon?" But all her expressions of admiration being met by a stolid glance, she shouted, "Speak, woman! wasna that a sermon?" "O, ay," replied her friend, sulkily, "but he read it." "Read it!" said the other, with indignant emphasis, "I wadna hae cared if he had whustled it."

Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan has resigned the Presidency of Randolph Macon College on account of the state of his health, and will return to the more congenial and active work of an itinerant Methodist preacher. This step will be greatly regretted by the friends of Randolph Macon College as much of the patronage it received and the success it achieved, was owing to the Presidency of Dr. Duncan His successor will be elected next month.

Bros. Haltom and Butt, local ministers at Charlotte, are doing much good in the moral vineyard. The Charlotte Observer says: A revival has been in progress at Calvary Mission Chapel, under Rev. Haltom & Butt. Rev. John F. Butt has been made superintendent of the Sunday school and by means of the penny collection is raising a fund for church purposes. The children give one penny each every Sunday, and delight to give it. The collection averages $1.50 weekly. The chapel, a commodious building, costing above $1500, was built mainly by collections of this description by Mr. B. during the 7 years the society has been in existence.

The Unitarians boast that if they can build ten churches a year for an indefinite terms of years they will sometime become a large and flourishing denomination. This arithmetic is unquestioned, and this bright and cheery spirt of prophecy is commendable. We are reminded, however, of the Texan orator who said that ten years ago he could have bought a hundred acres of land for a new pair of boots, and it he had made the bargan he would to day be worth a million. Some one asked him how he could have missed such an opportunity "Miss it?" he repled, sadly, "why the trouble was I hadn't the boots.

The Observer suggests that in every house, in every hamlet, village, city and town of our country, the voice of thanksgiving and praise should go up to God on the Fourth of July for the mercies of the first hundred years of our national existence. In thousands of places there may be union meetings of all Christian people for prayer on the morning of that great day. Let them celebrate it with powder and brass who prefer such demonstrations of gladness, but the people of God should not forget, on the hundredth anniversary of independence, to 'enter his gates with thanksgiving and his courts with praise."

Mr. Vanderbilt, the founder of the Vanderbilt University, has added another donation of $300,000 to the $700,000 previously given, making the entire sum $1,000,000. It is a good plan to be one's own executor—to give while one is alive and see that his bequests reach the intended objects. The Church, South, is grateful to Mr. Vanderbilt for the munificence he has shown in the establishment and endowment of the University which appropriately bears his name. He is in declining health and is not expected to live a great while longer. His fortune is collossal and we would not be surprised if his last will should contain a still more magnificent provision for the College and the Church.

Through Mr. Walter Pemberton of Fayetteville, a student at Randolph Macon. we are glad to learn the fact that the North Carolina students at that College have acquitted themselves handsomely, four of the five medals and prizes awarded by the College, having been granted to North Carolinians.

The Sutherlin Medal for Oratory was awarded to Walter H. Page, son of A F. Page, Esq., of Carey The Walton Prize for best Greek scholarship, was won by Cyrus Thompson, of Onslow county. The Washington Society Medal for Oratory was awarded to T. M. Simpson, of Hertford county and the Franklin Society Medal given to the best Debater was won by W. F. Tillett, son of Rev. Jno. Tillett, of the N. C. Conference. There were in attendance at the College last session 167 students, 18 of whom were from North Carolina.

Reasons for Early Piety.

It is estimated that seven-eighths of the members of the Church of Christ are those who are converted under the age of twenty years. Hence the importance of seeking Christ in early youth. If it be true that only one out of every eight of our church is converted above the age of twenty years, is it not important that all those who desire to be saved should start for heaven in the morning of their existence? Delay is dangerous—aye, delay is death!

In addition to the reason cited, we insist that by early piety the young will steer clear of skepticism that destroys so many valued immortal spirits. Young people are usually tender hearted and readily inclined to religion. Skeptics have less hold upon them, and skepticism would wane and die if it did not find recruits from the ranks of those who have passed the age of twenty. We make this broad assertion, that youthful religious training and instruction are a bar to [illegible] in God in revelation and in salvation.

But further still, sinful habits long persisted in are hard to break off.—The longer you sin the harder it becomes to desist. The longer you use spirituous liquors, the more difficult it is to rid yourself from its ruinous and dangerous grasp. And so we might add of all evils of like character. Force of habit long persisted in is nearly always unto death. Having started wrong we can't stop. When we were a school boy we read in philosophy that a stone let fall from the top of a precipice descended more rapidly as it neared the ground. In other words, a falling body increases its momentum as it nears its destination. So in this life. Our first efforts at sinning are very slow and gentle, but as we grow older our conscience gets more callous, until we become so stupid in mind that conscience will be insensible to every vile act we may perform and becomes death to everything that is high and holy and useful. As we near perdition the momentum of wickedness increases, consequently we would urge the avoidance of even the appearance of evil, and would doubly urge all young men to become Christians that their souls may be saved from the vortex of ruin and everlasting death.

The Bible warrants us in believing that there will be three classes of persons in the heavenly land. First, those who die in childhood. This will be much the largest class. Nearly two-thirds of our race die before they arrive at the age of accountability, and according to our theology all of them are saved. The second class are those who give themselves early to the church, and spend their lives in serving God and doing good.—What a grand army of able bodied Christians will this class present when they shall surround the throne and sweep the harps of heaven and join their voices in the immortal chorus of "glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men." The third class are those who put off their salvation until the sands of life have well nigh run through, and cry in the last hours for mercy and salvation. Of this class their will be but few. Some of them will be saved, but it is a sad fact that for four thousand years the Bible records but one successful dying penitent—the thief upon the cross.

Christian Shirks.

Col. Donan, who was for some time editor of the Daily Sentinel, and who is, we understand, soon to fill the same position again, writes thus about Christian Shirks. It is suggestive:

"The churches were slimly attended Sunday; the weather was too hot for our Christians to get out." What trivial excuses serve to keep our so called Christians from attending the public services of God's house! "For sake not the assembling of yourselves togcther, as the manner of some is," said the inspired apostle of the Gentiles. And yet, see them, hear them Going to church to-day? No. Why? It is too hot or too cold, too damp or too dusty, too windy or too sultry, too this or too that, too anything, everything or nothing, but the right thing. But let a circus, with its bare legged somersetters and vulgar clowns come along; and, rain or shine, dust, mud, heat, snow, hail or thunder, all those delicate Christians will be there to "let their children see the animals." No trifling inconvenience of weather keeps them from attending to their business or their pleasure. Chopping, hauling, selling, shopping. picnicking, party-going; they never fail, in storm or calm, to put in a prompt appearance at them all. But the moment Sunday dawns, each mole-hill on the road to the church becomes a mountain, and each mole a lion. Why is this thus? Is Sunday heat any hotter, Sunday cold any colder, Sunday rain any wetter, Sunday dust any dustier, or Sunday wind any windier, than that of any other day? What amount of Sunday exposure would prove fatal to an able bodied Christian, upon whom all the rage of week-day elements is spent in vain? Turn out, turn out, ye worship dodging, duty-skulking servants of the Living God. Away with your honeyfuggling pretexts and apologies for laziness and indifference. When Jehovah spreads his bounteous feasts, Sunday after Sunday, in ten minutes' walk of your homes, will you starve your immortal souls to save the blacking on your boots from the mud, or the flowers on your flimsy bonnets from a few drops of rain? Death will hardly postpone his call on account of the weather; and you may have to take your last long ride cemeteryward, in an hour of storms and cloud. You can not go to heaven under an umbrella. Fair weather Christians, who only attend church when the day is bright, pleasant and their clothes are new, will be apt to land in eternity where it is always hot and dry."

Death of Dr. Sehon.

The death of Dr. Sehon sends sadness to the hearts of thousands throughout the Church. The Courier Journal gives a brief sketch of his life and death, which will be read with interest. He died, June 7th, in christian triumph:

The Rev. Dr. E W. Sehon, one of the oldest, most widely known ministers of the Southern division of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at the residence of his son-in law, Col. H. M. Wright, No. 495 Fifth street, a few minutes after ten o'clock last night. Dr. Sehon's health has been failing for the last three months, and his life has been uncertain for some time on account of a trouble of the heart.

A few days ago he was attacked by paralysis, and since the illness struck him never uttered a word. His life was despaired of by his physician and friends, and his death came as an event not unlooked for. He died with a smile upon his countenance, and illustrated very forcibly in his death the religious principles he inculcated during his life.

Dr. Sehon was a Virginian, though he has lived in his native State very little. He was born in Moorefield, Hardy co., of that State, April 14, 1808, and was therefore at the time of his death in his sixty ninth year.

He commenced preaching in the year 1827, and would, had he been permitted to live, have celebrated his semi centennial as a minister next year. The first circuit to which he was assigned was that known as the Pittsburgh Circuit, where he remained four or five years. Only last year Dr. S. revisited the field of his early ministry, and was given a warm welcome. In 1832 he was removed to Cincinnati. In the following year he was married to Miss Caroline A. McLain, who, as Mrs. Sehon, survives him. She was the daughter of the Hon William McLain, of Cincinnati, brother of the late Judge McLain, of the Supreme Bench. In 1844 he was sent from Ohio as a delegate to the General Conference which met in New York, and which is memorable as the Conference at which the division of the Church took place, and at which the Northern and Southern divisions of the M. E. Church were created. Dr. Sehon took quite a prominent part in the heated debate of the session, and, though an Ohio delegate, he voted straightforward with the Southern division; and when the time of the split came, cast his fortunes with the Church, South, of which he has since been a prominent, liberal, and efficient member.

In the year 1847 Dr. Sehon removed to Louisville, and ever since this city has really been his head-quarters. After coming here he took charge of the old Fourth street Methodist Church, which then occupied the site now covered by the New York Store. After his connection here was severed he became Missionary Secretary of the Church, South, a position which he occupied for twenty years, to the very material advancement of the missionary interests of his Church. During the war he was stationed at Nashville, where he suffered considerable privations on account of his political preferences. Though he never delivered a partisan sermon in his life, he had his private belief, and did not hesitate to express it when occasion demanded such expression. After the war he resided a short while in Baltimore, but returned to Louisville in 1868, where he has since resided. He was, during the four years, from 1871 to 1875, Presiding Elder of the Louisville District, where his time expired by limitation, when he was tendered the same position in the Bowling green District, which position he was filling at the time of his death.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE.—Rev. R. L. Abernethy writes:

"Please say that our next term will commence on 2nd of August, 1876.—Our Report at Commencement was as follows: 'Rutherford College under the charters of Academy, Seminary and College, has been in successful operation for 21 years. During this period, we have had 3,150 matriculates; 921 have been instructed free; 317 have been converted in college chapel; 4 have died, 2 of Measles in 1858, and 2 this year: one of heart disease and one of Pneumonia. During past year we have had 244 matriculates.'"

Shelby Seminary.

MESSRS EDITORS: The spring session of this school closed last week. I had the pleasure of witnessing the examination of the pupils, and was much pleased at the evidences, exhibited on the part of the students, of accurate attainments and proficiency. The school has grown rapidly during this year, having now abont 70 students. The public exercises consisting of declamations, compositions, dialogues, and music came off last week, and the pupils acquitted themselves so handsomely as to make a remarkably fine impression on the public mind. All are rejoicing in the success and excellency of the school. Prof. Trawick, assisted by his good lady, and Miss Annie Wait, has built up in our community a fine reputation as a thorough and successful instructor, and if any persons in the sickly east want to come up to this section so full of the elements of blooming health, they may be assured of finding a capital seminary here where their children can be well educated.

H. T. HUDSON.

Enlcalnise the Spiritualists.

Some zealous opponents of spiritualism, in New York, recently obtained an injunction against Miss Anna Eva Fay, a Spiritualist "Medium," forbidding her giving seances as being against good morals and public policy. A motion to dissolve the injunction was made and argued last week. The New York Herald in reporting the trial says: "Col. Hart, the defendant's counsel, stated that the paramount ground upon which the injunction should be dissolved was that when the defendants held their seances they were performing their duties as servants of Spiritualism, which counsel showed by affidavit was a religion; that the seance of our Spiritualists is a meeting associated with Spiritualism, which originated and is maintained on the phenomena that take place in the presence of mediums; that Spiritualists attended as in devotion to their creed, and the public were invited to make converts of them; that the churches sold their pews and the defendants their seats; that Spiritualism is the religion of the defendants, whose ministers they are; that they advertised their services as churches advertised their meetings and festivals as the only means to make their seances known, and comparison was made between the style of the defendants' advertisements and that of other churches, on illustrations furnished that certain churches charged for admission and reserved seats, and that the phraseology violated the rules of correct taste. The Court having instructed that it desired to be assured that a speculation was not concealed under the garb of religion, counsel maintained that the defendants gave seances as mediums as the only labor of their lives, and that it would be equally just to charge orthodox ministers in receipt of salaries of making a speculation out of their religious offices. The law of the land and equity alike protected against the violation of conscience. Counsel then claimed that Bishop Dr. Hammond, Rev. Dr. Deems, Rev. Mr. Talmage and Rev. Dr. Alger were engaged in a conspiracy against the defendants, as spiritual mediums and against Spiritualism. It was chimed that this was known by the advertisements and publications in newspapers, where Spiritualism was announced to be on trial for the benefit of certain charities connected with certain churches. Counsel promised, on behalf of his clients, to hold these divines and their associates to a strict legal account for those acts. In conclusion counsel sarcastically inquired whether the movement had any connection with the religio-political combination to destroy American liberty and to rear a hierarchy on its ruins, in which the dogmas of Calvin, Knox and Wesley shall be as the common law. This was characterized as a threatened Partian invasion, concerning which the air was disturbed with rumors.

The Centennial.

Prof. Round, of Davenport College, writes us from Philadelphia under date of June 22d, and says:

"A good many of your readers are doubtless in the state of mind I was a short time ago: viz, very anxious to see the Centennial, but fearful of extortion. A good many reports have been circulated regarding the high prices, but my observation is that unreasonable charges are the exception and not the rule. To those to whom economy is an object, I will offer a few suggestions. Write at once to Rev. E. M. Long, 12th and Becks sts. and ask him to send you his terms. Board and lodging can be engaged at prices ranging from $5,00 to $14,00 per week, or from $1.00 to $2,00 per day. The places which he will recommend are all christian homes and he will show you around to a number of places and will not charge you a cent for his services from first to last. I spent the night with him and in the morning his guests were assembled together and engaged in divine worship. He showed me some of his houses. Among them were the most elegantly furnished mansions with accommodations not inferior to the grandest hotels, the highest charge for which was $2,00 a day If apartments are not secured in advance, the best plan will be to come immediately to Mr. Long and get him to show you around.

You will be met on the cars by agents for lodging houses who will tell you that you cannot possibly get first class board for less than $2.50 per day. Have nothing to do with them. They charge the families such a large commission that you will only get the same fare you can get elsewhere for $1,50. This board gives only two meals a day. You can get a very good lunch on the grounds for from 30 to 50 cents. A genuine bowl of pure cold milk with Vienna bread will cost you 20 cents. Be sure to ask the price before ordering. The Dairy is about the best place to lunch, an abundance of ice water can be had all over the grounds without cost. The management can not be too strongly commended. The daily crowd of thirty or forty thousand visitors is respectable, good natured and remarkably well behaved. After spending 3 days on the grounds, I have failed to note a case of drunkenness or disorder. Every body is communicative and seems delighted. Now, Messrs Editors, if any one has contemplated this trip, by all means let him not fail to come; let him follow my advice, and my word for it, he will witness a spectacle which is unsurpassed in the history of the world.

Respt yours,
R J. ROUND

Shelby District Conference.

The Shelby District Conference, of the North Carolina Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened at the Methodist church at Hickory, June 8th, 1876, at 3 o'clock P. M.

Bishop McTyeire not being present, Rev. R. G. Barrett, P. E., of the District, called the Conference to order, and led in prayer.

The Chairman requested the Secretaries of the previous Conference to get up a roll of the Conference; after which B. F. Dixon was elected Secretary.

Rev. J. B McFerrin, D. D., and Rev. D. R Burton, P. E., of the Salisbury District, were introduced to the Conference.

The attendance of ministers and delegates on the sessions of the Conference was unusually large; about one hundred and fifteen persons were entertained at Hickory during the Conference, free of charge.

All the interests of the church were carefully looked after, and the reports of the Pastors of the several Circuits and Stations showed that the spiritual state of the church is in a good condition; that the Sunday-school cause is flourishing: that Education, in the bounds of the District, is in high appreciation.

Owing to the great pressure in monetary matters, the finances of the District are depressed; still the pastors of the District paid over to Dr. McFerrin, the Missionary Secretary, a large proportion of the money assessed for Foreign Missions Two circuits, I believe, were reported as having paid all the collection ordered by the Conference, viz: Lincolnton and Dallas.

Bishop McTyeire and Dr. J. W. North not being present the Centennial programme could not be carried out in full.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. D R. Bruton of the Salisbury District, in place of Rev. S. Leard of Rutherfordton, who was too unwell to be present.

Dr. J. W. North's place in the programme was filled by Rev J. T. Harriss of Lincolnton.

Rev. Dr. Burkhead of Raleigh was present, and gave us a magnificent address Saturday morning, on "Methodism—The grounds of its success."

Dr. McFerrin filled his place in the programme, viz: "Methodism and its Missions," ably and well.

Rev. H. T. Hudson, in one of the happiest efforts of his life, discoursed to the Conference for upwards of an hour, upon "Methodism and its Founders." In fact, all the addresses were chaste and eloquent, and filled with irresistable argument which carried every theing before it.

The Conference Colleges were represented by Rev. J. A. Cunningim, one the agents He addressed the Conference Saturday afternoon, in the interest of the College, and raised by subscription six hundred and twenty eight dollars. From the way in which the Presiding Elder has arranged the work of the pastors for the remainder of this Centennial year, we have reason to believe the entire amount of money, which has been assessed the District, will be raised in the manner proposed by the agents.

The following visiting brethren were present during the sessions of the Conference: Rev. S. S. Bryant, D. D, of Missouri, Rev. J. F. England, of the S. C. Conference, Rev. C. A. Gault, of Wilkesboro' circuit, R. T. Gray, Esq., Junior editor of the Advocate, and Rev. Mr. Ingold, and Rev. Mr. Shuford, of the Reformed Church

The pulpits were filled during Conference, by Drs. McFerrin, Burkhead, and Bryant, and Rev. J. T. Harriss, Rev. J. A. Cunningim, Rev. S. R Traywick, Rev. L. Shell and Rev. M. A. Holler. The sermon of Dr. McFerrin on Sabbath morning at the Methodist church, was, indeed, a feast of fat things.

The Sunday-school mass-meeting, composed of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian schools, was held at the Methodist church Sabbath afternoon, and addresses were delivered by Dr. J. B. McFerrin, B. F. Dixon, and Col. W. S. G. Andrews.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the ensuing annual Conference to be held at Greensboro: Miles O. Sherrill, of Newton, Rev. R. L Abernethy, Pres. of Rutherford College, William T. Shipp, of Lincolnton, and Dr. A A. Soroggs, of Lenoir. Alternates: Hon. J. C Harper, of Lenoir, A. C. Miller, of Shelby. L. J Hoyle, of Cleaveland, and R. B. B. Houston, of Newton.

The following resolution was unanimously passed by the Conference:

Resolved that the thanks of this Conference are eminently due, and hereby gratefully tendered, to the authorities of the Rail Roads, and Abernethy and Smith's hack line, for reduction of fare and other courtesies; to the citizens and especially the ladies of Hickory, for their kindness and hospitality in the entertainment of its many delegates and visitors; to the pastors of the Baptist and Reformed churches, for the use of their pulpits during the Conference.

Rutherfordton was selected for the place of holding the next District Conference.

Murfreesboro Female College.

MESS. EDITORS: I have just returned from the grand vocal and instrumental concert which, like a sort of centennial apotheosis, signalized the conclusion of the commencement exercises of the Wesleyan Female College. These exercises began on Sunday, 17th inst., at 11 A. M., when the sermon before the Graduating Class was preached by Rev. E. P. Wilson, of Ashland, Va., from Ecclesiastes ix, 10: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.'

At 8 P. M., Rev. Hezekiah P. Mitchell, of Portsmouth, Va., preached before the Young Ladies' Christian Association of M. F. College, upon the "Potency of woman's influence in the cause of Christ," taking for his text a part of the 4th verse of the twentieth chapter of St Matthew: "Go ye also into the vineyard."

On Monday night, at 8 o'clock, the annual celebration of the two Literary Societies—"M. P. S." and "Theta Delta"—took place at the Methodist Church in the village, when an Address was delivered by Rev. J. J. Lafferty, Junior Editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate. It was a very humorous production, and kept the audience pretty steadily on the laugh. The subject was "Model Heroines." A very funny story was told about a widow who whipped a railroad—locomotive, train and all. The courage of such ladies as prefer virginity to matrimony was highly commended; in fact Mr Lafferty regarded the 'old maids' as exhibiting the highest heroism. He said if Eve had only had the spirit to discard Adam, when he went back on her about the apple, it would have prevented all the misery and suffering which have followed. But Eve probably thought Adam was her "last chance," and so stuck to him:

This morning, at 11 o'clock, Rev. Robert N. Sledd, of Petersburg, Va., delivered the regular Annual Address. His subject was "The Human Soul—its Origin and Dignity." The scholarly speaker used no notes. The discourse was a splendid plea for spirituality against the groveling theisms of Huxley, Darwin and others of the modern materialistic school.

Following the Annual Address came the Essays of the Graduating Class as follows:

Essay 1—'Novel Heroines compared with real life Women.' By Miss Viola P Thomas, of King and Queen county, Va.

Essay 2.—'The Two Shrines of St. Helena.' By Miss Maggie A Foreman, of Norfolk county, Va.

Essay 3—'The Sogg of the Gondolier.' By Miss Ella W Berry, of Culpepper county, Va.

Essay 4.—'Too low they build, who build below the skies.' By Miss Mollie W Day, of Murfreesboro, N C.

Essay 5—Practical Education the need of Women.' By Miss Maggie A Lumbertson, of Northampton county, N C.

Essay 6.—'The Sun-dial takes note of bright hours only.' By Miss Ella Jameson of Culpepper county, Va.

Essay 7—'Not Yet.' By Miss Mary A Lumbertson, of Northampton county, N C.

Essay 8—'Iron Cutteth Iron.' By Miss Gay Toombs, of King and Queen county, Va.

Essay 9—'1876.' By Miss Northa C Price, of Elizabeth City, N C.

To night, at 8 o'clock, a large audience assembled in the College Chapel to witness the delivery of diplomas to the Graduating Class and to listen to the grand Vocal and Instrumental Concert which was rendered in accordance with an elaborate programme

Revival at Mt. Airy.

MESSRS EDITORS: The meeting of which I wrote in my former letter, was protracted at Mt. Airy for three weeks, with much interest and good results. The Church was much revived. Eighteen persons were converted and fifteen joined our church. At the two meetings of three weeks continuance each, as the total immediate result, thirty persons professed to have found peace from believing in Jesus. Thirty four joined the M. E Church, South Others will doubtless join soon. The community was seriously impressed for good. It was indeed a "time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord" Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name be all the glory given. Our help cometh from God.

Very truly yours,
JAMES WILLSON.

Local Ministers' Conference and Camp-Meeting.

DEAR BRETHREN: We desire to call your attention to a few facts which you will be interested in remembering.

1st. The Local Ministers' Conference meets this year at Rutherford College, on Thursday the 17th of August (take notice, it is about one month later than usual.)

2d. Rutherford College is located at Icard Station on the Western N. C. Rail Road 12 miles east of Morganton.

3d. A camp meeting is to be held at the same time and place of the Conference, at which a large number of preachers, both itinerant and local, are expected.

4th. Some good centennial sermons and addresses will probably be delivered during the meeting.

5th. Remember the Local Conference is intended especially to arouse the 300 local ministers of the State, and thus add to the advancement of our great Methodism

6th. At the late Centennial in Raleigh Bishops McTyeire, Marvin, and all the distinguished speakers on that occasion, generally acknowledged the great value of local preachers as humble and efficient workers in the past history of our Methodism.

7th. The Local Conference is not revolutionary, but revivalistic.

8th Preachers west of the Blue Ridge will have a better opportunity of attending the Conference than ever before; let them make their arrangements to attend on the 17th of August and 5 or 6 days following.

9th. Every local preacher in the State is deeply interested in this the 8th annual meeting since the reorganization of the Conference.

Sunday School Celebration at Antioch.

MESSRS EDITORS: Although the heavens were shaded with dark clouds, and the light of the sun in vain, attempted to penetrate their density, yet, in obedience to the invitation by friends and relatives, we were, soon after breakfast, on our way to the Sunday School Celebration at Antioch, in this (Johston) county. I found that others were as anxious to attend as I, the road was blockaded with wagons and vehicles of various kinds transporting the parents and children to the desired place.

On my arrival I observed a considerable crowd in the grove, but I was surprised to find that the house was already full. The leader of the occasion, Mr. Y. J. Lee, soon assembled his Sunday school scholars, whose voices cheered our hearts with the sweet melody of song, and made us feel glad to be present. The orator of the occasion Rev. Mr. G C. Jones, of Wilmington N. C., proceeded to address the audience in a speech very appropriate for such an assembly.

Every one present was thoroughly convinced of his ability to organize and carry on Sunday schools successfully. As the soul had been fed with rich food for an hour or so, an intermission was given for the purpose of sealing all that had passed with a good dinner. While the Superintendent had, together with his scholars, exerted himself to make the celebration a success, the good ladies of the community (as they generally do) had spared no pains to make their department interesting and attractive. I know not how many basketfulls of scraps were taken up, but I do know that every person present got enough to eat, even to one darkey, who was there.

With smiling faces and glad hearts we again commanded silence to reign, while a volume of music rushed through the anxious crowd, leaving its impression upon all. May those children continue to sing praises to their Creator, that peace and harmony may be their constant companions, and angels administer unto them when they "shall have crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees." Feeling that we had grown to considerable stature in one day, we bid the Sunday school of Antioch Church, and visitors a cordial farewell and in the providence of heaven returned home under a clear sky.

BITS OF THINGS.

If I may not, sin-defiled,
Claim my birthright as a child,
Suffer it that I to thee
As a hired servant be;
Let the lowliest task be mine,
Grateful, so the work be thine.
If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blunder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent;
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in thy employ
Peace, that dearer is than joy,
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my natural habitude. —Bulletin.

Rural and Domestic.

To Measure Land.

To aid our farmers in arriving at accuracy in estimating the amount of land in different fields under cultivation, the following table is given by a agricultural paper:

5 yards wide by 968 yards long contain 1 acre.
10 yards wide by 484 yards long contain 1 acre.
20 yards wide by 242 yards long contain 1 acre.
40 yards wide by 121 yards long contain 1 acre.
80 yards wide by 60½ yards long contain 1 acre.
70 yards wide by 69½ yards long contain 1 acre
60 feet wide by 726 feet long contain 1 acre.
110 feet wide by 369 feet long contain 1 acre.
120 feet wide by 363 feet long contain 1 acre.
220 feet wide by 198 feet long contain 1 acre.
240 feet wide by 181½ feet long contain 1 acre.
440 feet wide by 99 feet long contain 1 acre.
A box 54x16 inches, 22 deep, contains 1 barrel.
A box 16x16½ inches, 8 deep, contains 1 bushel.
A box 8x8½ inches,, 8 deep, contains 1 peck.
A box 4x4 inches, 4½ deep, contains ½ peck.

The standard bushel of the United States contains 2160 4 cubic inches. Any box or measure, the contents of which are equal to 2160.4 cubic inches, will hold a bushel of grain. In measuring fruit, vegetables, coal and other substances, one-fifth must be added. In other words a peck measure five times even full makes one bushel. The usual practice is to "heap the measure."

The Philosophy of Hoeing.

It may be overdone or underdone. There is reason in everything, "even in roasting eggs," as the saying is. So in hoeing crops. If we hoe up the soil in large lumps, as we are apt to do with the very serviceable modern prong-hoes, we let the keen, dry air into contact with the starting but enfeebled roots, and by their parching, an irreparable injury is done. Such lumps should be crushed down so as to be permeable to air throughout and yet serve to protect roots from its free sweep. But as in avoiding Scylla we may run to wreck on Charybdis, so in crushing the soil we may make it too fine, in which case the first heavy rain will run the surface together in a crust impervious to the air, and for want of enough of air; so essential to active root action, growth will be checked until the hoe or its equivalent is used again to break up and open the surface crust. Some soils have such a texture as to prevent this packing effect of rains, in which case they are apt to produce more than far richer soils which run. A surface dressing or mulch of vegetable matter, or the shallow working in of manure, greatly favors the productiveness of such fine, compacting soils, which with vigilant summer hoeing will yield more than any coarser soils can.—New York Tribune.

Tender Footed Horses.

An old man who had much experience in handling and dealing in horses for more than half a century, said to me recently that he had never known a horse to get tender footed that was kept loose in a shed and yard or in a box stall; that turning and treading with their fore feet in the manure kept them constantly moist and soft. His theory appeared perfectly reasonable to me. I have no box stall, but I use shavings for bedding, and every morning with a large shovel I move the wet shavings under the horse's forward feet, and then the last thing at night cover these with dry shavings for him to lie on. He also remarked that he never knew a flat-footed horse but that was a good worker.—Cor. Live Stock Journal.

How to Cure Scratches in Horses.

First cleanse the heels well from all dirt and other foreign matter with strong suds made by means of carbolic soap and warm water. This done, dry the parts well be careful to remove all the soapy matter thoroughly from the sore in order to prevent the collection of dirt. Then dress the heels with a lotion composed of carbolic acid, one part; cold water, forty parts, three times a day. In one quarter of an hour after using the lotion, rub over the diseased surface with glycerine, and keep the parts supplied with it. Give him, mixed in his feed of grain night and morning, one and a half ounces of arsenicalis each time, and continue this treatment for a time after his heels have dried up. Turf, Field and Farm.

Corn loses one-fifth by drying, and wheat one fourteenth. From this the estimate is made that it is more profitable for the farmer to sell unshelled corn in the fall at seventy cents than $1 a bushel in the following summer, and that wheat at $1.25 in December is equal to $1.50 in the succeeding June, In case of potatoes—taking those that rot and are otherwise lost, together with the shrinkage—there is little doubt that between October and June the loss to the owner who holds them is not less than thirty three per cent.

There is a reasonable chance of recovery in the worst cases of Consumption, Bronchitis, Scrofula, etc., if Baker's Cod Liver Oil and Phosphate of Lime is taken promptly and perseveringly. So prepared as to be pleasant in taste, its use is being rapidly extended with most gratifying results. For sale by druggists. Jno. C. Baker & Co., Philadelphia.

The Evil Fruits of weak Digestion.

There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than that the most formidable phases of nervous diseases are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives are powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilative organs, upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep than a regiment of cathodicon—than all the so-called narcotics to be found in the pharmacopœia of out of it. A wineglassfull of the bitters should be taken before each meal.

MODERN WOMEN.

It is a sad commentary upon our boasted civilization that the women of our times have degenerated in health and physique until they are literally a race of invalids—pale, nervous, feeble and back-achy, with only here and there a few noble exceptions to the rule, persons of the robust, buxom ladies characteristic of the sex in days gone by. By a very large experience, covering a period of years, and embracing the treatment of many thousands of cases of these ailments peculiar to Women, Dr. Pierce, of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., has perfected, by the combination of certain vegetable extracts, a natural specific, which he does not exist as a cure-all, but specific, which he does not exist as a cure-all, but one which admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most positive and reliable remedy for those weaknesses and complaints that afflict the women of the present day. This natural specific compound is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The following are among those diseases in which this wonderful medicine has worked cures as if by magic and with a certainty never before attained by any medicines: Weak back, nervous and general debility, falling and other displacements of internal organs, resulting from debility and lack of strength in natural supports, internal fever, congestion, inflammation and ulceration and very many other chronic diseases incident to women, not proper to mention here, in which, as well as in the cases that have been enumerated, the Favorite Prescription effects cures—the marvel of the world. It will not do harm in any state or condition of the system, and by adopting its use the invalid lady may avoid that severest of ordeals—the consulting of a family physician. Favorite Prescription is sold by dealers in medicines generally.

Real Estate for Sale

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing homes in your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 1,000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and oil cedar saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, and may easily be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing [illegible] acres, one of which has been cleared and cultivated in tobacco, Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, well-wall, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power, and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 450 acres lying on Level's Creek, the larger part of which is in the bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 40 by 80 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse-power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 350 acres, lying on Rutledge and Sand Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and no abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State.

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Laundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Hayrick, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri-weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 30 miles.

Poetry.

The Kingdom Within.

BY REV. GEORGE MACDONALD.

I fancy I hear a whisper,
As of leaves in a gentle air;
Is it wrong, I wonder, to fancy
It may be the tree up there—
The tree that heals the nations,
Growing amidst the street,
And dropping, for who will gather,
Its apples at their feet?

I fancy I hear a rushing,
As of waters down a slope.
Is it wrong, I wonder, to fancy
It may be the river of hope—
The river of crystal waters
That flows from the very throne,
And runs through the street of the city,
With softly jubilant tone?

I fancy a twilight round me,
And a wandering of the breeze,
With a hush in that high city,
And a going in the trees.
But I know there will be no night there,
No coming and going day,
For the holy face of the Father
Will be perfect light always.

I could do without the darkness,
And better without the sun,
But oh, I should like a twilight
After the day was done!
Would Relay his hand on his forehead
On his hair as white as wool,
And shine one hour through his fingers,
Till the shadow has made me cool.

But the thought is very foolish,
If that Face I did but see
All else would be all forgotten—
River, and twilight, and tree.
I should look, I should care, for nothing,
Beholding his countenance,
And fear to lose one glimmer
By a single sideway glance.
'Tis again but a foolish fancy
To picture the countenance so
Which is shining in all our spirits,
Making them white as snow.
Come to me, oh come to me, Master,
And I care not for river or tree,
Care for no sorrow or crying,
If only then shone in me.

I would lie in my bed for ages,
Looking out on the dusty street—
No whisper, no leaves, nor waters,
Nor anything cool and sweet—
If my heart this ghostly fainting,
And this burning in my blood—
If only I knew thou wast with me,
Wast with me, and making me good.

OUR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

NUMBER 1.

Education is a desideratum of the times and the country: while Christian education is an absolute moral necessity. The education of the present generation in mental and physical sciences, without a very large intermixture of the moral, would prove the greatest misfortune of our nation. Already have the people received too much of this kind of education: hence we find such philosophers as Tyndall and Huxley standing at the head of increasing schools of scientism. Every phenomenon of nature and the special administrations of God's providences must all now be explained upon the principles of natural or physical laws: and the idea of God's omnipresence and immediate personal operations must be ignored. The plausible presumption is, that God is too great and high to meddle with such small things as the operations of physical nature, or to take notice of men's actions in our daily business concerns!

We ought, therefore, to manage the schools of the country in such a way as to increase the moral element in education: to so develop our sons and cultivate our daughters that the slightest departure from the common faith of the gospel should meet immediate intelligent rebuke in the moral and religious sentiment pervading the masses. In this way we shall very soon put to blush the assumptions of foolish men. "Scientists" so called, will be ashamed to avow their infidelity, and true religion will find an abundance of prepared material for its consumption.

But the question arises, "Is the instruction which is given in our sectarian schools and colleges the true Christian element necessary to such happy results as we have been trying to describe?" In other words, "Is sectarian teaching in our schools and colleges capable of inspiring the hearts of the young with these high and holy Christian principles which are needed to meet the issues of the day?" We are humbly of the opinion it is not. We admit that Methodism, Presbyterianism, &c, may be successfully imparted in this way; but is Methodism or Presbyterianism Christianity? These are only outward, specific forms of Christianity which belong to, and have a right in, the Church of the living God; but we do think these specific forms have no place in the school room.

Our reason for this opinion is this: Christianity is the offspring of a pure benevolence; sectarianism is the product of selfishness. Now, when we attempt in the school room to impart to the young the ideas of sectarianism under the pretence of christianizing them, we are acting falsely upon our part while we are deceiving those committed to our charge: and the danger is that we may send our pupils home in the conscious belief that they are Christians, when they are only sectarians.

Now, we believe in placing in all our schools and colleges, faculties of holy men and women, who will labor without any reference to Denominationalism for the salvation of every pupil. Let them be such as will make experimental religion part and parcel of the course of study. Let its importance, excellence and necessity be interwoven with the daily exercises of the school room. In this way all our young people may be converted to a pure, experimental, Bible Christianity; then let them be instructed in the Church in the doctrines and dogmas of sectarianism.

We write these lines in good faith in view of what we regard as an error in our school operations. By permission of the editors we may say something more upon these subjects in the future.

ROBERT.

To the Ministers of the Gospel and to all other friends of the Bible cause in Guilford County:

DEAR BRETHREN: The anniversary exercises of the Guilford County Bible Society, auxiliary to the American Bible Society, were held in Greensboro on Sabbath night, the 28th May, 1876, and a business meeting of the officers on the following day. At the latter it was resolved to finish, during the Summer, the canvass of the County, and its supply with the Holy Scriptures, and Dr. JNO. L. BROWEN was selected to do the work. It was, also, agreed to hold Bible Meetings in different parts of the County, if the way be open, for the diffusion of information in regard to this great cause, and to afford to all who wish to see the revealed Truth of God disseminated at home and abroad an opportunity to co operate in this blessed enterprise which is a fundamental part of the Gospel agency. We are sure that all of you will share in our desire to have the Holy Scriptures planted in every household of the County, and this is the primary aim of our efforts; while you and we would like, also, to take part in the mighty movements of the Church, through Bible Societies, for the making of every wilderness and solitary place of the earth glad for the Oracles of Life. In 1874 one half of the County was explored and supplied by sale and donation, and over one eighth of the population was found to be without the Bible; and the colporteur was, also, a missionary, acting in all his work under the instructions of Rev. C. H. WILEY, District Superintendent for the American Bible Society in North Carolina, and conducting religious exercises among the destitute. The work will be continued on the same plan, and we were appointed a Committee to correspond with ministerial and lay brethren and arrange with them for meetings at Churches in different sections of the County, to invite suggestions on the subject, and to aid in securing competent speakers to present the cause. Relying on your cordial co-operation, and hoping that you will freely communicate with us,

We are fraternally yours,
S. D. ADAMS,
S. F. CONRAD,
C. G. YATES, } Com.

I attended the meetings above referred to, and heartily suyported the action taken. The conrse of proceeding is due alike to a cause common to all in its duties and privileges, and to the people who live too far from the seat of the County Bible Society to be able to participate in their meetings, and who seldom have the opportunity of hearing the statistics of the progress of an essential part of the Ministry of the Word. By the Divine blessing the meetings proposed can be made very interesting, pleasant and profitable, and I earnestly commend them to the immediate and favorable attention of all concerned.

C. H. WILEY,
Dist. Supt. American Bible Society.

LONGEVITY OF JEWS.—DR. Benjamin, Richardson, the leading sanitary authority of England, delivered a lecture, March 26, before the Jews of London, upon the "Vitality of the Jews and the Mosaic Sanitary Code." After giving some interesting statistics as to the large proportion of Jews who reach old age, Dr. Richardson took up the causes of this longevity, chief among which was the observance of the laws of Moses. Its provisions, he said, form a marvelous collection of sanitary rules. The rest enjoined upon the seventh day is a most important provision for health, which, it strictly obeyed, would insure to any nation an extra term of life. The cleansings of the house, vessels, and person which are enjoined, and the abstaining from the flesh of animals which feed upon garbage, are great checks upon the spread of disease. In addition to these are the control of the passions, and the special care of the aged, enforced in the Commandments.

Locke's Purity and Piety.

The new "Life of John Locke" by Mr. H. R. Fox Bourne, recently published in England, and announced for early publication in this country by Harper & Bros., revives two anecdotes of that eminent Christian philosopher and statesman which are very suggestive for the teaching afforded by his example.

The one exhibits Locke's purity and delicate sense of honor as a public man. During the evil reigns of Charles the Second and James the Second he had been under a clound, had been discharged from all positions of an official character, and had even been expelled from Oxford University by the order of Charles the Second. His principal residence during these evil days was in Holland, where he had a considerable share in the preparations for the action of the Whig leaders, which ended in the Revolution of 1688 and the accession of William the Third to the British throne. The King always had a high sense of Locke's services and of his abilities, and in 1695 the philosopher was appointed one of the Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, with a salary of £1,000 a year, the duties of which he discharged with such care and dilligence as to gain universal approbation. He continued in this office till the year 1700, when he was forced to resign it by his increasing ill health. When he came to this determination he acquainted no person with his design till he placed his commission in the King's hands. William was very unwilling to accept Locke's resignation, and told him he would be well pleased with his continuance in the office, even though he should give little or no attendance, for that he did not wish him to stay in town one day to the hurt of his health. "But," says his biographer.. "Mr. Locke told the King that he could not in conscience hold a ploce to which such a salary was annexed without discharging its duties, and therefore begged leave to be allowed to resign it."

The other anecdote gives us a sight of the great man's closing hours. In the beginning of the summer of 1704 his strength began to fail, and his weakness made him apprehend that his death was near. He often spoke of it, but always with great composure, though he omitted none of the precautions which his skill in medicine could suggest, in order to prolong his life. At length, seeing plainly that he had but a short time to live, he prepared to quit this world with a deep sense of the manifold blessings of God to him, which he took a delight in recounting to his friends, and full of a sincere resignation to the divine will, and of firm hopes in his promises of a future life. For some weeks he was not able to walk, and was carried about the house in a chair. The day before his death, Lady Masham being alone with him, and sitting by his bed he exhorted her to regard this world only as a state of preparation for a better, and added that he had lived long enough, and thanked God for having passed his life so happily, but that this life appeared to him a mere vanity. He had no sleep that night, but resolved to try to rise the next morning, as he did. He was carried to his study, and placed in an easy chair, where he slept a considerable while at different time. Seeming to be a little refreshed, he would be dressed as he used to be. He then desired Lady Masham, who was reading the Psalms low, while he was dressing, to read aloud; she did so, and he appeared very attentive, till, the approach of death preventing him, he desired her to break off, and a few minutes afterward expired, in the seventy third year of his age.

No comments that we could add would make the moral to be deduced from this great man's example more clear or more forcible for our instruction in public purity or personal holiness.—Christian Intelligencer.

Rev. Dr. H H. Jessup writes to the secretaries of the Presbyterian Board that certain zealous Moslems in Constantinople have organized a society for the propagation of their faith in Ugaga, the country of the African King Mteea, whom Mr H. M. Sanley fancied that he had, partly at least, "converted to Christianity," and for the Christianization of whose kingdom the English Church Missionary Society lately appropriated $25 000 Africa may be a good field for Mohammedanism; but it is the gospel of Christ, not the Koran, which the millions of that great continent need.

A missionary at Osaka, Japan writes that a year ago a large building was erected near the mission chapel for the avowed purpose of preaching down the "Jesus" religion. For awhile the Japanese thronged it by day and night. Then the interest subsided, and the building was offered the missionary as a place of Christian worship. The offer was declined, and the building was torn down.

Uncertain What to do.

The writer, as he was leaving a prayer meeting, turned as he saw the face of a well known Christian brother; and close at hand stood a young lady, dressed in deep mourning, with whom he had been conversing, standing there, a child of sorrow. The big tears were slowly rolling down her cheeks, and then she would wipe them away, as if she had been half unconscious of their falling.

"Here is a lady, said the gentleman, 'to whom I wish you to say a few words. She says she is 'uncertain what to do.'"

I soon saw that she was in spiritual trouble.

"Why are you uncertain what to do?" I inquired.

"I do not understand the next step to be taken," said she.

"Where are you now?" I asked.

"I have been coming daily to the meetings for four weeks, and all that time I have felt anxious about my soul, but all I do does not seem to make my case any better."

"And what do you try to do?"

"I have striven to convince myself that I am a sinner—as I know I am. But though I know it as a truth, I do not feel about it as I should."

"How would you feel about it if you could?"

"I would have deep conviction."

"What is your present impression about yourself?"

"That I am a great sinner—that is all."

"And what would you have more?"

"That is what I do not understand. The next step should be for deeper conviction. But what further can I do?"

"Your mistake is a very common one. Your next step, and your only step, is to go to Christ, just as you are. Go to Him at once. You can do nothing Hitherto you have been relying upon yourself. Renounce all this as a dishonor done to Christ as a Saviour, and go to Him for all the help you need, hope for, or desire."

"Is that all?"

"That is all. You must stop trying to do anything, and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Go to Him who says to you, 'Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out.'"

"O," said she, as if a new light had dawned upon her mind, "is that my next step?"

"Not your next step, as if you had already taken one or more right steps. Going to Christ is your first step, and only step. He does not say, Come to conviction—come to deeper sense of sin; but He says, 'Come unto me.'"

"O! what a self righteous creature I am. I see it all now. I have been refusing Christ, while all this time I thought I was preparing to come to Him,' she said evidently disappointed in herself.

"Will you go to Jesus now?' was hastily asked.

She looked up with a smile, and great resolution depicted in her intelligent face as she answered:

"I will."

Easy Manners.

Recent events have called public attention to the intimate relation of morals and manners. It may be said that there is no greater peril to morality than much that is called merely free and easy manners. Young men, and even young women, permit themselves a freedom and license of manner which, having all the aspect of impropriety, may very readily acquire its substance. Edward addresses Emily with a loud and jesting intimacy of tone and conduct, which might be expected in the sailor saloons of Water Street or Wapping, but which is repulsive and odious in the drawing room or among refined and gentle persons. Edward and Emily would be amazed to be told that they have not the manners of a gentleman or of a lady, and have the air of a demimonde. They think that they are especially comme il faut, and that above all others they know what is the rule of high society. But they are merely vulgar, and have the manners of those who are worse than merely vulgar. . Coarseness cannot be gilded into refinement. The young woman who habitually calls her young friends of the other sex by their Christian names, or who suffers anything that can be called familiarity, although it fall short of actual indecorum, should reflect carefully. 'Sir,' said a lady to a policeman who took her elbow to pass her over the street, 'if I wish you to touch me I will ask you.' No woman of a high sense of personal dignity wishes any man to lay his hand upon her thoughtlessly or unnecessarily. Nor will such a woman permit any kind of rudeness in the tone or manner of men.—Harper's Magazine.

Loving the Bible

Twenty seven years ago, in the congregation of my first charge, was a lady whose love for the Bible was something remarkable. In the confidence of a pastoral visit, she told me of her joy in the divine word, and also recited the incidents of her experience in this regard. She had formerly read her Bible as so many do- a chapter now and a half chapter then - without much interest or profit. She was even then most interested in religious things. But her chief sources of spiritual strength were in such writings as those of Baxter, Payson, and Robert Phillip. It was her custom to read the Bible from duty, and then turn to these uninspired volumes for the kindling of a higher devotion. For a good while this satisfied her. But at length she came to feel grieved about it. She thought it a dishonor to God's word that any book should be as interesting to her as the Bible. She tried to change this, but at first with little success. The Bible was still duty. Baxter was pleasure and spiritual elevation.

At length she could bear it no longer. So she took the case to God with strong crying. She told her heavenly Father how grieved she was that any book should rival the Bible in her affections. She asked this one thing—and she renewed her prayer every day—that her first delight might be in reading the word of God. I think it was sometime before she felt that her request was granted. But at length the answer to her prayer was complete and marvelous. A strange light came over the sacred page. A fascination held her to her Bible. She discovered a depth, a meaning, a curiosity, a charm, which were all new and most wonderful. Sometimes when she had finished reading her Bible for the night, and had closed the book and had moved towards her bed, she would go back again and enjoy the luxury of a few more verses. At the time of our interview she was thus delighting in the law of God.

The conversation made an indelible impression upon my mind. I remember it, after so long a time, with vivid interest. It might be expected that such a Bible lover would be foremost in every good word and work. She was an example in attendance upon the church services. Her mode of listening to a sermon was vastly encouraging to her pastor. Her sympathy with the entire work of the church was most marked and influential. She was active and earnest, without any extravagance or enthusiasm. The very memory of such a helper moves my heart with tender thankfulness. A pastor never outlives the influence of such a parishioner. This Berean type of piety in the pew is the strongest bulwark of the pulpit. It brings fidelity, sincerity, and whatever else belongs to a loyal church member.

I believe the experience of every pastor will justify the statement that by such things we live, and that we can always lean with confidence upon those who find God's precepts "sweeter than honey."—Rev. Frederick G. Clark, D. D., in New York Observer.

The latest missionary intelligence from Fiji is of mournful interest, and goes to show that former accounts of the fearful ravages of the epidemic with which the islands were visited last year were not at all exaggerated. The following particulars have been furnished by a correspondent: "At the annual district meeting eight missionaries were present, and thirty-four native ministers. Six candidates for the native ministry were unanimously recommended to the Conference to be received on trial, and six probationers were recommended for ordination. The losses of the Wesleyan Church in this colony by the late epidemic have been very heavy, including 9 native ministers, upward of 150 catechists, 200 local preachers, 700 class leaders, 8,000 church members, together with a large number of attendants on public worship, making a total of 35,000. The following are the returns for September. 1875: Missionaries, 9; native ministers, 48; catechists, 785; day school teachers, 2,382; class leaders, 2,233; local preachers, 635; church members, 16,838; on trial for membership, 3,858; attendants on public worship, 84,485."

GIVE YOUR CHILD A PAPER.—A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper, because he reads of names and things which are familiar and he will progress accordingly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Every father must consider that information is connected with advancement. The mother of a family, being one of its heads, and having more immediate charge of children, should, herself, be instructed. A mind occupied becomes fortified against the ills of life, and is braced for emergency. Children amused by reading or study are of course more considerate and more easily governed.

The Gospel.

The Gospel gloomy! It is an anthem from the harps of heaven, the music of the river of life washing its shores on high and pouring in cascades upon the earth. Not so cheerful was the song of the morning stars, nor the shouts of the sons of God so joyful. Gushing from the fountains of eternal harmony, it was the first heard on earth in a low tone of solemn gladness uttered in Eden by the Lord God Himself. This gave the keynote of the Gospel song. Patriarchs caught it up and taught it to the generations following. It breathed from the harp of the psalmist, and rang like a clarion from tower to mountain top as prophets proclaimed the year of jubilee. Fresh notes from heaven have enriched the harmony, as the Lord of Hosts and His angels have revealed promises, and called on the suffering children of Zion to be joyful in their King. From bondage and exile, from dens and caves, from bloody fields and fiery stakes and peaceful death-beds have they answered, in forces which cheered the disconsolate and made oppressors shake upon their thrones, while sun and moon, and all the stars of light, stormy wind fulfilling His Word, the roaring sea and the fullness thereof, mountains and hills, fruitful fields and all the trees of the wood have rejoiced before the Lord, and the coming of His anointed, for the redemption of His people and the glory of His holy name.—Dr. Hodge.

The Stone Which the Builders Refused.

I have heard a story—I cannot tell whether it is true or not—we would not like to endorse it—by some one of the Jewish Rabbis; it is a tale concerning the text: "The stone which the builders refused, the same is become the headstone of the corner." It is said when Solomon's temple was building, all the stones were brought from the quarry ready cut and fashioned, and each block marked for the place it was to occupy. Among the stones was a very curious one; it seemed of no describable shape, and appeared unfit for any portion of the buiding. They tried it in this wall, then in another, but it could not be accomodated; so, vexed and angry, they threw it away. The temple was so many years building that the stone became covered with moss, grew around it. Everybody passing by laughed at the stone: they said Solomon was wise, and doubtless all the other stones were right; but as for that block they might as well send it back to the quarry, for they were quite sure it was meant for nothing. Year after year rolled on, and the poor stone was despised; the builders constantly refused it. The eventful day came when the temple was to be finished and opened, and the multitude was to see the grand sight. The builders said, "Where is the topstone? Where is the pinnacle?" They little thought where the crowning marble was until one said, "Perhaps that stone which the builders refused, is meant to be the topstone." They hoisted it to the top, and found it exactly adapted to the place. Loud hosannahs made the welkin ring, as the stone which the builders refused became the headstone of the corner.—Masonic Jewel.

MINISTERS' WIVES AS CRITICS.—Our ministers' wives are generally women of good education, and more than ordinary culture. They are supposed to be as competent to detect an ungrammatical expression, an improper pronunciation or enunciation as almost any other class of persons. In aesthetics, if not in ethics, they are perhaps better authority than their husbands. We think we know some ministers wives who excel them in the former science, albeit they are Doctors of Divinity.

Now, we think there is a field of usefulness for some of these women of good judgment, good taste, and good manners, in which they might perform excellent service. Many of us (ministers) get into some little habits—some things very unpleasant in the pulpit—in our modes of expression, or in articulation which might be very readily corrected if our attention were called to them; but, as it is a delicate matter, no one cares to speak to us about it. But if the minister's wife is a woman of intelligence and good taste, she ought certainly to be able to notice some of these little defects, and it is presumed that no minister of the gospel would object to his wife's correcting his blunders, or criticising his matter or manners. She, indeed, is the only one who can feel entirely free to speak to him about these things. There are many good and able ministers whose usefulness is much hindered by some habit which they are, perhaps, not conscious of possessing, and which a word from an intelligent and observant wife might correct.

Sound.

A well at Carisbrooke Castle, Isle of Wight, has water at the bottom; and when even so small an object as a pin is dropped into the water, the sound can be heard above, although the well is more than two hundred feet deep. At St. Albans Cathedral, it used to be said, the tick of a watch could be heard from end to end of that very long building; whether the recent restorations have interfered with this phenomenon, we do not know. Sound can be heard over water at a greater distance than over land; Dr. Hutton heard a person reading at a hundred and forty feet distance on the Thames, where he could only hear him seventy feet on shore. Sound can be heard over ice, also, more easily than over land. When Lieutenant Foster was wintering in the Arctic regions, he found he could converse with a man a mile and a quarter distant, both being on the ice in Bowen harbor. The human voice, it is asserted, has been heard ten miles off at Gibraltar—we presume over the water of the strait. The whispering gallery at St. Paul's is always a mystery to visitors; a whisper often becomes distinctly audible at the opposite side of the gallery, but not at intermediate positions. The late Sir Charles Wheatstone once made a curious observation on sound at the Colosseum in the Regent's Park—recently pulled down. Placing himself close to the upper part of the interior wall—a circle a hundred and thirty feet in diameter,—he found that a spoken word was repeated many times; that an exclamation appeared like a peal of laughter, and that the tearing of a piece of paper was like the pattering of hail. In the cathedral of Girgenti, Sicily, a whisper can be heard the whole length of the building if the whisperer places himself in the focus of the semi circular apse at one end. A story is told that long ago a confessional box was inadvertently placed just at that spot, near the entrance to the church, and that the authorities were first made acquainted with this awkward fact by a ferment arising out of one particular confession.—Chamber's Journal.

Letters in Friendship.

Letters are an invariable sustainer of friendship, but no friendship can live on them. It is a delusion that a mere correspondence, whether daily, monthly or weekly, can supply the aliment for a lively, tenacious thorough friendship; there must be a personal intercourse. For one reason, the letters, to be intimate and unrestrained, and written in any mood and upon the spur of the moment, cannot fail now and then to jar upon the receiver. When two people talk, they are alive to each other's state and feeling. No one can guess the condition of his friend at the time he receives his letter. It may be written on impulse and read in weariness or in a testy mood. Or if cheerful a jest falls on a sore place. A snub may be detected where none is meant, a thought written under the pressure of strong feeling may be misunderstood. Letters cannot attempt to supply the place of conversation between two vigorous minds without making room for some of these hitches; and if the topics of the letters never touch on delicate themes, never approach points where there may be difference of opinion, then they do not keep friendship alive at the proper heat. All great friendships live in personal intercourse, and therefore it is that there are so few of them; and therefore that they do not remain unimpaired and in full strength to old age.—Blackwood.

Whining.

There is a class of people in this world—by no means small—whose prominent peculiarity is whining. They whine because they are poor: or, if rich, because they have no health to enjoy their riches; they have "no luck," and others prosperity exceeds theirs; they whine because some friends have died, and they are living; they whine because they have aches and pains, and they have aches and pains because they whine, and they whine no one can tell why. Now, we would like to say a word to those whining persons. First, stop whining—it is no use, this everlasting complaining, fretting, fault finding and whining. Why, you are the most deluded set of creatures that ever lived! Do you know that it is a well-settled principle of physiology and common sense that these habits are more exhausting to nervous vitality than almost any other violation of physiological law? And do you know that life is pretty much as you make it? You can make it bright and shiny or you can make it dark and shadowy. This life is only meant to discipline us—to fit us for a higher and purer state of being. Then stop whining and fretting, and go on your way rejoicing.

The First Steamboat on the Hudson.

The steaboat itself is a romance of the Hudson. Its birth was on its waters, where the rude conceptions of Evans and Fitch on the Schuylkill and Delaware were perfected by Fulton and his successors. How strange is the story of its advent, growth, and achievements! Living men remember when the idea of steam navigation was ridiculed. They remember, too, that, when the Clermont went from New York to Albany without the use of sails, against wind and tide, in thirty two hours, ridicule was changed into amazement. That voyage did more. It spread terror over the surface of the river, and created wide alarm along its borders. The steamboat was an awful revelation to the fishermen, the farmers, and the villagers. It came upon them unheralded. It seemed like a weird craft from Pluto's realm—a transfiguration of Charon's boat into a living fiend from the infernal regions. Its huge black pipe vomiting fire and smoke, the hoarse breathing of its engine, and the great splash of its uncovered paddle wheels, filled the imagination with all the dark pictures of goblins that romancers have invented since the foundation of the world. Some thought it was an unheard of monster of the sea ravaging the fresh water; others regarded it as a herald of the final conflagration at the day of doom. Managers of river crafts who saw it at night believed that the great red dragon of the Apocalypse was loose upon the waters. Some prayed for deliverance; some fled in terror to the shore, and hid in the recesses of the rocks; and some crouched in mortal dread beneath their decks, and abandoned their vessels and themselves to the mercy of the winds and waves, or the jaws of the demon. The Clermont was the author of some of the most wonderful romances of the Hudson, and for years she was the victim of the enmity of the fishermen, who believed that her noise and agitation of the waters would drive the shad and sturgeon from the river.—Harper's Magazine.

SCIENTIFIC.

A French chemist has disproved by experiment the old notion held by miners that a man cannot be poisoned by an atmosphere which will support the combustion of a lamp.

The French Gazette des Hopitaux contains an article on "The Effect of the Sun on Lunatics.' Dr. Ponza, director of the Lunatic Asylum at Allessandria (Piedmont,) conceived the idea that the solar rays might have some curative power in diseases of the brain. His conclusions from his experiments are these: "The violet rays are, of all others, those that possess the most intense electro-chemical power; the red light is also very rich in calorific rays; blue light, on the contrary, is quite devoid of them, as well as of chemical and electric ones. Its beneficent influence is hard to explain; as it is the absolute negation of all the excitement, it succeeds admirably in calming the furious excitement of maniacs."

A good deal of attention is being paid of late to the variable stars, especially by Schonfeld, of Mannheim, and Schmidt, of Athens. The latter, in a recent number of the Astronomische Nachrichten, gives the results of his observations upon the star of Algol since 1840. He finds the period to be 2 days, 20 hours, 48, 53.6, from one minimum of brightness to the next. The period, however, is quite constant, but seems to be shortening a few seconds in the century. The star remains most of the time of the second magnitude (about as bright as the pole star;) but when the fit comes on it begins to fade, and in about 4 hours, 30, has diminished to the fourth magnitude, with only about one fourth of its ordinary light. It remains faint about 15 minutes, and in 4¼ hours more recovers its pristine brilliancy.

The exports of France to England in the first three months of the current year amounted to $50 000,000: those of Great Britian to France, $18,000,000.

By a previous arrangement, all the ministers at Nelson, Ky., offered prayers for rain the other Sunday, and before morning the citizens thought the deluge would never subside.

The number of admissions to the Centennial for the first twenty days of the exhibition is 406 587 who have paid, and 122 661 who have not paid. The receipts are therefore. $203,268 50, or an average of $10,000 a day.

The headquarters of a gang of counterfeiters at Mount Vernon, Illinois, has been broken up. Several arrests weremade, and a large amount of material and implements were captured.

Gen. Green Clay Smith, of Kentuckey, and G. T. Stewart, of Ohio, have been nominated by the Prohibition Party for President and Vice President of the United States respectively.

Correct Government of Children

It is a difficult problem to solve as to what constitutes correct parental government. The theories advanced upon this subject by men of education and close observation differ so widely that it is hard to decide which is right. It was Jefferson, we believe, who said that "the best government is that which governs least,"—meaning, we suppose, that which secures its ends with the least oppression, and with the least exercise of force. The design of government in the family is not primarily to maintain external order, but to develop character, to establish virtuous principles in the minds of the young and to form in them habits of noble conduct on the foundation of moral purity and love for that which is true and excellent.

It has been said by some one, we cannot now call to mind the author, that "government, at the best, is but a necessary evil." Whoever it was, he does not deserve much credit for sound philosophy and good sense. The saying may very well be classed with those brilliant and plausible extravagances by which folly very often affects to be wise. Government is never an evil except when it oversteps its proper limits and becomes excessive, or is used for iniquitous purposes. In all other cases, it is a privilege and a blessing. The necessity for it does not presuppose any tendencies to evil other than those which belong unavoidably to the condition of finite beings. There would be still a divine government, and the necessity for a divine government, even if sin and the love of sin were banished entirely out of the universe. It is not merely because men are depraved, and fearfully inclined to do wrong, that they are required to be under government, but also because, with the best disposition and intentions, it is not possible for them to be associated together in a peaceful community except in subordination to a recognized common head, and with certain defined principles of law and order duly certified, and in universal application. Government is always a necessity. It can never be an evil except through its perversion or abuse.

The image of a perfect family government can only be found in the moral government of God as exercised in our fallen world. In this the great characteristic feature is love, and the appeal it makes by this means for human love and confidence. Men, in their right mind, cannot be insensible to God's love toward them. In all his dealings with them he seeks only their good and intimate happiness.—This he does at the cost of everything except his righteousness which is dearest to himself. This he permits nothing to obscure. It shines conspicuous in all his works, and ways, and word. All the voices of nature and revelation proclaim that "God is love." God intends that his love, and its bright manifestations, shall be the mightiest element of power in his moral government over men.

Parents, then, who desire to successfully train their children should follow the divine example towards his spiritual children and make love the strong arm of their power, relying on this far more than on authority.—Authority they must exercise, but they must rely chiefly upon love to support authority, and not as too many seem to do, upon authority to support the behests of love. It is not enough that the parent should really love his children, but he must show that he loves them. He must be gentle, affectionate and kind in his ways. His heart must not only throb with tenderness, but the children must feel its throbbings. They must see the love in his eye, and hear it in the tones of his voice, and feel it in the soft touch of his hand. He must not be a stranger to them. He must not make himself a terror to them by cold and stern reserve. He should endeavor by all proper means to win and draw them to himself by the attraction of faithful parental tenderness and love.

There is one other point which should never be lost sight of. Children should know that they are required always to do right, and that they will be held accountable for their conduct. But alas for the child that is never allowed to judge for himself of what is right! Alas for the child that feels the iron hand upon his shoulder at every step he takes, and whose whole duty in life is sternly marked out for him in a line from which he must never deviate—with whom all is law, and who knows nothing of liberty—the child that is unconsingly governed, and that in a way that makes the government a sure and felt yoke, galling and fretting, and vexing him from day to day, and from hour to hour. It is no wonder that to some children the parental government becomes utterly irksome and hateful. May it not be better therefore in view of this fact that a parent's confidence should sometimes be misused than that he should never put confidence in his child. Do not be afraid, in a moderate degree, at least to pet, caress and indulge your children, but rather be afraid that by stern, cold treatment you should fail to secure their love, and by this failure lose all authority over them.—Love will govern when nothing else will.

What Dr. Talmage Says.

Dr. Talmage writes complimentary of his visit to Trinity College and concludes thus:

Notwithstanding what some of the politicians say we believe the feeling of cordiality on the part of the South toward the North is almost universal. There are more bitter and bloodthirsty men at the North who need reconstruction than at the South. Before the next Presidential campaign is done this fact will be demonstrated In Congress and in some of our Northern ecclesiastical courts there are men determined to drag forth their war speeches of 1862. For Christ's sake, let us have peace!

Here among the hills of central North Carolina stands Trinity College, an honor to its indefatigable President and the State. Its graduates already adorn every profession and take influential part in the politics of the land. High moral and religious influences accompany the intellectual, and a career of usefulness spreads out before it such as invites but few of the literary institutions of the country. With a heart full of gratitude for extraordinary hospitalities extended, we bid North Carolina hail and farewell.

We are requested by Rev. Dr. Closs to announce that Rev. W. S. Roan will preach the introductory sermon, on Thursday night, at the Washington District Conference to be held in Warrenton.

As yet we have had no account of the New Berne District Conference for publication. We trust Bro. Yates, the Presiding Elder, will either furnish us a synopsis, or see that his secretary or some member of the Conference does. We want our readers to hear from all the districts in their annual meetings.

Edenton Street Sabbath School held interesting Centennial exercises on last Sunday evening A handsome speech was made by Mr. William Burkhead, son of Dr. Burkhead. The church was crowded, and everybody, old and young, was edified and pleased.

PREACHERS' SONS.—The members of the North Carolina Conference have free scholarships at Trinity for all their sons. No preacher's son pays any tuition. And this effected without any endowment. The amount given, we are informed, during the last collegiate year, was equal to the income of $8,000 at eight per cent.

It is our purpose to attend as many of the District Conferences as we possibly can. In every instance where we fail to be present we respectfully request the Presiding Elder to appoint a suitable person to represent the ADVOCATE and receive subscriptions and funds. May we not expect each preacher to report a long list of subscribers at his District Conference?

Hon. Alex. H. Stevens, of Georgia, says the Illustrated Christian Weekly has, during the last 30 or 40 years, aided about fifty young men in securing an education, by loaning them funds, requiring each to repay the full amount at his convenience.—Scarcely one has failed to comply, so that he has been able to make two or three thousand dollars accomplish what otherwise would have required $50,000

The African Methodist Episcopal General Conference, which closed its session in Atlanta, Georgia, May 18, elected H. M. Tanner, General Book Publisher; E. T. Tanner, Editor of the Christian Recorder, Philadelphia J. C. Embry, Commissioner of Education; R. F. Cain, Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Society, and C. L. Bradwell, Traveling Agent.

It is said that the oldest church edifice in America, excepting a Romish church in St. Augustine, is St. Luke's, Isle of Wight County, Va., about five miles from Smithfield. It was built as early as 1635; and, being roofless for a century, the present roof was put on somewhere between 1830 and 1835. It is now used for worship, and the grounds around it are used for burial. Its thick walls and high tower are still strong.

The Christian Union says: "Professor Seelye, leaving Washington over Sabbath two weeks ago, preached two stirring sermons in Amherst College church and next morning was off for his seat in Congress again, where he carries out in practice what he preaches."

Rev. Dr. Duncan, of Virginia, attended the Round Lake Camp meeting last week.

Progress of Methodism.

The St. Louis Advocate furnishes the following statistics concerning the progress of Methodism:

"In 1773 the entire membership of the Methodist Societies in this country was 1160 That year being the first in which regular and full statistics were reported. Ten years after this, or in 1783, the aggregate number was 13,740, or an increase in that decade of 12,580. We state the facts, and leave the reader to calculate the rate per cent. During the next decade, or from 1783 to 1793, the increase was 53,903, the total number at the last date being 67,643.

At the end of the next ten years, or in 1803, the total number of members was 104,070, or an increase of 36,427 during that decade. In 1813 the whole number was 214,307, an increase in that decade of 110,237.—From 1813 to 1823 the increase was 98,233, the whole number at the last date 312,540. At the end of the next decade, or in 1833, the whole number of members was 599,736, an increase during the ten years of 277,196.—From 1833 to 1843 the increase was 468,789, the whole number in 1843 being 1,068,525. In 1853 the total number was 1,295,889, being an increase of 227,364:

In 1863 the aggregate of members in the M. E. Church was 923,894. But in the then distracted state of the country but few of the Conferences in the M. E. Church, South, could meet. We have no means of ascertaining their exact membership. In 1860, the last full report before the war, the total membership was reported at 757,205, which, added to the number in the M. E. Church, gives a grand total of Episcopal Methodists—1,680,599, an increase in that decade of 384,710.

In 1875 or twelve years from the last date, the aggregate number of Episcopal Methodists, and these only have been taken in the above account, was 3,001,113, the non episcopal Methodists numbering at this date 145,243, making a grand total of 3,146,336. So much as to members.

As to the preachers, in 1773 there were 10. In 1783 the number is given by Dr. Bangs at 82. The minutes of that year do not report the number. In 1793 there were 266. In 1803 the number was 383, which number was increased during the next ten years to 716 as reported in 1813. In 1823, ten years later, the number was 1226. In 1833 there were 2,400.—These figures include only the regular traveling preachers. From 1773 to 1836 the local preachers were enumerated in the statistics with the membership of the Church. At the last named date they were reported separately, and the number given at 4,964. Then in 1843 the number of efficient traveling preachers was 3,988. local preachers 7,730, total 11,718.—In 1853 the number of traveling preachers 6,903, and the number of local preachers was 6,061—total, 10,459.

In 1863 the number of traveling preachers was 10,572, and the number of local preachers 13,509,—total, 24,081.

In 1875 the traveling preachers in all the branches of Methodists in this country numbered 21,955, the local preachers 26,875, total 48,830. Except under date of 1875 no account is taken, either as to members or preachers, of any body of Methodists except the M. E. Church, and the M. E. Church, South. The numbers given for 1875 include all.

Now for those who have the time and disposition, it will be an interesting and profitable exercise to take the above statistics and calculate the rate per cent, of increase during each succeeding decade. Then take the census of the United States, and calculate the ratio of Methodists to the entire population, also the ratio of increase of the one to the other. For instance, begin with the first census of the United States, or, if more convenient, with the second, taken in 1800, when the population was 6,305,482, and the Methodists in 1803 which would be near enough as were given above. Then in 1810 the population was 7,239,903, with this number take the Methodists of 1813. In 1820 the population was 9,638,191, and the number of Methodists in 1823 given above. And so on to the census of 1870 with which compare the number of Methodists reported in 1875. In this way it may be ascertained with satisfactory definiteness whether as a denomination we have or have not kept pace with the increase in the federal population. We hope some one who can command the time, and has the opportunity will do this and report accordingly.

Raleigh District Conference School

MESSRS EDITORS: Louisburg Female College will be opened for the reception of pupils on Wednesday July 12th, 1876, under the auspices of the Raleigh District Conference, with Rev. F. L. Reid, A. M., as President, assisted by a competent corps of teachers. Board has been put at $10.00 per month—Tuition at $15 and $20 per session—Music at $18 per session. The school will be made first class in every particular. These terms are low and within reach of all For further information address Rev. F. L. Reid, Louisburg, N. C.

Revival at Fifth Street.

MESSRS EDITORS: As some of the brethren abroad solicit a fuller statement of our recent revival we send you the following:

The revival was considered an extraordinary one The membership was greatly revived, many being reconverted. Much of the old prejudicial feeling arising from past misfortunes died and was buried.

The daily meetings continued about five weeks, during which time the membership increased about one hundred percent, there having been about seventy five accessions. All that were converted joined the Church at Fifth Street except one. We organized in the begining so as to give immediate attention to the converted, quite a proportion of whom were middle aged people—some with gray hairs. During the entire period good order prevailed, with scarcely any animal excitement. The spiritual feeling was intense. A very marked feature was the deep stillness which constantly and universally prevailed We conducted the services on the prayer meeting plan with additional "Penitents' Meeting," in the afternoon We simply read the word with accompanying explanation and solicitations to come to Jesus. We still continue our efforts for the conversions of souls—call for penitents at each prayer-meeting. So we have not "closed the meetings." Except on quarterly meeting occasions we are indebted to Bro. Mann for administration of the Sacraments. He did most of the baptising during the revival—has been very kind during the year in officiating in our congregation, where we, by virtue of the discipline, could not. The Lord has been very good to us this year and we are thankful. The needed repairs on the Church are slowly but steadily progressing. We should like to know of the brethren abroad who, at the first of the year, expressed sympathy for us how much they sympathize; and we shall be glad to take it out in money to repair the Church.

Yours fraternally,
J. M. RHODES.

Hope in Jesus.

While conducting a protracted meeting, during which there were many young persons at the altar of prayer, earnestly seeking Jesus, I would often visit and talk with the penitents. One day I asked a very young lady, who had been seeking the Savior for many days, "what would you take for the hope you have?" She frankly replied, "I have no hope." My heart was very sad at the thought. It was full of sympathy in her behalf. I gave her what light I could and pointed her to Jesus I prayed for her. Soon she was happily converted. The day after her conversion, I said: "Now what will you take for your hope." "Not anything," was the prompt reply. I then asked, "In whom do you hope?" "In Jesus," was the quick response. Sweet words. Happy thought Hoping in Jesus "In whom else can I hope?" she asked. "None." I answered, "For there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." "Lord to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." And now, my young friends, in whom do you hope? What will you take for your hope? Whatever else you may do, "hope in Jesus," and so live that when you die, you may "sleep in Jesus." So that when the great day of judgment shall come, and God shall gather up his sainted jewels from all the nations of the earth, you may be there to sing and shine forever in the image of Jesus.

Notice of Camp-meeting.

Please say through the ADVOCATE that a camp-meeting will take place at Hatteras inlet, beginning on Tuesday the 24th July 1876, and another will take place farther north (20 miles) on the banks, at Kennakeet, beginning about the 15th August.

We cordially invite the ministers of the N. C. and Virginia Conferences to come over to help us and bring your wives. Brethren who may come via. Beaufort will please write me at "Hatteras," and we will make arrangements to have them transported from Beanfort to the meeting and back, free of cost

I will be glad for some to be at one place, and others at the other place, just as it may suit your own arrangements at home; "come over and help us."

I shall certainly expect you Bro Bobbitt to attend one of the meetings. Brethren pray for the church on Hatteras circuit.

Yours in christian love,
L. W. PEGRAM, Pastor.

Hatteras, N. C. June 1876.

Newberne and Washington and Goldsboro papers will please copy.

Rev. J. J. Carden sends us tidings of the revival influence on his work:

We have just closed a good revival meeting at Aurora, Neuse circuit, which resulted in much good to the cause in almost every conceivable way, besides forty one accessions to the church.

The revival spirit is manifested at all the appointments on the charge. The old Neuse ct. is rapidly developing into quite an important work.

Trinity College.

The next term commences on Tuesday, Sept. 5th. Tuition varies from $20 to $33, for five months; board, including furnished room, and servants, $10 to $11, per month. All necessary expenses for five months, can be paid with $90 in advance. Arrangements can be made for clubs by which the board will cost from $6 to $8, per month. In this, the student must furnish his room. It is best to bring beds from home; tables and chairs can be obtained here. Arrangements for clubs should be made in advance. I invite correspondence from young men, who would prefer a club. Good rooms in a favorable location will be attained, and every thing necessary for comfort, good order and pleasant living will be provided. To studious young men, to whom economy is an object, I commend the club arrangement.

LIMITED MEANS

Young men of limited resources, who desire an education, can correspond with me. We have various methods of help. In such cases, the precise pecuniary circumstances should be stated. None need despair. Let me hear from you, perhaps I may see the difficulty.

PREPARATION

If you have a good preparatory school near you, prepare your boys to enter College before sending them here. If you have not such school, better send them to Trinity. Very many boys come badly prepared. Our greatest impediment to good scholarship is inferior, and sometimes pernicious preparation.

ACCOMMODATIONS.

We have the very best arrangements for from one hundred and fifty to two hundred students College buildings, boarding houses, Society Halls etc, all of the best order.

MUSEUM

North Carolina abounds in minerals, fossils, Indian remains, and many historical relics. We have ample room for all such, and will be greatly obliged to any and all persons who will aid us in procuring them.

Pleasant Garden Academy.

MESSRS EDITORS: We were present at Pleasant Garden Male and Female Academy on Thursday the 22nd inst., where we witnessed the closing exercises of Mr. R. Troy's school, which occurred on that day. The weather was pleasant and the attendance large. The Greensboro Band was there, and everything passed off very pleasantly. The pupils all seemed to be in fine spirits, and the morals of the speeches, and dialogues were quite good. While we do not like to discriminate in favor of any one, we would not do justice to the cause if we did not so speak of the Essay written and read by Miss Lucie M. Reeks of Warren county, N. C. Subject: The uses of the beautiful, and the beauties of the useful. This composition was instructive, and the sentiments lofty, showing both taste, and talent: and it was well read. The Literary Address was delivered by John A. Barringer A. M., of Greensboro, N. C., which in our judgment was a complete success, pointed, and well suited to the occasion. Mr. Joseph Morehead of Greensboro, N C, was also present, and in his happy style read his own Poem on "WOMAN," which was lofty and beautiful. Mr. Troy has been at this place three or four years, and the general appearance of the place shows the effect of his labor (or we should have said their labor for he is assited by Mrs Troy.) Mr Editor can you not assist us some in this great work? and let us all work together in one common cause, to arouse our people from that state of torpidity and inactivity which has so long pervaded our minds, and do something to induce our noble young men to remain at home? For N. C, has as intelligent sons, as noble ladies, as fertile filelds, as beautiful streams, as health ful a climate, and a mountain scenery as grand and as lovely as the pencil of Nature has ever sketched in any land. That man is not a friend to his country who will leave his native State, the scenes of his childhood, the home of his nearest and dearest affections, and all his heart holds dear and risk his life and fortune in an other clime.

To the Children Readers of the Advocate.

MY DEAR LITTLE FRIENDS: I am building a College-house in Burke co. N. C. in which to instruct free of charges, the poor little boys and girls that have no Pa and Ma. The house is up and being covered, and the workmen who are building it want to pay for their work, but I am too poor to pay them. The house is not mine; it belongs to everybody, and all who will come here for education, will always find some good teachers to instruct them, and if they are too poor to pay, they are not driven away.

Now, will not each one of you send me ten cents a piece in a letter, to help me pay the workmen? Go to your Pa and Ma and tell them uncle Abernethy wants you to send him ten cents each to help pay for the Rutherford College.

I have a large blank book in the college in which I will write each of your names with the amount of money sent; and when you grow up to be a large man or a grown woman you may come to Rutherford College and see your name in that book, and the letter you wrote me when you sent me the money.

I will accept any sum you send, though I call for ten cents only from each of the little readers of the Advocate.

If one hundred of you send me ten each it will give me $10 to pay to the workmen; if one thousand little hands send me ten cents each, it will give me $100, to pay the workmen. O, how happy I shall be to get the $ 00 for these poor men who are now covering the house.

I hope uncle Bobbitt will print this letter in the ADVOCATE, and call your attention to it. And I hope your Pa and Ma will show you the letter and read it to you, if you cannot read. My post office is Happy Home N. C.

I shall look for letters from many of you, and when they come, I'll take them to my room, say them before the Lord, and pray to Him to bless you with health, happiness and eternal life.

Yors truly,
R L. ABERNETHY.

The Fraternal Commission.

Bishop Paine sends out the following, through the Nashville Christian Advocate:

Having just received, as senior Bishop of the Methodist E. Church, South, through the Rev. James A. Duncan, D. D., the following official communication from the late General Conference of the Methodist E. Church, in answer to our fraternal delegates, it is hereby forwarded for publication:

BALTIMORE, MD., May 19, 1876.

At the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held in this city, it was this day, on motion of Clinton B. Fisk.

Resolved, That in order to remove all obstacles to fraternity between the two Churches, our Board of Bishops are instructed to appoint a Commission, consisting of three ministers and two laymen, to meet a similar Commission, authorized by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to adjust all existing difficulties. Clinton B. Fisk, A. C. George, Oliver Hoyt, F. C. Holliday, John D. Blake, Wm. R. Clark, James W. W. Bolton, Committee.

In accordance therewith, the following commissioners were appointed—viz: Morris D'C. Crawford, Enoch L. Fancher, Erasmus Q. Fuller, Clinton B. Fisk, John P. Newman GEORGE W. WOODWARD, Sec. of Gen. Conf., M. E. C.

The way being now open "to adjust all existing difficulties between the two Churches, the commissioners already appointed in behalf of the Methodist E. Church, South, are hereby notified of this fact, and will endeavor to effect the purpose of their commission at as early a day as may suit the convenience of both parties. The names of our commissioners are: E. H. Myers, D. D; R. K. Hargrove, D. D; T. M. Finney, D. D; Gen. R. B. Vance, Hon. David Clopton,
R. PAINE.

Aberdeen, Miss., June 5, 1876.

Religious Intelligence.

Dr. Danna, formerly a professor in the Vatican Seminary at Rome, has been converted to Protestantism and has joined the Methodist Church.

Bishop McTyeire spent a short while in New York on a visit to Mr. Vanderbilt, who is quite ill. He was there on June 11th, and was there before not at Shelby District Conference.

The Bishops at their late meeting appointed a week of prayer, to be observed throughout our Church, beginning with a fast on Friday, August 4th.

Emory and Henry College, Virginia, at its late Commencement, conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Rev. R. N. Sledd, of the Va. Conference: said to be a deserved honor.

The Rev. Dr. Perry, of Geneva, N. Y., has just been elected Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Iowa, and has signified his acceptance of the office.

Opposition to the union of Church and State in England is organized and active. A fund of $500,000 has been raised, and within a year nearly a thousand meetings have been held, and a vast quantity of publications distributed.

The Texas Legislature recently enacted a law making the use of profane language within the hearing of the occupants of any private residence a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $1. Good. Let us have more of the same kind.

Recent Publications.

The Westminster Review, republished by Leonard Scott & Co. 41 Barclay St., New York, contains articles on: Our Colonial Empire, The Legal Position of Women, Scottish Universities, Ouida's Novels, Rousselets Travels in India, Freewill and Christianity, The Civil service. Contemporary Literature follows, very full, as usual, of short notices of new books The Westminister articles are able.

THE CENTENNIAL GUIDE FOR THE SOUTHERN STATES, published by Capt. R. T. Fulghum and edited by T. B. Kingsbury, A. M, is on our table. It contains one hundred pages, filled with invaluable information to every person who contemplates visiting the great exhibition, together with numerous illustrations of all important points of interest in and around Philadelphia It is from the well known publishing house of Messrs Edwards. Broughton & Co, and is a model of perfect typographical beauty. It is sold for the small sum of 15 cents, or 50 cents containing a picture of "Flags of all Nations," including the Confederate flag. No person contemplating a visit to Philadelphia should be without one, and it would also prove of great interest to all who remain at home.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE: J. B. Lippincott & Co. Phila. $4 a year.

The July number of this excellent periodical is full of interest, its contents are: 'The Century—its Fruits and Festival Illustrated. 'A Glimpse of Philadelphia in July 1776.' "Psalm of the West." Sidney Lanier's new poem. 'The atonement of Leam Dundas," a serial concluded "On the Eastern shore." "Thee and you: a story of Old Philadelphia," "The Angels of the Dew," Letters from South Africa, an Episode of the Revolution, The musket of Paris, Monthly Gossip and Literature of the Day.

The July number opens the third volume of WIDE AWAKE with a grand Centennial story by Sara J. Prichard. "The Only Woman in Town" was an actor in the memorable fight at Concord, and it is her due that she should be honored, if only with this late laurel.

With this number open the new serials, "Nan, the New Fashioned Girl," by Mrs S. C. Hallowell, and "Good for Nothing Polly," by Ella Farman. Both, lavishly illustrated, promise to never once slip back in to the old, beaten paths of the usual story tellers. Celia Thaxter furnishes a full page poem, "The Sad Little Singer." There are three excellent short stories, "Why Lily bud Didn't See the Centennial Open' 'The Candy Frolic.' and 'Tom's Centennial. besides minor poems and papers. Perhaps the article really demanding most attention is 'The Bad Boys of France' We commend it to the perusal of those of our citizens whose duty it is to be interested in the Reform Schools, Houses of Correction, and Bad Boys of our own country.

This magazine, first class in every particular, is only $2.00 per annum D. Lothrop & Co, Boston.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE:—Scribner & Co. New York, $4 a year. The July number opens with an entertaining paper on the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the signers. Then follows a sketch of Miss Fairfax, one of the early loves of Geo. Washington.—Other papers which, in this Centennial year, one will wish to read are on the Stewart portraits of Washington and Daniel Webster and the compromise measure of 1850. "Gabriel Conroy" is continued and also "Philip Nolan and his friend."

HARPER'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE: Harper and Bros. New York. $4 a year. This excellent periodical for July is before us, with eight illustrated articles and other contents full of instruction and interest. John Esten Cook contributes a short but well written sketch of Thomas Tefferson. The series of admirable papers on Macauley is concluded in this number.—The article on the methods of nominating our President gives a deal of curious and intersting information There is a liberal amount of fiction—an installment of Garth, by Hawthorne, and several shorter stories. But the chief attraction, with many readers, is George Elliot's novel, Daniel Derond, which is continued in this number. It has entered the second volume, and yet the critics are as much puzzled as ever to tell how the thing is to end or what the final relations of the characters to each other is to be, so skilfully has the plot been laid. The other departments of the Magazine are well filled.

THE ECLECTIC MAGAZINE has two beautiful engravings. "The battle of Bunker Hill" and "Far from home." There are articles on "Lord Macaulay," by Leslie Stephen: 'Some Festivities in Natal,' by Lady Barker; 'Bonivad, 'The Prisoner of Chillon;' 'Powers of the Air;' "A Rhyme of one,' by Frederick Locker; 'Ordeals and Oaths,' by E. B. Tylor; 'Spelling;' Mrs Thrale; the Friend of Dr Johnson;' 'Society;' Verses in Old French Forms, by Austin Dobson; Gipsies and their Friends; 'Stndies of Matter and Like,' by Henry J. Slack, F G S.; 'Great Guns and Armor Plating;' 'Saint Perine, the City of the Gentle; and 'Glamour.'—There are also additional chapters of the stirring story, 'Her Dearest Foe,' by Mrs. Alexander; and the editorial notes on home and foreign literature, and on science and art, are fresh and comprehensive. The July number begins a new volume of the ECLECTIC, and affords a favorable opportunity to subscribe. Pulished by E F. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; Single number, 45 cents.

Of the late Rev. Dr Sprague it is said that in his last years he recited a prayer which he had heard Dr. Dwight offer when Dr. Sprague was a youth: and this he did so naturally, and with so much reality, that it seems as if the great New England divine was present. Dr. Ray Palmer says he has known him to write out, in twenty four hours, two full sermons and deliver them. Once he wrote out a sermon for Sabbath afternoon, beginning on Sabbath morning and completing it before the forenoon service. Yet it is said his composition was never slovenly.

The Charlotte Observer says: A gentleman who has just returned from the mountains, whither he went on a drumming expedition, brings a graphic account of the devastation wrought by last week's flood in "the Switzerland of America." He was waterbound up there, and says it seemed as if the waters would move the everlasting hills themselves. Little bits of streams swelled into rivers, and rivers of insignificant width grew a mile wide. Much of the town of Marshall, the county-seat of Madison, is built on an island, and the town was nearly all washed away. The jail went away on the bosom of the troubled waters, and had a good deal of company. At Bakersville, Mitchell county, one house was washed away and part of another shared the same fate. Many of the public roads in the mountains are so filled with debris that they are impassable and will so remain for some time.

ICE CREAM SALOON.—Mr. N. S. Mosely has opened a saloon on Fayetteville Street at Nat. L. Brown's old stand, where he keeps ice cream of the most delicious kind, soda water, lemonade, cakes, &c. His saloon is fitted up in excellent style, and is arranged for the accommodation of all. Ladies can visit it and be undisturbed in the enjoyment of the luxuries offered there. Call and see him.

A FREE SCHOOL.—The members of Swain Street Baptist Church have decided to establish a free day school at the Church, the session to commence July 8th. The school is to be non sectarian and open to all without regard to sect.—The Trustees are members of the church, and a sufficient sum of money has been raised to make the opening of the school a certainty. All persons desiring to have their children enter the school should make application to Mr. N. B. Broughton, Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

DEATH OF AN AMIABLE YOUNG LADY.—We regret to record the death of Miss Susan B. Hutchings, of this city, which occurred on the 28th June. She was much esteemed for her amiable character, and her death has caused sadness in the church and community. She was the daughter of C W D Hutchings, Esq., and died of Typhoid Fever, aged 23 years and 4 months.

Rev Dr Burkhead, her pastor, in a notice of her death, says: "We have hope in her death. She said to the writer the evening before she died: "I have given myself—all I am, to God; and believe that He will take better care of me in Eternity than I have taken of myself in this world. I can and do trust all to the will of God. I am resigned to His will." Then brief sentences were uttered with remarkable deliberation and calmness.—They were honest words, spoken in view of death and judgment. The large congregation which followed her remains to their last resting place, showed how much she was loved.

She has crossed the River, and is now doubtless at home with the Lord.

May God grant that her father, brothers and sisters and many friends may die as hopefully as she died! May God bless all the bereaved and help them to win the prize of endless life."

The National Democratic Convention was held at St. Louis last week Harmony prevailed and Gov. Tilden of New York received the nomination for President on the second ballot Ex-Gov Hendricks of Indiana, received the nomination, almost unanimously, for Vice-President. Meantime he will bring down a party of excursionists from the mountains to the coast, and when these return to their mountain homes the train will bring back sea siders to their homes. The plan looks like it would work with great satisfaction to all parties.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—On Saturday, while passing over Trent bridge in a hand car, a number of employees of the A. & N. C. R, discovered a woman on the track, about midway the bridge. Every warning was given the woman to get out of the way, but she was terribly excited and only continued to run ahead. It was impossible to stop the car, and in a few seconds the end of it was upon her, but just in the nick of time a pair of strong arms reached out and grasped the woman, pulling her bodily on the car, thus saving her form sudden death. One of the men, seeing the car could not stop, had moved to the end of it, the above named result following.—New Berne Nut Shell.

A gentleman afflicted with the chronic rheumatism says, "No description of my case can convey the vast amount of benefit I have received from the use of Jonnson's Anodyne Liniment. I believe it is the best article in the world for rheumatism."

If a horse has a good constitution, and has once been a good horse, no matter how old or how much run down he may be, he can be greatly improved, and in many respects made as good as new, by a liberal use of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders.

Dr. W. E. Scott, President of the College of Physicians, Montreal, writes: "I have recommended Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator as the best preparation used for Debility, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Fever, Ague, and Loss of Appetite." Williams & Haywood, agents.

The Way of the Transgressor is Hard.

This is a divine dictum, and is equally applicable to infractions of nature's laws as it is to those of the Deity. Law designates the proper course, and punishes deviations from it. Is disregard entails suffering and misery. So it is with the laws of nature. But how little are they heeded. Hence the world is full of diseased culprits, branded with dyspepsia, disordered livers smattered nerves, weak stomachs, enfeebled brains, and a thousand ailments—punishments imposed for the disregard of the benign laws of nature. But, invalids, you may obtain a pardon, and be again restored to the respectable ranks of healthy men. Mend your ways, and follow the guidance of DR TUTT'S LIVER PILLS. You will soon be able to hold up your heads and, with robust health, enjoy the blessings with which you are surrounded.

Died in Bladen County, N. C. April 20th 1876, in the 83rd year of her age, Mrs Nancy Dowless. She joined the Methodist E Church about the year 1805, having been a member for 70 years passing through the varied scenes and trials incidental to the fathers days of our fathers, in the infancy of our country and church. She could relate many thrilling incidents growing out of the early struggles and triumphs of Methodism in the Cape Fear section. In all the vicissitudes of these years from childhood, to the responsible position of mother down to extreme old age, with all its infirmities she let her light shine so as to constrain others to glorify God in full christian character. In her last lingering days which were full of labor and sorrow the assurance of her acceptance was strong and full of comfort, so that she could say it is far better to depart and be with Christ.

"Where Jesus dwells my soul would be,
It taints my much-loved Lord to see,
Earth twine no more about my heart,
For 'tis far better to depart."

With these triumphant shouts, the worn out casket yielded back to God, the spirit, washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. This mother in Israel leaves many relatives and friends, whose memory is to them a precious ointment poured forth. May they all meet her in heaven.

O. J. BRENT.

In Cumberland co. N. C. Sarah Geddie, wife of Dugald Geddie, died May the 28th 1876, aged 57 years. She was a very humble and faithful christian woman, and for about thirty years a consistent member of the Bluff Church, (Presbyterian). She died very suddenly, but if the life upon earth is a true index of the life beyond, in "that strange forever," she was ready at a moment's warning to answer the Master's summons, and went safely home though the passage was brief.

Let those bereaved in her death strive to live as she lived, that their last end may be like hers. They sorrow not for her as those who have no hope but that by the grace of God we shall meet her again, in the beautiful land of heavenly rest.

W.

Died June 19 h 1876, in Johnston county, near mihlfield Johnnie Johnson, son of Byman and Maria Johnson, aged eight years. His illness had been long and intense yet his words were carefully watched by a loving father and a praying mother. Friends administered unto him, his Sunday-school classmates and comerades anxiously thought of hours passed and days to come; but in the providence of Him who doeth all things well, their hopes were blasted and little Johnnie has passed through the pearly gate. May all children remember that although they are in the bloom of youth with the rich glow of health upon their cheeks, yet in an unexpected hour the Keeper, Death, will come and summon them to that court of justice whose judge is Lord of all.

While the parents loss is grievous, let them remember that their loss is Johnnie's gain, that they are left here to protect and direct those who are still left to their charge and prepare them for meeting him who has gone before and all (one day) strike hands on the shining shore, welcomed by the angels of light and join in singing praises to the Lamb forever.

AMICUS

Miss Lelia Bell Moss, daughter of Col. A. A. and Mrs Louisa C. Moss was born in Davidson co N C. Dec 6th 1857, and died in Mecklville June 17th 1876

Consumption, that most insidious, flattering, and fatal disease, did its deceitful work upon his flower of beauty and fragrance. It flourished only in the morning, but lived not to see its evening, for it was cut down, ere it reached its noon-tide. This was true only of the material body, for the beauty of the Lord our God was upon this fair and fragile flower, and as the visible and material body yielded itself gently to the dissolution of death, and day after day the work of destruction was going fearfully on, it was then, that this other divine life hidden with Christ in God would speak in cheerful tones from beneath the rubbish of the falling structure, and talk of home, friends, and heaven.

What a clear, calm witness for Christ was the dying Lelia Bell! Death and the grave, and the judgment were robbed of their terror by the presence and power of Christ. Lelia Bell believed and trusted in Jesus Christ, and now she loves and lives in the home where the noon-tide of glory eternal reigns.

THOS. A BOONE.

Died at his home in Chatham co N C June 7th, 1876, Thomas M. Phillips in the twenty seventh year of his age.

He was a son of Robt. H Phillips, and nephew of Rev. Charles Phillips He was born in Moore co. Feb 16 1850, where his good and aged father still lives, his mother having died in giving him birth. He was taken a tender infant by his grand parents, Philip and Esther Womble and by them was brought up in the fear of God

He professed religion when very young and joined the M. E. Church at Providence on Pittsboro circuit in the communion of which church he lived a useful and beloved member, for to know him was to love him.

The Church and Sunday school will feel the loss of his aid, the country of a good citizen, and the young of a true and earnest friend. He was ever ready by word and deed to promote the welfare of his church. It might be truthfully said that he was an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile.

We have never heard of his speaking an evil word or doing an unjust act. He lived a blameless life and died without an enemy.

We can only say, he was too gentle, good and pure, and God has taken him away.

His last sickness was long and painful, although not confined to his bed but a few days. He bore it with great patience and when he could only speak in a whisper, he would call around his friends and relations telling them he wished them all to do right, that he wished the old men to be prayerful and train up the children to serve God and sing the songs of Zion.

Such an example of piety is seldom found. May it is death be such a warning to all his friends and relations that they will by God's help leave the service of satan, to enlist in the army of Jesus and be true and faithful soldiers, that at the last they may win the victory and wear a crown with him in glory. The large and weeping assembly that stood around his grave testify how much he was loved.

We will miss him here but oh! what a comfort, we will meet him ere long to part no more. It is good thus to live and sweet thus to die

"A tender thought, a prayer, a tear,
A simple verse and memory dear,
Are all I have to give to thee,
My buried friend so dear to me.

Friends, kindred, pray that we may meet,
In yon fair clime where life is sweet,
A reunited, happy band,
Beyond the reach of death's rude hand.

With links of love our hearts were bound,
While earthly seasons run their round,
I trust on heaven's celestial plain,
We'll bind these links in love again."

Letters & Funds will appear next week.

Richmond, Va.,

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN

Boots and Shoes, have opened at the Store,

No. 15 Fayetteville Street,

One door above Alfred Williams' Book Store, Raleigh, N. C., a wholesale and retail Shoe Store, where will be found a complete assortment of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Shoes of every description; a good line of Gentlemen's and Boys' Boots and Shoes; also a very cheap line of Trunks and Satchels.

We are prepared to sell cheaper than any other house in Raleigh, as we buy in very large quantities from the first hands at extremely low prices.

Ladies are especially invited to call and examine our stock.

We wish to call the attention of the trade to our stock, as we can supply them as low as they can be bought further North.

All orders promptly attended to. Persons at a distance can order shoes, and have the privilege of returning the same, if they do not fit or suit.

Goods sent by Express C. O. D.

We have only one price, and that the very lowest.

One Price, Strictly CASH.

Mr. C. Hutchings, our clerk with A. Creech, is with us, and will be pleased to see his friends and acquaintances.

Children's Column.

THE GOODEST MOTHER.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Evening was falling cold and dark,
And people hurried along the way
As if they were longing soon to mark
Their own home candle's cheering ray.

Before me toiled in the chilling wind
A woman with bundles great and small,
And after her tagged, a step behind,
The handle she loved the best of all.

A dear little rolypoly boy
With rosy cheeks, and a jacket blue,
Laughing and chattering, full of joy,
And here's what he said—I tell you true:

"You're the goodest mother that ever was."
A voice as clear as a forest bird's;
And I'm sure the glad young heart had cause
To utter the sweet of the lovely words.

Perhaps the woman had worked all day
Washing or scrubbing; perhaps she sewed.
I know, by her weary footfall's way,
That life for her was an uphill road.

But here was a comfort, children dear:
Think what a comfort you might give
To the very best friend you can have here,
The lady fair in whose house you live.

If once in awhile you'd stop and say,
In task or play for a moment's pause,
And tell her in sweet and winning way:
"You're the goodest mother that ever was."

LESSON II.—JULY 9, 1876.

Subject, "Solomon's Choice." 2 Chron. i. 1-17.

Commit to Memory Verses 9-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally." James i. 5.

CENTRAL TRUTH—Making choice of divine wisdom.

READING LESSON—2 Chron. i. 1-17.

HOME READINGS—Monday, July 3, 2 Chron. i 1-17. Tuesday, July 4, Prov. i. 1-19. Wednesday, July 5, Prov. iii. 1-18. Thursday, July 6, Matt. vii. 7-14 Friday, July 7, Mark x. 35-45. Saturday, July 8, Luke xviii. 35 43. Sunday, July 9, Ps. lxxii. 1-20.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE GREAT SACRIFICE.—Solomon collected the chief officers of the nation at Gibeon, where he offered a great sacrifice (verses 1-6). II. The Choice.—God said to Solomon, "Ask what I shall give thee," and he chose "wisdom and knowledge" (verses 7-12). III. Solomon's Wealth and Greatness increased under the blessing of God (verses 13-17; 1 Chron. xxix. 25; 2 Chron. ix. 1-6).

QUESTIONS.

1. What is said of Solomon?—V. 1.
2. Whom did Solomon call together at Gibeon?—V. 2.

8. How many burnt-offerings were made at Gibeon?
9. What is the difference between wisdom and knowledge?
10. What is meant by a "high place?"
11. What were "chariot-cities?"
12. What use had Solomon for chariots and horses?
13. Are we to understand verse 15 literally?
14. Why is wisdom better than gold?
15. What is true wisdom?
16. In what sense is "the fear of the Lord the beginning of wisdom?"

Lesson hymn, 480.

Rural and Domestic.

If you are buying carpets for durability, choose small figures.

To renovate velvet, wet a sponge in warm soap-suds, squeeze it quite dry in a cloth, and wipe the velvet thoroughly; then pass the velvet over the edge of the flat iron, the wrong side next the iron.

GREASE on any kind of goods may be removed by rubbing magnesia on the spots, and then covered with brown paper, and applying a flat-iron. Repeat a few times, and the spot will be removed.

ONE teaspoonful of honey, one of powdered alum, one of flour, moistened with good vinegar, and poultice twice a day, is a cure for felons.

Two teaspoonfuls of finely powdered charcoal, drank in half a tumbler of water, will often give relief to the sick headache when caused, as in most cases it is, by a superabundance of acid in the stomach.

TO TELL THE AGE OF A SHEEP.—A sheep's front teeth the first year are eight in number, appearing all of a size. Second year, the two middle ones are shed out and replaced by two much larger than the others. Third year, two very small ones appear—one on either side of the eight. At the end of the fourth, there are six large teeth. Fifth year, all the teeth begin to show wear—not till then.

IT is a well known fact that clover has the singular property of being able to extract from the atmosphere, without the aid of manure or stimulants, nitrogen sufficient for its own proper growth and nourishment. The straw and roots of the clover continue a large amount of nitrogen and these, when ploughed down, are therefore as valuable to the next crop sown as a copious supply of guano.

A FARMER who has profited by experience writes this sensible paragraph: "In building a new barn, I would study to put in all the windows I could possibly get in, of course not making a greenhouse of it, but as many as most folks put into dwelling-houses. It is so much better doing the work in a light barn than in a dark one; cattle are more easily taken care of and are more quiet and better contented in a light place than in a dark one."

WHAT CONSTITUTES A GOOD FERTILIZER.—No ordinary cultivated plant can thrive without a sufficient supply of each of a number of substances needed for its food. With an abundance of all of these, in forms in which the plant can use them, and with other circumstances favorable, the plant will flourish and the yield will be large. But if the available supply of any one of them be too small, a light yield is inevitable. Every ordinary soil contains all of the ingredients of plant-food. In "worn out" soils the available supply of one or more of these is generally insufficient. Fertilizers supply the plant with food which the soil lacks. Barn-yard manure not only does this, but also improves the soil as a living place for plants. Lime and plaster (sulphate of lime) are necessary as plant food, but as fertilizers they are chiefly valuable in rendering other plant-food available. Cent. The ingredients of plant-food generally most lacking in our cultivated soils are nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. The usefulness of guanos, super-phosphates, bone manures, poudrettes, potash salts, and other similar fertilizers, depends mainly upon these ingredients. Such fertilizers are generally more or less valuable in proportion as they contain larger or smaller percentages of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash, and as these are in a form more or less available to the plant. If all the other conditions for a profitable crop of corn or turnips are fulfilled in a soil, except that phosphoric acid is deficient, then phosphoric acid must be supplied. This may be done with bone, which contains a large percentage of phosphoric acid combined with lime as "phosphorate of lime."

IN spite of prostration, night sweats, spitting of blood, hectic fever, and the most distressing cough, Consumptive patients have been saved and restored by the regular use of BAKER'S COD LIVER OIL AND PHOSPHATE OF LIME. In this form it is a PLEASANT medicine, and should be early resorted to. JNO. C. BAKER & Co., Philadelphia.

A Health-Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulation is not only desirable, but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined, with it, it becomes infinitely more efficacious as a restorant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have received the emphatic sanction of medical men who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other disorders. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and its self possessing tonic properties of no mean order.

VALUABLE
Real Estate for Sale
—AT—
PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 2 000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco, Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, ice well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming, generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 251 acres, lying on Ararat and Reed Creek creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a l of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

Poetry.

"HEAVENLY PLACES IN CHRIST JESUS."

BY GRACE RAYMOND.

Lord, it can ne'er content my heart
Simply to know
That justice all her dreadful part
Must now forego.
This thirsty soul, no form'l creed
Can satisfy,
Which pant, to feel in very deed,
That thou art nigh.

'Tis not enough by faith to own
Thee, Christ divine;
I want, with raptured heart and tone,
To call thee mine.
I want to have blest Mary's place
Beside thy feet,
To catch, while feasting on thy face,
Thy accents sweet.

I want, like loving John, to lean
Upon thy breast,
To learn what "perfect love" can mean,
In that dear nest.
I want oft whiles to have a sweet
Still hour with thee,
Thy clasping arms of love to meet,
To feel and see.

Thy heart of utter tenderness
Is all my own;
Be bound mine in dear caress
Thine own alone.
I want to live so near, so near
That every word,
E'en in life's busy thoroughfare,
Will aye be heard.

I want to lift in every task,
A heart of prayer,
To turn for grace and strength to ask,
And find thee there.
I want to feel thy blessing hand
Upon my head,
To know thy love can understand
What can't be said.

I want, dear Lord, to run with all
My joys to thee;
To feel there is not one too small
To set thee see.
I want to feel in bringing fears,
And burdened sighs,
That thou in all these griefs and cares
Dost sympathize.

I want, My King, to have thee come,
And use my best.
My heart hath chambers which can home
No other guest.
I want to live a life so fair
That all may see,
At any time and anywhere,
I've been with thee.

Ah, Lord! an intercourse so sweet,
In Heaven below,
Oftener on me, I do entreat,
Thy grace bestow.
Forbid the sharing world to screen
Thy smiles from me;
Or any love to come between
My soul and thee!

The Human Mind, etc.

Man is a creature of emotions as well as of reason and intelligence—His emotional nature is moved by motives, sometimes found in the non ego, sometimes in the ego. His intelligence is the aggregate of his intellectual powers, which, according to philosophers, consist of sensibility, intellect and will. These are the primary faculties of mind, each having its own peculiar functions or secondary faculties, while some of these again have their powers of intuition or ability to cognize the properties and qualities of objects and concepts without effort upon the part of the mind.

The foundation or origin of all our knowledge is in consciousness. Here are deposited all the concepts of objects and emotions whether they come to us through the perceptive faculties or reflection. In this department of our being, our concepts are found to be the crude, unorganized pictures of external objects, or of internal emotions.

The understanding, which is a function of the intellect and a notion—forming power, enters the domain of consciousness, and uniting subject and predicate among the concepts of that department, forms notions or propositions. The propositions thus formed are ready for the Reason, which is the comparing power of the mind; and when reason has discharged its functions fully, the result is handed over to the judgment, which announces its decisions to the will, and man acts or refuses to act according to the finding of the judgment.

The moral quality of any and every action is dependent upon the attitude of the will. The moral character of the person acting is seen in the intention that precedes the action of the will. If the intention is benevolent, the moral quality of the action is good, the character of the person in that special act is virtuous, and the attitude of the will is towards God.—If, on the other hand, the intention is void of benevolence, the moral quality of the action is bad, the character of the person is vicious, and the attitude of the will is against God.

All the powers and functions of the human mind have been depraved, except the intellect, its functions and intuitive powers. These being only powers to know, are incapable of moral depravity. They have been weakened by the fall, but not depraved.

All sin, then, as well as moral character of every grade, lies in the status of the will This will must stand in favor with or against God. There can be, therefore, no middle grounds between virtue and vice. Every man must be a full-grown Christian, or a hell deserving sinner; a saint, or a child of the devil; a good or a bad man

But this will can be moved through the sensibility as well as through intellect. Our emotions which belong to the sensibility often move the will, sometimes to virtuous, and at other times to vicious acts, depending upon the character of the emotions.

From this analysis of the powers and operations of the human mind, we may learn some very important practical lessons. In preaching the gospel we may move men's wills as successfully to the acceptance of salvation through Christ, by means of emotions, as we can through the instrumentality of reason.

Ministers ought, therefore, to preach with such pathos and power as to move men's souls. Herein, we think, lies the great superiority of one preacher over another. One man, whose religion is wholly intellectual, deals out the great truths of Christianity as if he were delivering lectures upon the problems of Euclid, and his hearers sleep under his ministry and move smoothly on to ruin; while another whose heart is on fire of God's love, speaks with a burning tongue and flashing eye, and streams of emotions dashing along the line of mental powers, force the will to yield to the great truths of the christian religion. This is what is meant when the Master of the feast said, "Compel them to come in that my house may be filled."

O God, give us all tongues of holy fire and hearts of heavenly sympathy.

R. L. Abernethy.

Children Concordance.

Messrs Editors: I have a long time wanted to speak a few words to the thousands of children who read your paper.

The daily study of the Bible is the one thing I would urge upon them. The most important human help to the study of the scriptures is a good Concordance. No family ought to be without one. Over 20 years ago, I paid three dollars and a half for Cruden's Concordance. One house now charges five dollars for it But I am glad to say the American Tract Society publishes an improved edition of Cruden for $1 50.

I have bought one and can recommend it. The postage is extra; but they write me that if we will order 50 copies at once, they will pay postage and freight and send to any address.

I am to gain nothing but the pleasure of helping others to study the word of God and learn the way to heaven.

A. D. Betts.

American Tract Society 150 Nassau Street New York, is the address.

Prayer.

To be heard, must be earnest, full of trust, simple, constant, and free from cant God is neither deaf nor far off, that men should thunder their petitions is His ear, or cry as if their Father were heartless, exacting and unkind. He waits to be gracious. He bids his children ask, and promises blessing in answer to the soul's uplifted quest. If a Christian must needs get into an agony of words, and writhe and bellow his petitions, the very noise would indicate a lack of faith. Sincere faith but whispers, and the answer comes. The full soul but looks and longs for good, and the benediction meets the upward glance. The believer who feels that he is near to his Father will not speak to Him in boisterons tones, as if he were calling upon one afar off. The child who sits upon the mother's knee, can ask for best gifts out of that mother's hand, by the merest breath of a broken sentence; a sob is eloquent; a tear touches the source of all love; a hungry glance opens the inmost treasury of food. And thus God hears his children. It is not bombast, or penance, or bodily suffering. but simple belief, uttered in the nearest, easiest form of words, which our Heavenly Father hears as prayer. We make plea for the utmost earnestness, for the soul's inmost, deepest sense of want, but we find no warrant in Scripture for contortions of body, extravagancies of speech, for shouts and yells of asking, as if there were divine stubbornness to be overcome. While there may be all night wrestling with our own unbelief, and tears and pain at our own lack of love for God, there is no Gospel reason for turning a prayer meeting into a Babel of distracting sounds, as if the dear Father were dead!

Josh Billings says: "There is one thing about hens that looks like wisdom—they don't cackle much till they have laid their eggs. Some folks are always bragging and cackling about what they are going to do beforehand."

Christian Work.

The revival season has opened. As a natural outcome of these revivals we may look for increased Christian activity. Life always results in some form of action. If, therefore, the spiritual life of the churches is quickened, there will of necessity be a quickened Christian activity.

The great revivals which were so prevalent about the beginning of the present centnry, found their development in the organization of our great missionary and benevolent societies. The revival era of 1857 and 1858 developed daily union prayer meetings, and started influences which have greatly increased the number and efficiency of lay workers. The revivals of the past winter will doubtless quicken activity in these various channels, and perhaps develop new fields of Christian work.

We desire in this article to state briefly a few of the principles which should govern the church in its Christian work.

1. Christian work should be universal; that is, it should be entered upon by all the members of the churches. The regularly educated and ordained ministry will never be superseded, nor will its work in any large measure be taken up by others, but to properly supplement its work will require the activity of all professing Christians. In the early christian church the apostles planted churches, gave counsel and instruction, and passed on to other places, leaving the Christian work to members of these churches. Christianity prevades communities, not by building $100,000 edifices, nor by sensational or popular preaching, but by the Christian work of the members of the churches. In our day a church left without a pastor is pretty likely to decline and die. And this because the pastor is expected to do all the Christian work—to preach in the pulpit, to preach from house to house, to visit the sick, comfort the afflicted, and find out the poor and the desponding. It is time for us to come back to apostolic practices sufficiently to enlist all Christians in work. The pastor's office and work should be magnified, but he can never take responsibility from the humblest Christian, who should constantly preach Christ by his life and words.

2. Christian work should be adapted to times and circumstances. Men of the world are not slow to watch opportunities. An extra gathering of people, be it a circus or camp meeting, an agricultural fair or a Sabbath-school convention, will call out the huckster, the candy peddler and peanut vender, to make the most of the occasion. The politician will sieze upon any favorable turn in affairs to further his ends. So the Christian, who is hungry for souls, and desires to do Christian work will be on the watch for favorable opportunities, and sieze upon all such occasions as they occur. "He that winneth souls is wise."

3. Christian work should be earnest. Earnestness is one great secret of success in every department of activity, and especially so in Christian work No Christian should sit down in inaction because he can not meet all the arguments of the skeptic. The stately pillars of Christian doctrine have been hewed and polished by the few theologians, and others have accepted their work. So the educated are to frame the arguments with which to silence the sophistry of the skeptic, while to the mass of Christians are left the other departments of Christian work. And it is not unfrequently true that earnestness and self-denying devotion will carry conviction to the mind of the skeptic when all arguments fail. Arguments may often be met by sophistry, but no sophistry can answer an earnest life The most successful revival preachers of all ages have been characterized as much by earnestness as by superior intellectual endowments. "Whatsoever of Christian work thine hand findeth to do, do it with thy might"

4. Christian work should be steadfast. An intermitting spring may be a cruiosity, but not very valuable where a constant supply of water is required. So an intermittent Christian activity has but little real value. Christian work should not be merely the impulse of a revival or of a stirring sermon, and then forgotten until another revival or another sermon. It should rather be the overflow of a full fonntain, giving out its streams of blessing seven days in the week and fifty two weeks in the year. None but the steadfast work is really successful. The enthusiast may, in the high tide of a revival, call the steadfast only a plodder, but after the zeal of the enthusiast is forgotten the constant life of the other will be bearing fruit, "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—The Informer.

The Mt. Airy White Sulphur Springs are becoming known abroad.

Precept and Example.

There are two ways of teaching—by precept and example. Teaching by precept says, "Climb up the mountain;" teaching by example says, "Place your foot where I put mine, and follow me." Teaching by precept is common to saints and philosophers; teaching by example is the high prerogative of the saints. Teaching by precept begins with the understanding, and may reach the heart: teaching by example begins with the heart, and can hardly fail to reach the understanding. Our Lord Jesus Christ uses both methods. Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, as men could bear it; but side by side with the precept He gave the example, and all through His life He enforced His precepts by the eloquence of His conduct, until at the last He gathered up all into one appeal when He stretched out His hands upon the cross. And what was the lesson on which He laid most stress? Chiefly the passive virtues, but He did not overlook the more active virtues, which found a place in the seven last words from the cross.—Canon Liddon.

The Providence of Faith.—The only antidote that has ever been found for a skeptical mind is faith. It is not science. It is not argument. It is not any process of reasoning, but the simple faith of childhood. "Ye believe in God, believe also in me." This is the requirement of the great Teacher. Let us not deny or conceal, or in any way modify this essential truth, that in things pertaining to God and eternal life man must live by faith if he lives at all. Faith is essential to the soul and nothing on earth can supply its place. The faith of childhood is not more important to the child, than the faith of manhood is to man, in all its intercourse with God. Not by reasoning, but by believing is he born again Not by reasoning, but by believing does he enter into the kingdom of God. Here is the precise province of faith, where sight and sense and science fail. And this faith is as essential to the man of science, with all his gifts of intellect and knowledge, as it is to the little child. If he can't believe, then he cannot be saved. Hence, the greater need for him to pray: "Lord, increase our faith." "Lord, help thou our unbelief." There is but one law for all who would enter this kingdom. "Except ye be converted, and become as this little child, ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven." Faith is the cure, the only cure of the great Physician. All others fail. All others leave the soul in sin and darkness. —Exchange.

The Drainage of Jerusalem.—The Pool of Bethesda is not precisely a "fount of healing," in our day, according to a recently published report by Sir Moses Montefiore on the condition of the Jewish inhabitants of the Holy Land, from which the following is an extract: "I had some conversation on the subject of general drainage in Jerusalem with a gentleman of authority; he told me that all the refuse of the city is now carried into the Pool of Bethesda, which, strange to say, I was informed, is close to the house intended for the barracks, and the soldiers living there appear not to experience the least inconvenience on account of its vicinity. If arrangements could be made to clear that pool entirely, to admit pure water only, and to dig special pools for the purpose of conducting there the city drains, Jerusalem might become free from any threatening epidemic. All the doctors in Jerusalem assured me that the Holy City might be reckoned, on account of the purity of its atmosphere, one of the healthiest of places." —Journal of Chemistry.

Scatter the Seed.—There are many kinds of seed. There are earthly seeds and spiritual seeds; seeds whose growth feeds the body, and seeds whose growth feeds the soul. There are seeds of good and seeds of evil. We are all sowing seeds of some sort continually. Acts are seeds; words are seeds; smiles are seeds. There is a universal sowing and all that live are sowers.

In sowing good seeds do not be over particular where you sow them. Do not stay to drill a hole for every seed. Do not search round for a spot to plant them. Sow them broadcast. Scatter them. Fling them into the air far and wide. God will plant them rightly enough, never fear.—Have faith. Be as flowers who yield their seeding to the winds, not knowing whither they will be borne, not knowing where they will fall. What matters it to us where God plants our goodness? He will plant it somewhere. Is not that enough for us to know? Kind words, acts of love and helping, smiles of cheer, prayers breathed for the prayerless, a gift to some poor neighbor, a cup of cold water, even, in His dear name: these are the seeds we are to sow. Friend, are you sowing the good seed of the kingdom of peace and love?

"A sower went forth to sow."—Golden Rule.

Two Classes of Conversers.

Around and above all other distinctions, there are two great classes of conversers: those who make you feel that you are of some account in the world, and those who have a subtle way of convincing you that you have no right to exist. The latter class is small in number; but what they lack in quantity, they make up in energy.—Sometimes they are gifted with a sharp tongue and an unerring faculty of saying the most grinding things. Sometimes they are apparently suave and considerate in manner and phrase. But, in either case, you go away from them with a feeling that the world is stuffed with saw-dust—that you yourself are an imbecile and an impostor. It may take days for you to recover your proper standing with yourself. Then, if you ask your soul what fata gift has the tormentor, which carries with it this power of making his fellow-mortals miserable, you discover that it is the gift of selfishness. The person to whom you have been talking is ungenerous. A generous man, a generous woman—you cannot come near such an one without receiving something that makes amends for your own disappointment with, your own ill opinion of, yourself. An ungenerous person adds the weight of another to your side of the scales, and down you go!—The Old Cabinet; Scribner for July.

A Common Mistake.—It is a great mistake to snppose that little can be accomplished if a man has reached the age of thirty or forty years Nine tenths of our clever men have actnally exhibited more vigor of intellect at fifty years of age than at forty. Franklin was forty before he began, in real earnest, the study of natural philosophy. The principal of one of the most flourishing colleges in America was a farm servant until he was past the age when most students have completed their collegiate education. Sir Henry Spelman did not begin the study of science until he was between fifty and sixty years of age. Greek was the first long language which Cato, the celebrated Roman censor, acquired, and he did so in his old age. Alfieri, whose writings have caused a revolntion in the dramatic literature of Italy, was left without a father in his infancy and wasted his early years. John Ogilby, the author of poetical translations from Virgil and Homer, began the study of Latin when about forty years of age, and Greek in his forty-fourth. Boccaccio, one of the most illustrious writers that ever appeared in Italy, suffered nearly half of his life to pass without improvement. Handel was forty-eight before he published any of his great works. Dr. Thomas Arnold, of Rugby, learned German at forty, in order that he might read Niebuhr in the original.

How a Cricket Saved a Ship.—In Southey's "History of Brazil" he tells how Cabeza de Vaca was in a great ship going to South America with four hundred men and thirty horses; and after they had crossed the equator the commander discovered that there were only three casks of water left. He gave orders to make the nearest land, and for three days they sailed for the coast. A poor, sick soldier, who had left Cadiz with them, brought a grillo, or ground cricket, with him, thinking its cheerful voice would amuse him on the long, dreary voyage. But, to his great disappointment, the little insect was perfectly silent the whole way.

The fourth morning after the ship had changed her course the cricket, who knew what she was about, set up her shrillest note. The soldier at once gave warning to the officers in charge of the vessel, and they soon saw high, jagged rocks just ahead of them. The watch had been careless, and the great ship, in a few moments, would have been dashed to pieces on the ledges if this puny creature had not scented the land and told them of their danger. Then they cruised along for some days, and the cricket sang for them every night, just as cheerily as if she had been in far-off Spain, till they got to their destined port, the Island of Catalina.

A French money-lender complained to Baron Rothschild that a nobleman to whom he had loaned ten thousand francs had gone off and left no acknowledgment of the debt. "Write him and ask him to send you immediately the seventy thousand francs he owes you," said the wily banker. "But he only owes me ten thousand francs,' said the money-lender. "Precisely,' rejoined the Baron; "and he will write and tell you so, and you will thus get his acknowledgment.'

The superiority of man to nature is continually illnstrated in literatnre and in life. Nature needs an immense quantity of quills to make a goose with; but man can make a goose of himself in five minutes with one quill.

Truth.—How beautiful is truth! in this world, where there is so much falsehood and deceit, whereby hearts are estranged, and recriminations, assaults and crimes engendered—how beautiful are the true thought, word and deed. Like the sun smiling out amid the angry storm—like the bright stars shining through the heavy night clond—like friend clasping the hand of friend—like right rebutting wrong—like the lance of virtne ringing on the shield of vice—like heaven upon earth, and God in man, is Truth! Precious and Priceless. Dearer than smile of friend, love of parent, or pomp or fame. Truth is all. By this we know the natnre and valne of things—Falsehood is craven, a dastard. Truth is bold, noble, and God-given, beyond every other attribute of the soul —Hall.

Friend, when you hear a sermon, consider this: the truth is more than he who tells it. Be in sympathy with the trnth, and the graces of the orator will be a secondary matter. Are you thirsty? Then the water from the well of salvation will be pleasant even though the moss covered bucket looks somewhat homely. What of that! Drink and be thankful, though you do not get the water in a golden goblet Golden goblets are rather scarce, and you may die of thirst before you get one. There is many a plain spoken man who from a warm heart can tell you about the pardon of sin, divine help, victory over death, and life everlasting. Hear him for his cause, not for his merits, and be a better man Strange as it may seem to you, O critic, feeble tongues sometimes win more souls to the trnth than golden mouths. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

June 16th, says the Nashville American, Bishop McTyeire, President of the Board of Trust, quietly handed over to the Treasurer of the Vanderbilt University, D. Weaver, Esq., New York Central seven per cent. bonds amounting to $300,000, an additional donation from Commodore Vanderbilt for the endowment of the university. The interest of this sum, like that of the previous $300,000, is to be used in carrying on the university. This makes up a round million given by the Commodore, $600,000 of which is in the shape of a vested perpetual endowment, payable semi-annually, affording an annual income of $42,000. The tuition fees will swell the amount to over $50,000 per annum.—Vanderbilt University is now the best endowed educational institntion in the South.

The great characteristic of Christian affection is not enjoyment, is not self-recreation, is not personal happiness, but beneficence. It feeds, clothes, and educates people. Like Christ, it does not come to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give itself as a ransom for many. Its prime expression is not receiving but imparting. It is not pond like—a receptacle which allows itself to be filled and then reposes complacent in its fulness. It is a stream rather, which sings to men, which runs gleefully into thirsty mouths, which is glad to be sucked up by the grateful banks that contain it, yea, which longs for nothing so much as to be taken up in the clouds, and appropriated by the wheel, that the laborers may have harvest in the field and bread from the mill.—W. H. H. Murray.

Formation of Character.—Have you ever watched the icicle as it formed? Have you noticed how it froze, one drop at a time, until it was a foot long, or more? If the water was clean, the icicle remained clear, and sparkled brightly in the sun; but, if the water was slightly muddy, the icicle looked foul, and its beauty was spoiled. Just so our characters are formed. One little thought or feeling at a time adds its influence. If each thought be pure and right the soul will be lovely, and will sparkle with happiness; but, if impure and wrong, there will be deformity and wretchedness.

Dean Stanley thus explains why the term "blue" was originally applied to Presbyterians: "The distinct dress of the Scotch Presbyterian clergy was a blue gown and a broad blue bonnet. The Episcopal clergy, on the contrary, either wore no distinctive dress in public services, or else wore a black gown. From this arose the contrasting epithets of "Black Prelacy,' and 'True Blue Presbyterianism.'

The influence of faith is seen in the fact that it relieves the mind from all perplexity of doubt, and the heart from all anxiety, as to unseen and eternal things. It is, as one has said, "the repose of the intellect and the repose of the affections." It believes God's word and "stays quiet." God has testified that the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, "cleanseth from all sin"

Make Hay While the Sun Shines.—Sir Walter Scott, in a narrative of his personal history, gives the following caution:

"If it should ever fall to the lot of youth to peruse these pages, let such readers remember that it is with the deepest regret that I recollect in my manhood the opportunities of learning which I neglected in my youth; that through every part of my literary career I have felt pinched and hampered by my own ignorance; and I would this moment give half of the reputation I have had the good fortune to acquire, if by so doing I could rest the remaining part upon a sound foundation of learning and science."

The late Dr. Norman McLeod gives in his diary an account of an invitation to preach before a court of Europe. Before the sermon the Prince of Wales requested him "not to preach more than twenty minutes." He received the sturdy Scotch reply that the prince and court had nothing better to do than hear him preach, and he should preach, and he did preach, forty-seven minutes. The Prince had the good sense to listen respectfully and to thank him for the sermon. Long sermons are not the best on all occasions, and a preacher should exercise discretion in this matter; yet the spirit which prompts people to complain is nsually that which, from all reports, actnated the Prince of Wales. He regards the gospel rather indifferently, and though his relations to the church compel his attendance, he regards preaching a bore. Long sermons are not likely to do such hearers any good; nor, for that matter, will short ones.

It is no unusual thing to see a branch of a tree, whose vital activity is so enfeebled that its growth is arrested. Its terminal bud loses the power of throwing off its wintor leaves because no summer leaves form in its interior. The bud then dies, and the branch withers and becomes fit for burning. And so it is, alas! no unusual thing to see Christians whose spiritual life is so weak that their growth is at a stand still. They lose the power of forgetting the things that are behind because they are not reaching forth unto those things which are before. They are therefore in danger of perishing. Only by growing can we be holy and happy—able at once to forget the things that are behind, and to reach forth unto those things which are before.—Rev. Hugh McMillan.

After a refreshing shower, which has made all the flowers to smile till the tear-drops of joy stand in their eyes, you will see your garden paths spotted over with slugs and snails.—These creatures lay concealed till the genial rain called them forth to their slimy way toward whatsoever they might devour. After this fashion, revivals, of necessity, develop hypocrites; yet who would deplore the shower because of the snails, and who would rail at times of refreshing because mere pretenders are excited to make a base profession of a grace to which they are strangers?—Spurgeon.

It is a remarkable fact that every day in the week is observed by some nation for the public celebration of religions services. Sunday is devoted by the Christians, Monday by the Greeks, Tuesday by the Persians, Wednesday by the Assyrians, Thursday by the Egyptians, Friday by the Turks, Saturday by the Jews.

Worth Knowing.—A writer in the London Daily News says: "It is not, unfortnnately, generally known that in case of fire in buildings containing horses, if the harness be merely put on, however roughly, the horses will quit their stables without difficulty.—A knowledge of this fact may be the means of saving many a valuable animal from a horrible death."

Christianity is the great harbinger of civilization. Wherever the gospel is preached in simplicity and with power a long train of blessings follow Education, good government, commerce, trade enterprise, sound morals, and useful arts spring up in gospel soil, and the land smiles. Righteousness exalteth a nation.

'No man hath a velvet cross,' was Flavel's assertion, years ago, and it is just as true now as then. Only He who giveth it to us, and he who beareth the cross knows its weight. God only knows the strength needful for every burden.

The Methodist uses, as a text for a practical sermon, the fact that a popular play-actor recently realized over $50,000 in a tour of 4 weeks, over a district where the aggregate annual salary of eighty Methodist ministers is only $45,000.

The Bible Society exhibits at the Centennial the Holy Scriptures in 200 different languages.

SCIENTIFIC.

After filing a saw, place it on a level board, and pass a whetstone over the side of the teeth until all the wire edge is off them. This will make the saw cut true and smooth, and it will remain sharp longer, The saw must be set true with a saw-set.

An eminent physician of Chicago says he cures ninety-nine ont of every hundred cases of scarlet fever, by giving the patient warm lemonade with gum arabic dissolved in it. A cloth wrung ont in hot water and laid upon the stomach should be removed as rapidly as it becomes cool.

If onions are sliced and kept in a sick room they will absorb all the atmospheric poison. They should be changed every hour. In the room of a small pox patient they blister and decompose very rapidly, but will prevent the spread of the disease. Their application has also proved effectual in the case of snake bites.

The gunpowder now nsed for large artillery, and known as pebble powder, consists of grains a little less than half an inch in diameter, but even this is not large enough for the two monster guns of thirty-eight tons and eighty-one tons lately made in England. The enormous charges which they consume will render an enlargement of the cnbes of powder necessary.

Like flakes of snow, that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly unimportant events of life succeed one another. As the snow gathers together, so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile, prodnces a sensible change. No single action creates, however it may exhibit, a man a character; but as the tempest hurls the avalanch down the mountain, and overwhelms the inhabitant and his habitation, so passion, acting upon the elements of mischief, which pernicious habits have brought together by imperceptible accumulation, may overthrow the edifice of truth and virtue.—Bentham.

Personal.—A carping old woman said once to her pastor, "Dear me, ministers mak' muckle adea about hard wark; but what's two sermons in the week tea mak' oonld do't myself.' "Weel, Janet,' said the minister, goodhumouredly, "let's hear yon try't." "Come awa' wi' a text then,' quoth she. He repeated with emphasis, "It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop than with a browling woman and in a wide house.' Janet fired up instantly. 'What's that you say, sir? Dae ye intand onything personal' 'Stop, stop,' broke in her pastor; 'you would never do for a minister.' 'And what for no?' said she. 'Because, Janet, you come ower soon to the application.'

The Rev. Dr. Cuyler says that the history of the song which Mr. Sankey sings so often, "The Ninety and Nine," is curious. "It originally appeared in the corner of an American newspaper, from the pen of Miss E. C. Clephane. When Mr. Sankey was among the Scottish Highlands, he tried to find some hymn peculiarly suited to the pastoral tastes of his audience, who were mainly shepherds. He discovered these lines in The Rock, an English Evangelical newspaper. He adapted them to a wild, plaintive air, and they soon sang themselves into the hearts not only of rustic Highlanders, but of lords and ladies in fastidious London."

Brussels has the largest refrigerator in the world. It is a large building whose double walls are filled with sawdust and moss. The building covers a surface of eighteen thousand square feet, and it is divided into nine compartments of thirty cubic feet each. It has galleries on which fifty thousand pounds of meat can be placed, and there is room for one million tons of ice.

Bishop Dupanloup has written a pamphlet entitled "Whither are we going?" It endeavors to show that society and religion are in the greatest peril through the triumphant progress of atheism and materialism. The publication is widely circulated and causes a sensation.

Corn-fed hens do not lay in winter for the simple reason that there isn't any albumen material in the corn.—When wheat is fed, there is fat enough in it to supply all that is needed for the yolk, and gluten enough to furnish the shell; it does not thus seem difficult to understand why corn-fed hens should lay as they do.

Care should be taken when cattle are first turned out to grass to give them plenty of salt. All ruminating animals are fond of salt and this natural appetite should be gratified.—There are those who claim that it is of no use, but we suspect such farmers love their ease more than the thrift of their flocks.

The Value of Religion to Woman.

As woman owes to Christianity the high place she occupies in the regard of men, and every social privilege she enjoys, so she cannot retain it without the constant presence in her heart, and the exhibition in her life, of the virtues and graces which the Christian religion imparts. Men are not compelled to be christians; or to exhibit christian qualities constantly and plainly in their lives, in order to retain the power which they hold upon their fellow men, or the place they occupy in society. By their family prestige, accomplished manners, force of will or resplendent abilities, they cause others to forget their lack of religion, and stand where they should fall, and succeed where they should fail. It is not complimentary to society or suffragists to say this, but it is unfortunately true. Men can pass current in society and be petted as favorites, (to the shame of society be it said!) and at the same time be the servants of sin, and the practical enemies of religion.

But how different is the case with woman! Without religion or its graces, she can occupy no place in the esteem of men, nor retain a place in respected society. Unless she is clad, as with a garment, in the lustrous charms and virtues of the christian religion;—unless her reputation be pure and unspotted, and her demeanor above reproach, she cannot hope to retain the esteem of either her own or the opposite sex. Unjust may be the discrimination, which tolerates the absence of religion in men and requires its presence in woman, but it is nevertheless made, and in order that she may attract and hold the respect and veneration, the admiration and love of men, she must be pure in thought and conduct, chaste and circumspect in conversation, void of reproach or suspicion, truthful and honest, temperate, just, compassionate, godly;—in short, possessed of all the shining virtues that compose the christian character. Possessing these she has about her a guard as faithful and vigilant as the flaming Cherubim which kept the garden of Eden free from the polluting touch of human presence. They form too a crown of beauty, which will attract and please long after the charms of personal beauty have vanished, the eye dimmed, the color faded from the cheek, and the impress of passing time has been left on brow and form.

A flippant woman, sneering at religion or exhibiting a lack of its virtues, however brilliant and beautiful she may be, is regarded by both men and women with intolerance and disgust, and the light, frivolous girl who imagines that her frivolity, wit and easy conduct, indulged at the expense of religion and good taste, will attract and retain admiring beaus, will discover either that her hopes and plans were vain and futile or that these, who gather about her, are men whose principles and associations unfit them for a lady's presence.

Men who do not possess religion themselves, admire it in others and expect it in woman; and when seeking wives who shall be their life companion and counsellors, presiding deities of their homes, and the educators of the minds and hearts of their children, will not jeopardize their happiness by selecting women in whose characters do not prominently appear the graces of religion. Beauty of face and figure may charm the eye for a time; brilliancy of intellect and gayety of speech may entertain and amuse for a season; the accomplishments upon which society places much stress and which add greatly to the charms of woman, may elicit admiration for a while; the taste displayed in elaborate dress, or the graceful movements of the youthful figure in the mazes of the dance, may please many a Coelebs in search of a wife, but he will sensibly consider that all these attractions are ephemeral and fleeting, and that the face whose beauty Diana might now regard with delight will ere long be pencilled over by the wrinkled marks of age and care; that the form so graceful and elastic that Terpsichore could not teach it better grace, or Grecian thought and taste suggest a more faultless model, will in time be bent and its symmetry destroyed, and that if there be none of the Christian virtues to adorn the declining years and preserve the youthful ardor of affection and regard, the latter days of life's journey will be strewn with the wreck of ruined happiness and shattered joys.

Piety and other virtues are not dimmed by the lapse of time, but with age. They impart a beauty and fragrance and dignity to character that command and retain the admiration and esteem of men, at all times, in all places; in adversity and prosperity, in joy and sorrow, in youth and maturity, in life and death With them, woman is secure in the hold she has upon the regard and affection of men; without them, her tenure is slight indeed, and subject to the whims and caprices of the world.

Bishop Marvin and China.

Bishop Marvin, by the unanimous voice of his colleagues in the College of Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, has been detailed to visit our Missions in China and ordain the native preachers. He has written a letter to Nashville relating to his mission and maps out his trip around the world. He says "I did not covet the service, I did not seek it, but rather sought to avoid it. But in this, as in every case, what the church requires of me I do cheerfully."

The prayers of the church will follow the beloved Bishop on his long journey.

He says: "I have had a free consultation with the officers of the Board as to the details of the tour, and shall act upon their suggestions. The plan is to spend a week or two in Japan, and then proceed to Shanghai, and have an informal Conference with our missionaries, at which time the native preachers will be ordained. While in China I propose to visit Pekin, Sou Chon, and other important points, taking about a month, perhaps. On leaving Shanghai I shall drop down to Hong Kong, on the way to India, and perhaps take a day or two to run up to Canton. The next points will be Madras and Calcutta, in India, looking to an overland trip across Hindostan to Bombay, with perhaps a few deflections to see points of interest. Then I must take a week where

The spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's Isle.

From Ceylon the route will lie, possibly, through the Persian Gulf and Turkey, but more probably through the Red Sea and the Suez Canal into the Mediterranean. Then, of course, I must see Cairo, Alexandria, the Sphinx, the Pyramids, and the Nile, on one hand; and Sinai, the Dead Sea, Jerusalem, the Lake of Galilee, and Damascus, on the other. After that I hope to see what Protestantism is accomplishing at Rome. It would be a great pleasure to visit Greece, at least to see Athens, but I shall hardly have time for that. But I propose to return through France and England, and possibly make a flying trip into Germany.

Leaving from San Francisco and returning by New York, I shall, if life be spared, make the entire circuit of the globe.

The object is, first and mainly, as I have said, to ordain the native preachers in China; and secondly, to get a near view of the great missionary field, and of the work that is being done in it, and to communicate such facts as may strike me, to our Church-papers, so that the Southern Methodist public may be fully informed of the present condition and prospects of the great campaign by which the world is to be subjugated to the Son of God.

It is a sort of exploring expedition, and contemplates an advance movement of our own Church. We hope, by the grace and help of God, to take a leading position in this war of conquest, and to do our full part toward the coronation of our risen Redeemer as Lord of all.

While I did not seek this undertaking, but rather sought to avoid it, I did not resist it, as I have never resisted any work laid on me by the Church. And I confess that, since my designation to it, notwithstanding all the discomforts of the voyage, and the long absence from home involved in it, I have a feeling of great satisfaction in doing this work for the Master. I pray that it may be the beginning of a new era of missionary activity in the M. E. Church, South.

In entering upon it I commit myself to the care of God and the prayers of his people."

The Right Rev. Geo. D. Cummins, D. D., Presiding Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, died suddenly at his residence, Lutherville, Baltimore county, at 2:15 P. M. 26th ult. He had dined, and soon afterwards complained of feeling badly; a physician was summoned, and in a very short while the patient grew rapidly worse, and said he believed he was going to die. The symptoms soon became alarming, and he suddenly and quietly expired, having retained his consciousness up to the last. He was asked if he had anything he desired to say, and his reply was, "Tell the people of my Church to go forward." This was his last utterance.

Zion's Herald has some wise words about the present condition of political affairs. Coming from that source it is significant:

"A radical change in our civil service is the great, but difficult, political question of the hour. One strong, independent administration, renouncing all expectation of re-election, and boldly and wisely standing up against the immorality of this almost universal office selling, might make a change in this direction."

Rev. J. C. Hartsell writes July 4th: "We have had a good meeting at Hickory: some conversions and some accessions to the church. Pray for us!"

Greensboro District Conference.

The annual session of this body for the current year was held in the town of Winston, opening on the 22nd of June and continuing through the ensuing Saturday Dr Wilson, the P E of the District, occupied the chair.

After the calling of the roll of delegates and the election of a secretary, the Conference proceeded to its special business; viz, the reception of reports from the several pastoral charges. These were given in detail and were listened to with deep interest—Almost without exception the spiritual condition of the membership was represented as highly gratifying—the precise epithets used were 'good,' 'very good,' 'improving,' and in one or two cases, 'tolerably good.'

The interest in class meetings still lives on a few charges. One brother mentioned holding a deeply interesting class meeting while on his way to the Conference, in which forty members were present, and all set forth a good experience.

Family worship was represented as being to some extent neglected by our members.

The missionary interest was reasonably forward, but it was remarked that our people are not fully awake on this great matter.

Sunday schools were uniformly represented as flourishing. The interest in this great department of christian work seems steadily to increase.

The finances were in a more forward condition than at the corresponding time last year. Upon the whole, the general aspect of the church interests on the District was highly encouraging. Frequently during the rendering of these reports lively and interesting discussions would spring up on different points, and it was evident they were felt to be profitable as well as pleasant.

Among visiting brethren were Rev L W Crawford of Salisbury and Rev W C Willson of Mocksville.

The Conference suspended its regular proceedings to listen to an address from Rev C H Wiley, general Bible Agent for N C, at the conclusion of which the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we highly approve of the objects and operations of the American Bible Society, and that we will heartily co operate with their general agent, Rev C H Wiley, in the dissemination of the sacred Scriptures.

Prof W C Doub, from the committee appointed at the last session of the Conference to locate a District Conference School, reported the action of the committee, whereupon a resolution was passed "accepting the property donated to the church by the citizens of Kernersville, Forsythe Co, for that purpose;" also heartily endorsing and recommending the school as now established under the administration of Rev. Wm H Bass, to the patronage of our people. Rev J A Cunninggim and Professors O W Carr and W F Alderman were appointed a visiting committee to this school.

Pleasant Garden Academy was endorsed and recommended as a High School of this District worthy the confidence and support of our people. Rev S D Adams and Professors J L Wright and W T Ganaway were appointed a visiting committee to this school.

Resolutions of thanks to the citizens of Winston for their generous hospitality, to the Railway Co's for reduced rates to delegates, and to the Presbyterian and Moravian Churches for the tender of their houses of worship were passed.

A resolution was passed heartily endorsing the Temperance Societies, and bidding them God-speed in their noble work.

The usual religious services were held in the intervals of the Conference sessions and on Sunday the various pulpits of the town were filled by ministers of the Conference.

On Friday evening a very large and interested audience listened to the Centennial Address of Prof. W. C. Doub on "The Pioneer Methodist Preachers of N. C."

Saturday was devoted mainly to educational interests. Dr. Jones repeated by request his Centennial Address on the History of G. F. College. Dr. Craven then addressed the Conference on 'the Decay and Close of the Age of Muscle and the Inauguration of the Age of Brain."

The Agency of the Colleges was represented on Saturday evening by Rev. J.A.Cunninggim, one of the College Agents. His address was a decidedly able effort, and at its close a good collection was lifted. All these addresses were marked with superior ability and contributed much to the interest of the occasion.

Pleasant Garden, Guilford Co., was selected as the place for the next session of the Conference.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected—Prof. O. W. Carr, R. P. Troy, Dr. T. M. Jones, and N. B. Sullivan, with the following alternates, Dr. W. A. Woolen and M. W. Norfleet.

The entire session of the Conference passed with the utmost harmony, all felt that interests of the highest moment had claimed their sober consideration, and had received such careful attention as must result in much good to the Church. The citizens of Winston by their noble hospitality have established delightful memories of themselves in the minds of all who had the good fortune to attend this pleasant occasion.

I have tried, Mr. Editor, to be very concise, as you newspaper men very properly recommend. We missed your genial face, but we know you were interested in our work, and we ask you to give this a place in the columns of your valuable paper

Yours truly,
W F Alderman, Sec.

Bishop McTyeire.

Dear Bros Bobbitt & Gray: I send you for publication in the Advocate, Bishop McTyeire's letter, which explains his not getting to our District Conference at Hickory. While no one doubted his having a good excuse for his absence, it will be a pleasant relief, however, to the entire District to read his letter.

We assure our beloved Bishop that the Church in Western North Carolina will be ready to receive him with a warm heart and open arms whenever it shall be in his power to visit us.

Very truly,
R. G Barrett.

Shelby, July 4th, 1876

THE BISHOP'S LETTER.

Dear Bro Barrett: And so I did not get to you and the District Conference, as I fully expected to do, when making the appointment, and even down to the time when Dr. McFerrin left Nashville, in advance of me.

But, I heard with great pleasure, (though without surprise) of your good meeting.

Circumstances which seemed imperative, because providential, called me in another direction than Hickory. Nor could I change them.

My regrets at not being of you and with you at the District Conference were largely for myself. The good old Doctor was on hand—I had engaged his services. He filled the bill for more than one man. Then I knew the Presiding Elder was master of the situation, and was supported by a strong and well organized corps of the best laborers.

I congratulate you on the success that attended; and not you only, but the church within the District.

And yet I hope to visit your Western North Carolina—though "let" in this instance. I shall not be satisfied until I do so.

The gracious interest and impetus of the District Conference will, I trust, be diffused over all the circuits and reach every appointment, with a blessing.

May you ever have "the good will of Him who dwelt in the bush."

Yours very truly,
H N. McTyeire.

Nashville, June 24th, '76.

Rev John R. Brooks at Wilson.

Messrs Editors: According to previous announcement, made though several of the news papers of the State, the sermon before the graduating class of Wilson College was preached in the Methodist Church, June 28th, by Rev. John R Brooks, of Goldsboro. The occasion was one of interest and profit. The discourse was able, learned, and practical, reflecting much credit upon the speaker as a close thinker and strong reasoner, and giving great satisfaction to the intelligent and deeply intersted audience. His text was 1st Tim. 3rd chap., and a part of the 16th verse:—"Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh." The proposition discussed was, that the concession of mystery in the doctrinal facts and statements of revelation involve and mark no damage to the truth—that the objection to Christianity, because of the admitted mysteriousness and alleged absurdity of its doctrines, is utterly groundless.

This general proposition was clearly illustrated and strongly enforced by the full establishment of the following four particular and subordinate propositions, viz:

1. That mystery does not necessarily involve absurdity.

2. That mystery, in its cause and origin, is subjective rather than objective.

3. That there are as great mysteries connected with the facts and doctrines of science and Natural Religion as there are with Revelation.

4. That, as a profound thinker has shown, it is simply the doctrinal facts, and not the mystery or philosophy of their existence, that are in the Bible presented to our faith.

The publication of the sermon would be hailed with pleasure and result in great good.

Death of James Franklin Tanner.

Messrs Editors: The sad intelligence has just reached this place of the death of Mr. James Franklin Tanner of Sandersville Ga., who graduated at Trinity three weeks ago, and I have chosen this method of communicating the sad intelligence to his class mates, fellow-students and many friends in this State.

He left here on the 16th inst, arrived home on the 17th inst. sick—and died the Friday following. He was with his dear mother only one week after an absence of three years, which were spent in completing his course at Trinity College, N. C. How sad! Two weeks ago today I helped him on the train for his distant home, and little did I think, then, that I was shaking his hand for the last time. It fills my heart unutterably full to think I shall see his dear and familiar face no more in this world. As a class mate and as a friend I had become devotedly attached to him, and over his untimely death I now mingle my tears with those of his devoted mother and dear kindred. Fully three months ago, my class was called upon to mourn the loss of one of its purest and noblest members and, now, I am to tell that another has gone. Yes, "Jim" is dead, fellow-classmates. His immortal soul has winged its flight from these earthly scenes. We will hear his familiar voice no more. No more will his eloqnent tongue speak from the dear old rostrum of our Alma Mater. No more will we behold his sprightly, beaming and familiar face and never again will we hear his social laugh, carrying with it the melody of his noble heart. It is sad to know that no class mate was near him to comfort him in his last hour, and to minister the last sad, offices of tender devotion and affection, and that no fellow-student was there to be sprinkle and bedew his distant grave with affection's tear. But such was the decree of Fate, and such was the order of Providence. While we must in dulge this sad thought it is consoling to know that he had reached his dear home where it is sweeter to die or live, where his pillow could be softened and moistened by the tears of his best friend, where his last expiring gaze could rest upon the most devoted of all friends—his mother:—and where his beloved kindred could entwine the wreath of affection for his sacred tomb.

Should his afflicted mother chance to see these hastily written lines she may learn, at least, from them that she is not alone in her bereavement and sadness: that in her sad and sudden affliction she has the heartfelt condolence and deep sympathy of his devoted class-mates; that he still lives in the hearts of his fellow-students: that they will ever revere his dear memory and hold him in tender remembrance; and that — should they ever tread the soil of his native home—they will plant upon his grave a flower of devotion and bedew it with affection's tear. Peace to his revered ashes!

Rev. Dr. Stephen R. Tyng, Jr. has recently so far departed from staid Episcopalism as to preach in a tent—still further, he has baptized some persons by immersion. While the Episcopal fathers will be scandalized by this rather independent scion of the Tyng family, the Methodists will approve the tent, and the Baptists rejoice in the immersion.

Chapel Hill July 6th 1876.

Messrs Bobbitt & Gray: Dear Brethren: The Newberne District Conference directed its Secretary, Rev. F. H. Wood, to furnish a synopsis of proceedings for the Advocate. He made an excellent Secretary, and will doubtless, as soon as his press of work will permit, perform the labor of love assigned him.

We had a good time. Taken all in all, the best preaching I have ever heard either at Annual or District Conference. But the present writer did none of it. The visit of Dr. Craven, Bros. J. A. Cunninggim and B. B. Culbreth, contributed largely to make the occasion not only pleasant but profitable. On Sabbath morning the best love feast I was ever in, (except one years ago in which I heard my mother speak,) furnished a fitting terminus to the labor of the week. We were compelled to violate the law which forbids holding more than an hour, because we were bound by a higher law—"the perfect law of liberty," and it was good to be there. The Lord keep alive these meetings in the church.

We endeavored to look after all the interests of the church; and used our sub episcopal privilege to exhort for the Advocate. By the way, I desire to say that, in my judgment the article in your last issue upon the "Government of Children," is worth to any family the year's subscription price. And yet, Methodist families neglect their church paper.

Yours truly,
E. A. Yates.

A Happy Fireside.—Home is the residence not merely of the body, but of the heart. It is a place for the affections to unfold and develop themselves—for children to love, and learn, and play in—for husband and wife to toil smilingly together, and make life a blessing. The object of all ambition should be to be happy at home. If we are not happy there, we cannot be happy elsewhere. It is the best proof of the virtues of a family circle, to see a happy fireside.

The Foreign Missionary work of the Presbyterian Church, May 1st, 1876, had: American missionaries, 134, and communicants, 8,577. The increase of communicants was 1,676, being 24¾ per cent. This is the largest ever reported. The most remarkable success has been in Japan and Mexico. In the former the members have increased during the year from 46 to 118, and in the latter from 1,000 to 2,300.

Religious Intelligence.

Mr. Moody will, it is said, spend the summer in Northfield, Mass.

In the plan of the Episcopal Visitation Bishop Haven is sent to Liberia.

A College in the city of Agra, for the training of native East Indians as medical missionaries, is contemplated.

Dr Punshon has sent £20 to aid in the erection of the Wesley Memorial church at Savannah, Ga.

The Rev. Mr. Dungee, a distinguished Colored Minister of Richmond, favors a Reform of the Public Service and thinks well of Tilden.

Professor Price, late of Randolph Macon, has gone to the University of Virginia in Mr Gildersleeve's place.

The Rev. H R. Revels, D. D., (colored,) resigns the editorship of the Southwestern Advocate, to which he was elected by the General Conference.

Bishop Marvin opened the Democratic Convention at St. Louis with prayer. If the people keep on praying and working they may do something.

Moody says he "never saw an infidel that wanted to live in a country where there were no Christians and no Bible"—a happy thought, and a very suggestive one.

Mr. Geo. Williams, of London, was the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association thirty five years ago.—He still lives, and will be at the International Convention which meets at Toronto, Canada, July 12

Ten years ago there was not a Methodist Church in Sweden. Now there are seventy societies, fifty-six preachers, and forty local preachers. There are five thousand members and thirty-one churches, which have a seating capacity of twelve thousand.

The Rev. Isaac Bird, one of the earliest American missionaries to Syria, died at the residence of his son, Mr. James Bird, at Great Barrington Massachusetts, on Tuesday morning June 13th, having nearly completed his 83rd year

Bishop Edwards in his will leaves to the Missionary Society of the United Brethren Church, $300; to the library of Union Biblical Seminary, $100, and to the library of Westfield College $100 Thus the Bishop, though dead, encourages and helps those departments of Church work dear to him in his life.

The New York Evening Post has this just estimate of missionaries, and those who criticise them: "Here and there are little house holds—they do not deserve the dignified name of "class"—which exert a precious influence in favor of decency and morality and respectability; I mean, of course, the missionaries When a man speaks ill of missionaries it is prudent, before accepting the dictum, to examine the critic's life to see if there be anything there which the missionary and his religion condemn. There may be men of perfect virtue, deep sympathy for man, and spotless morality, who find, as the fruit of candid study, that Missions are a failnre and missionaries impostors. I have not met such; but I have met a great many rakes, infidels, drunkards, and blackguards, who have a thorough contempt for missionaries and their work. Some classes of men have just as instinctive a dislike for missionaries as the devil for holy water."

Recent Publications.

While Pastor of the Canton Church New Jersey, some years ago, I temporarily lost my voice, and was in consequence unable to preach for nearly a year. Last spring I began to have all the symptoms of losing it again. I labored with great difficulty, fearing each time I preached would be the last. In July I commenced using Dr. Jayne's Expectorant, at the same time rubbing my throat and chest freely with the Liniment. I gargled my throat daily according to the directions given in Dr Jayne's Almanac, at the same time taking the Expectorant regularly. Feeling very much better, I discontinued the use of the Gargle and the Liniment, but still kept on with the Expectorant. This winter I have been more exposed, and preach oftener than for many years past, and yet my voice seems to be growing stronger, and were it not for the requirements of my calling I firmly believe a permanent cure would be effected by the Expectorant. At all events the good it has done, and is doing me, makes me anxious to recommend it to all who are suffering from throat or Lung Complaint.

Says the Burke Blade: "We mentioned, last week, that six convicts escaped from the mountain work, at night, leaving most of their clothes behind. The guard in pursuit had a countryman with them. The countryman caught up with the convicts first. They turned on him and beat him with rocks so that his condition is very critical. The three guards came up in the meantime, and killed one convict, wounded another and captured four. Only two escaped.

Later.—Since writing the above we learn that one of the convicts was discovered at the base of the cliff near the works with one arm and leg broken. He had fallen over the cliff in his attempt to get away Saturday night, and had remained in that condition from Saturday night till Thursday morning. The Dr. says he will recover in spite of all this.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE, STAUNTON VA.—We take pleasure in directing attention to the advertisement of this popular Seminary for the education of young ladies. It is located in the city of Staunton, in the center of the fair-famed Shenandoah Valley, in one of the healthiest climates in the world, where every breeze contributes to the physical vigor of its pupils. In this health-giving climate our Southern daughters who go with feeble constitutions, soon acquire the vigorous form and blooming cheek of health. It presents attractions unsurpassed if not unequaled in the South. It is conducted by over twenty able and accomplished Teachers and Officers. Its buildings are home like and elegant, grounds attractive, scenery grand.

The last session of this school was attended by pupils from seventeen different States. One of the lan able aims of this school will be to require its pupils to practice economy, especially in dress. To this end a simple uniform is worn.—In this Institution no unnecessary bills are allowed and the expenses of parents and guardians are to be kept within the lowest possible amount. With these advantages we are not surprised that this popular Institution draws its patronage from Maryland and Pennsylvania to Texas. It is endorsed by Professors such as Peters, Holmes, Davis, of University of Virginia, Bishops Doggett, Marvin, McTyeire, and a host of distinguished men and worthy patrons throughout the South. See advertisement.

NORTH CAROLINA AT THE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.—An honor of no ordinary magnitude belongs to Wallace Bros., of Statesville, N. C., for one of the largest exhibitions of the Medicinal Plants of the State, that has ever been seen at any of the exhibitions; first is 650 pressed plants, giving their locality and time of flowering, the parts used medicinally, and their medical proper ies, besides some 300 varieties of the fruits of the above plants; 150 varieties of medical timber, showing each section of wood, bark, etc., besides 400 varieties of the crude materials taken from their general stock; also, Mosses, Ferns, and Botanic curiosities, the whole forming a beautiful display of the Materia Medica of the Old North state. From their courteous exhibitor, Mr. M. E. Hyams, I learned that new articles are constantly discovered in that State, and made available by the Pharmacists of the world. Such a novel display is creditable to this firm, and will give them a world wide fame, which they truly deserve. North Carolina can be proud of these enterprising gentlemen, who have spent a great deal of means and time to get up this Medical exhibition, to their interest, and the interest and welfare of the State. Their sales last year exceeded one million eight hundred thousand pounds of roots, herbs, barks, seeds and flowers, which has proved a large source of revenue to the State.—D. THE FOURTH AT SALEM AND WINSTON.—Salem and Winston united in the celebration of the Fourth of July, and for the completeness and extent of the arrangements, the celebration has never been surpassed, if equalled, in the State. The procession was a magnificent page ant. A vehicle, consisting of three handsome wagons connected together, in which were 37 girls becoming y dressed, representing the 37 States, was drawn by a team of ten richly caparisoned horses. This was followed by a wagon containing 13 girls representing the original colonies. Another wagon contained the coat of arms, the products of North Carolina, while a car containing a throne on which was seated a beautiful girl as the Goddess of Liberty, was drawn by four white steeds. A procession, fully a half mile long, followed. At the public square in Salem, the exercises were opened by a very graceful address by the Mayor of Salem, Col R. L. Patterson, and prayer by Rev F. H. Johnson, of the Presbyterian Church. The Declaration of Independence was read by Mr. F. H. Fries and the Mecklenburg Declaration was read by Dr. H. T. Rahnson. The address containing a historical sketch of the Moravians, Salem, Forsythe county and Winston, was delivered by the Junior Editor of this paper. At night there was a fine pyrotechnied display. The crowd in attendance was estimated at 6000 people.

TRIAL OF GEO. W. SWEPSON.—The trial of Mr Swepson for the killing of Mr A G Moore at Haw River last January, has been in progress in Wake Superior Court for the past two weeks The dying declarations of Mr Moore were excluded on the ground that they partook of the character of an examination without the privilege of cross examination by the accused

The testimony closed last Saturday and after argument, was given to the jury about 9 o'clock, P M. The jury retired for ten minutes and returned a verdict of not guilty.

THE FOURTH OF JULY IN RALEIGH.—There was an immense crowd in Raleigh on the 4th inst, to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the birth of the Nation. At Metropolitan Hall, Mr Geo H Snow read the Declaration of Independence and Hon Kemp P Battle delivered the oration. The address of Mr Battle was a polished and interesting history of Wake county and of the city of Raleigh and has been published by the Raleigh News. At night Mr Jno Nichols read the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence at the Capitol Square and a magnificent display of fire-works followed.

"I Would I Were Young Again."

How oft does this exclamation rise involuntarily from the heart, and that, too, from the lips of those who by their follies have become prematurely old. It is no uncommon sight to see middle aged men and women in the prime of life with grey hairs looking like octogenarians. Could illegally removed, they would again be young at least in looks if not in years. Let these unfortunate beings rejoice for an invention has been made by Dr. Tutt, of New York, which restores youthful beauty to the hair. It is a long step in science and supplies a want long felt and is destined to banish forever all those vile compounds of Nitrate of Silver, Sulphur and Sugar of Lead, which flood the country.

WILL H. CALL.

Died in Lincolnton N. C. June 24th 1876 Mr. Caleb Miller, in the 82 year of his age. Bro Miller at the time of his death was the oldest person in the Methodist Church in Lincolnton. He was blessed with a strong and manly frame, and in the days of his strength he was a valuable member of society and a useful citizen He held the high office of sheriff of Lincoln co. for many years. He said that as he well qualified for good should leave upon the larger portion of his young life out of the work and church of Christ About ten years ago, however, he gave him self to God and joined the church in which he remained till the day of his death. Death to him was a happy deliverance from the labor and sorrow of four score years. To he christian the end of days is the beginning of life. His death was peace and triumph day God comfort the widow and children.

J. P. HARRIS.

Died at Rocky Point N. C on the morning of the 22nd of June 1876, Thomas L. only son of W. B. and M. S. Hurst aged 1 year 5 months and 11 days.

This death was very sudden, but God, in much mercy, put his arm around the bereaved parents and drew them nearer to himself.

Mother, from thy sheltering breast,
To his dark and dreamless rest,
They have borne thy fair haired boy,
He who was thy hope and joy.
He who was thy expected stay
When his father should pass away.
Coldly by a relative's side,
Now decays thy flower of pride.
And thy stricken eyed heart is left,
Severely wounded thus bereft.
Yet the God who smites to heal,
Does, for human anguish feel.
He will find a balm for thee,
As thy day, thy strength shall be.

Died in Wilmington on the 29th day of May 1876 Bro. Jas. Eph Hodges a native of Virginia, aged about 65 years, more than 40 of which he spent as a faithful member of the Methodist C urch. He was a trustee, a class leader and a steward at 5th St Church—and was faithful in the performance of all his duties, We miss him. His death was a proof season of christian triumph. During his last days he took great delight in talking of heaven the place where he now resides.

J. M. RHODES.

John R. Boshamer, died in Mocksville June 6th 1876, He was the son of H. R. and Mary E Boshamer. and a brother of Rev A. A. Boshamer, of the N. C Conference, He had entered upon his 27th year.

He professed conversion and joined the M E. Church, South, the 28 h November 1875 during a revival at Mocksville conducted by Rev. W. C. Wilson. Before his conversion he had formed a habit and appetite for intoxicating liquors. This was the sin that beset him and the weight that hindered his christian race When he would do good this was the evil that was ever present to hinder his purpose. But what could not he done for him in health was fully accomplished in him upon the couch of suffering. One night of distress which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." This Pauline experience expressed in the form of a divine promise, was demonstrated as an accomplished fact in the experience of this young brother, in the very crucible of suffering.

He engaged heartily with his pastor and friends in religious services conducted in his room in the morning of the day of his death,

He had all the kind attention of his affectionate and devoted mother and other friends, during his illness He prayed earnestly to God for pardon and the witness of adoption, as death approached him, God sent him a gracious answer of peace, He then bade his weeping and mourning weeping friends farewell, taking their hand and enjoined them to meet him in heaven. I asked him if "all is well" he responded yes and after a few moments when he became speechless, I repeated the question, and he bowed his head in token of victory. O how marvelous is the grace of God which comforts and saves in such an hour as this!

THOMAS A. BROOKE.

Died, June, 15th 1876, at Mt. Airy, N. C., in the 31st year of her age, Mrs Eliza Foy, daughter of John and Virginia Banner, and consort of Mr G Foy

For many years sister Foy had been a faithful consistent member of the M. E Church, South. For nearly four months she was sorely afflicted.

Hers was a case of remarkable christian fortitude, resignation and patient endurance It was an endurance in hope of a crown of rejoicing, that shall never fade away.

She leaves her aged parents, her husband and one sweet little girl, with a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her departure While the separation is a sad bereavement to them, it is her happy privilege to rest with Jesus in paradise

May they all find a consolation in the hope of the gospel.

JAS WILSON.

Died of consumption in Newberne N. C. May 27th, 1876 Miss Laura Jones aged 24 years 3 months and 9 days.

Laura professed the religion of Christ and joined the M E. Church South at Portsmouth N C in 1869 She was an amiable girl, of sweet disposition, but has been called home in the midst of her days How pass and dark the place left by her sunny smiles! But she is gone we trust where storms of malice never blow and sorrows never come, to enjoy, "sweet rest and peace" in her father's house not made with hands, With her the sorrows of life are over and the pains of death are past.

SOMETHING NEW!

AN INVIGORATING REMEDY.—CANNABIS INDICA.

This wonderful preparation, known by the above title, which has at last attained such celebrity during the last few years in all parts of the United States as a positive CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS AND COUGHS, can now be obtained at all first-class druggists. We have made permanent arrangements in London, India, for obtaining "PURE HEMP," and having it extracted upon its own soil (the climate in America being so changeable to extract large quantities true from mildew). These remedies are now prepared from the best Hemp, gathered at the right season, and extracted during midsummer in Calcutta. There is not a single symptom of Consumption that it does not alleviate, and it will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical.

$2.00 per bottle or 3 bottles for $5.00.

As this is an imported article, we do not commission our remedies, but will be pleased to make cash Agents every where. Address,

CRADDOCK & CO.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.

WILL begin its twenty seventh Annual Session, September 21st, 1876. Rev W. A. Harris, D. D., President, with an able corps of twenty three Teachers and Officers.

The best Languages taught and spoken in the Old World by a Native as Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among them are some of the most cultivated teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union. Its marked effect is the rapid promotion of the health and vigor of our pupils Those who come here from the south will find the conditions, and climatic diseases, are generally restored.

Buildings elegant—furnished by purest bronze, commanding the most magnificent scenery, and combining such varied attractions as to make it one of the most delightful college homes in the Union

This school is usually attended by pupils from fifteen to seventeen different States

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A simple uniform is worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practiced to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop D. S. Doggett, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., under the Presidency of Rev. W. A. Harris, is in my judgment, one of the best institutions for young ladies in the South. I have occasion to know and appreciate its value by the advantages enjoyed by some of my daughters there, its course of study is ample in Faculty accomplished, and its instruction both solid and elegant. Its personal accommodations are all that could be desired for health and comfort, in taste No location could be more eligible nor commanding more beautiful and almost more sal lubrious. But the best of all merits, is that we find it sound for religious training, without which no Female College can be, especially worthy a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT.

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Country. Instruction is thorough. In music, advantages are offered of very high order. The most talented Professors are employed, and neither pains nor expenses are spared to make this department excellent.

From Prof F. H. Smith, M. A. L. L. D., University of Virginia,

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys Having had a daughter under Mr. Harris' care, my observation leads me to believe this school to be one of the best of Female Seminaries which adorn our State * * The Hall of the Wesleyan Female Institute should be filled to overflowing with pupils from all our Southern States.

Cherries

Under the tree the farmer said,
Built ag and shaking his wise old head;
"Cherries are ripe! but then you know,
There's the grass to cut and the corn to hoe!
We can gather the cherries any day,
But when the sun shines we must make our hay;
To-night, when the chores have all been done,
We'll master the boys, for fruit and fun."

Up in a tree a robin said,
Pecking and cocking his saucy head:
"Cherries are ripe! and so, to-day,
We'll g thar them while you make the hay.
For we are the boys with no corn to hoe,
No cows to milk, and no grass to mow,"
At night the farmer said: "Here's a trick!
These roguish robins have had their pick."

Robbie's Reward.

"Pins and pocket-combs! Pins and pocket-combs!"

Robbie's voice was very low; for he was tired, and almost faint for want of food. The crowd in the waiting-room was indifferent, and seemed to have little need of such wares as his; so his sales were very small.

"Here, little boy,' said a voice behind him; "you have just what I want. This ugly rent must be pinned up till I can get home. I'll take this paper. Harvey, will you pay this little fellow for a paper of pins?'

The beautiful woman turned to the tall young man beside her; and he looked as though it would be a pleasure to do anything for her.

He was just counting a handful of change which he had taken from his pocket, when he was interrupted.

"No, no, ma'am!' said Robbie, eagerly. "Don't take that paper; it isn't a whole one. I cut off a row of pins from it this morning, for poor little Hannah to dress her doll with.'

"Never mind, little man,' said the young lady, gayly. "A tenth part of these I have will be more than I want; so I shall only have the less to throw away when I'm done with them.'

"Then don't pay so much,' persisted Robbie; and he handed back two cents to the gentleman, who had given him ten.

"Well, little man,' said Harvey, "arn't your ideas of morals most too big for such a little head as yours? How do you ever expect to get a living, if you don't cheat a little now and then?'

Robbie's brown eyes were open very wide as he heard this query.

"But I'd rather not live at all than to live dishonestly.'

"Who taught you all these things about right and wrong?' the gentleman asked.

"My mother,' replied Robbie. 'And I think she would rather I should die, and come to her in heaven, an honest, upright boy, than to live ever so well on stolen money.'

"Yes, yes!' said Harvey, "I dare say you are right; and you are a noble boy to remember such a mother's teachings.'

Little Robbie went wearily on with his work, carrying, nevertheless, a quiet conscience with him; for all he was so tired; he had overcome one little temptation.

The lady and gentleman stepped upon the train and were gone.

Harvey Soleman was very thoughtful; and his gay companion had to reprove him for his silence.

"You've been gazing at the trestle-work of Hampden bridge ever since we came in sight. One would think you were planning to build a bridge of your own, by the way you study that.'

"So I am, Belle,' he replied; 'rather, I've built it; and crossed it already, and find myself on the safe side of a great chasm of temptation; for, see here! you don't know how strongly I've been tempted, lately, to withhold those bonds that I know, in honor, ought to go to redeem my father's pledge. They would help me so much by increasing my capital just now, as I am starting in business. But the little pin-peddler, back there, has taught me a lesson. I believe like him, I'll starve on honesty, rather than fatten on theft.'

But a few weeks later, after Harvey Holeman's business was well established, the station-agent of Beacon City received a letter inquiring after the little peddler of pins and pocket-combs, and relating his little act of honesty.

Later still, honest Robbie was received into Mr. Holeman's home and business interests, to serve, first as errand-boy, and then as clerk.

Which was the better reward for Robbie—the fine position which his honesty had gained for him, or the consciousness of having influenced for good a fellowman? He thought the latter.—Well Spring.

Rural and Domestic.

Whence They Originated.

Spinach is a Persian plant.
Horseradish is a native of England.
Melons came from Asia.
Filberts came from Greece.
Quinces came from Corinth.
The turnip came from Rome.
The peach came from Persia.
Sage is a native of the south of Europe.
Sweet marjoram is a native of Portugal.
The bean is said to be a native of Egypt.
Damsons came from Damascus.
The nasturtian came from Peru.
The gooseberry is indigenous to Great Britain.
The pea is a native of the East and West Indies.
Apricots are indigenous to the plains of Armenia.
The cucumber was a tropical vegetable.
Capers grew wild in Greece and North Africa.
The walnut is a native of Persia, the Caucuses and China.
Pears were brought from the East by the Romans.
The clove is a native of the Malacca islands, as also is the nutmeg.
Cherries were known in Asia as far back as the seventeenth century.
Garlic came to us first from Sicily and the shores of the Mediterran can.
Asparagus was a wild sea coast plant, and is a native of Great Britain.
The tomato is a native of South America, and takes its name from a Portuguese word.
Parsley is said to have come from Egypt, and mythology tells us it was used to adorn the head of Hercules.
Apples were brought from the East by the Romans. The crab-apple is indigenous to Great Britain.
The cantaloupe is a native of America, and so called from the name of a place near Rome where it was first cultivated in Europe.
The onion first came from India.
Cloves come to us from the Indies.

ORCHARD AND NURSERY.

Newly planted trees should be mulched with hay, straw or other litter, to enable them to recover from the effects of moving.

June is considered by many the best month for removing large limbs from old trees, but unless one has an abundance of help it is difficult to spare the time at this busy season.—Cover all cuts with shellac varnish, paint or melted grafting wax.

Grafts will need looking after, and if any shoots have started below the graft, rub them off, to prevent their robbing the cion.

Slugs on the foliage of pear, cherry, and other trees, may be destroyed by lime or wood ashes, dusted upon the leaves.

Borers may be prevented by applying a strip of heavy paper, a foot or more wide, aronnd the lower part of the trunk, so that the lower edge is an inch or so below the surface of the soil. Where they have entered the tree, a wire or whalebone may be used to probe for and kill them.

Weeds must not be allowed to grow either among the trees in the orchard, or the young seedings in the nursery, but the horse and cultivator must be kept in motion where they can be used without danger to the trees. A hoe will be needed, where the cultivator cannot go.—Agriculturist.

FOR HORSES' BACKS.

Some one gives, in the Cure, the following directions for treating a horse with a sore back: Let the sore place be bathed with warm water, not very hot; nor must the place be rubbed in the least by the cloth, but it must be dabbed, and this must be continued for an hour or two, till a white film comes over the wound, when it must be well wet with a strong solution of chloride of lime and water, and left so that it cannot be rubbed either by clothing or roller. It will got well almost immediately.—There is no cure like this. It is also an excellent plan, when the place is only small, to have a very thick saddle-cloth with a hole punched in exactly where the sore would press against the saddle. I have just tried this plan with great success.

A Health-Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulation is not only desirable, but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined with it, it becomes infinitely more efficacious as a remonant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have secured the emphatic sanction of medical men who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other disorders. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and its self possessing tonic properties of no mean order.

VALUABLE
Real Estate for Sale
—AT—
PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5 000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, tea well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 400 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence in the town of Pilot, building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 353 acres, lying on Rutledge and Reed Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a lot of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and in one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State.

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro' to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

A WOMAN'S QUESTION.

BY ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

Do you know you have asked for the costliest thing
Ever made by the hand of love—
A woman's heart and a woman's life,
And a woman's wonderful love.

Do you know you have asked for the priceless thing
As a child might ask for a toy
Demanding what others have died to win
With the reckless dash of a boy?

You have written my lesson of duty out,
Man like you have questioned me—
Now stand at the bar of my woman's soul,
Until I shall question thee.

You require your meat in due time shall always be hot,
Your socks and your shirts shall be whole,
Inquire your heart to be true as God's stars,
Out pure as Heaven your soul.

You require a cook for your mutton and beef,
I require a far better thing,
A seamstress you're wanting for stockings and shirts—
I look for a man as a king.

A king for a beautiful realm called home
And a man that maker, God,
Shall look on as he did the first,
And call it "very good."

I am fair and young, but the rose will fade
From my cheek, young cheek one day—
Will you love me then, mid the falling leaves,
As you did mid the bloom of May.

Is your heart as sweet as strong, and I dare
I may launch my all on its tide
A loving woman finds heaven or hell,
On the day she is made a bride.

I require all things but are grand and true,
All things that a man should be;
If you give this all I would stake my life,
To be all you demand of me.

If you cannot do this as a bondman or clerk
You can live with little to pay;
But a woman's heart and a woman's life
Are not to be won that way.

DENOMINATIONAL SCHOOLS

The intention of the article by "Robert" in the Advocate this week, is seemingly evident, and I think he is provoking controversy that will not benefit the intended object. If he desires it, we are quite ready for a discussion of the educational policy of the State, of what has been done, and of what is intended. To say nothing of his strange conclusions, he indirectly misstates the real question. No one proposes sectarian schools in North Carolina. I am not aware of any such Protestant schoo' of any grade in any part of the State; I do not think sectarianism ever served any one good purpose whatever.

Trinity, Davidson and Wake Forest are not sectarian colleges; they are as far from it as is the University, possibly further. The three most excellent female institutions in Raleigh, Greensboro Female College, and others are not sectarian; if I am correctly informed, while Maj. Bingham's school is very soundly Presbyterian, it is not at all sectarian. Hence the implication that the sectarian idea controls our "schools and colleges," is an error, and the denominationalism of the State will not quietly tolerate anonymous non scripters and mis statements, whose probable intention is to build up an educational influence in the State that will substitute a formal morality for a real religion. Nearly all the sound religious literary culture on earth, has come from denominational institutions. All religion is denominational, and all the achievements of christian civilization have been attained by that mode of work. The educational systems of Europe and America have their foundation and usefulness in the piety, zeal and good sense of christian denominations, working individually and making States collectively; the scientific and semi-educated infidelity of the times is due chiefly to institutions, either anti-denominational, non denominational, or mixed denominational. Education was originated by the church, pertains to the church, and must belong to it: not a work to be done by outsidors, nor an outside work to be done by church members; but a work inside and of the church. This outside work in these days is very popular: under comely names and pretences the churches are induced to aid it, and never with profit. Less than one hundred and fifty members have been received by all the churches in New York and Brooklyn from the labors of Mr. Moody; the mingled cohorts of the christian army filled the papers and the world with the noise of battle, and did nothing. It was an outside work, and was a failure. Liberalism, Free Thought, mental emancipation, and similar catch-phrases are the watch words of incipient infidelity; and a demand to be liberated from denominational constraint and dogmatism in order to secure broad culture, comprehensive wisdom and philosophic maturity, is the first note of revolt against denominations in all things, and hence against religion in toto. I have no confidence in piety that will not be long to a church, nor in evangelism that will be neither regulated nor advised, nor in morality that is not founded upon the Bible and sustained by experimental religion, nor in any man's opinion who thinks there is larger or better growth outside of the church than in it.

The brain power of Europe and America, with rare exceptions, came through colleges or universities, or both, strictly denominational. Other institutions exist, but they have accomplished little except to enable the head to find an excuse for badness of heart. Our training institutions must be denominational, not sectarian but thoroughly denominational; neither the State, nor corporations can educate without the church; colleges with the full spirit and power of denomination may safely defy competition in scholarship, progressive development, practical efficiency and reliability in all offices and duties, and in steady co operation with the mission spicit of the Gospel. In christian civilization, the church originated, founded and controlled the colleges; for seven hundred years they have been under church regulation; they have made the intelligence, art and civil power of Europe and America, and now at last, within fifty years, it has been found out, as some preposterously say, that under church control the highest development cannot be attained.—They think much religion dwarfs and narrows the mind, that denominations have become harmful. This is the latest phase of worldly impudence, the full statement that in growth and office intellect is damaged by piety.

I admit a possible improvement upon our college system, and from two Legislatures have tried to obtain it. The University of London effects for England what we want. The University of London is in effect, a Board of Regents appointed by Parliament and is non denominational.—It confers degrees upon all who can satisfactorily pass its examinations. To this Board all the dissenting (denominational) colleges, and some church colleges send their students for degrees; and now many students from Oxford and Cambridge come before it annually. The training is done denominationally, but the degrees are determined by an independent Board. This is right and precisely what we need. Give us an independent Board, let it make the standard and examine all applicants for degrees from the University, Trinity, Davidson and Wake Forest.—Then boasting will have some foundation or be at an end. If any institution cannot stand the test, let it go down with scorn; if the Regents pronounce any one better than the others, let it be acknowledged better. If the State will give us a Board of Regents, then denominationalism will show itself fully and on a fair field.

An Essay on the Nature of Sacramental Wine.

BY WM. E. H. SEARCY, O. W. P. OF GA.

"And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying: Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until that day, when I drink it new, with you, in my Father's Kingdom." Mat. xxvi. 27, 29.

The context is plain;—Christ gave his disciples a drink "of the fruit of the vine,' as a representation of his own blood of the New Testament. "which is shed for many, for the remission of sins." As to the nature of this drink, there is a contrariety of opinions some affirming one thing, and some another. In this essay, we shall combat the opinion that this product of the vine was fermented wine, and present indubitable evidence, that it was the sweet juice of the grape, in its purest condition.

I. The terms used by Christ in alluding to the drink, are sufficient to teach us that it was not fermented wine used, but the natural juice, the products of the vine. Had our Savior used the term wine, (oinos,) men, under training in certain schools, might have believed with some little show of reason, that fermented wine was meant. Since oinos, is a generic word meaning simply wine, without reference to its being fermented, or unfermented. In that case, in the absence of other facts, it would be a matter of taste, as to whether a christian would select the wine of the drunkard or the inoffensive sweet wine much in use among the peoples of that day and like wise known as wine. But Christ did not use that term, lest his supper might be perverted with with the evil leaven. He used other terms indicative of a nearer approach to the pendant fruit, terms which can not be perverted, but by the blind teachings of a wicked custom, which cloaks evil in raiments of light to deceive the children of men. A drink "of the fruit of the vine" must be the pure sweet juice, as it is pressed from the fruit. It cannot mean fermented wine, since that is something more, than the fruit of the vine—it is the product of the vine, combined with alcohol—the promoter of human woe.

If grape juice is exposed to the air for some time, it begins to rot or decompose, and in this process alcohol is formed. There is not an element of alcohol in the fruit of the vine, and it is as foreign to it and as different in its nature and effects from it, as "sulphuric acid' is, from epsom salts, which it forms by uniting with magnesia. No sane man would sell you epsom salts for sulphuric acid, because sulphuric acid was one of its component parts, nor should any same christian bring up alcohol to the altar' as an offering of the fruit of the vine, because grape juice happened to combine with an element of the air to make it.

It is plain, then, that grape juice, combined with a foreign element, with which it forms a substance differing in its nature and effects from itself, is not cannot be, the fruit of the vine. But grape juice in its pure sweet nature - in its simple original state is all of the fruit of the vine, suitable to be drank or eaten. The hull, the seed, and the pulp are cast away It suits the descriptive terms of the Savior in every particular.

II. The symbol must correspond with the thing to be represented. The blood of Christ was here represented by this drink of the fruit of the vine. The blood of Christ was pure—it was without spot or blemish. Though tempted as we are, Christ never sinned, and even in death his physical parts survived the corruptions of the grave. His every act, or thought was unpolluted by sin. Indeed He stood forth before the whole world, as the great exemplar of what he taught—purity.

His blood could not be symbolized by an impure substance; since purity and impurity are opposite terms, and have neither resemblance or correspondence. Now to the test: Fermented wine is an impure substance. Barron Van Leibig, the great modern chemist says. "Fermentation, putrefaction, and decay, are processes of decomposition.' Surely no one will be so unreasonable, as to say that a decomposing substance is a pure substance. Is it not from its very nature undergoing a process antagonistic of purity—destruction? Take the alcohol from it, which can be readily done, and the leavings will satisfy the most incredulous, that the grape juice has been destroyed. It has none of the elements for a symbol of purity, and could not, in the nature of things, symbolize Christ's blood. Indeed, it is a symbol of impurity, and is so used in Scripture.

But the juice of the grape, unfermented, is purero natural, just as God made it. It contains no other elements than those nourished by the parent vine, according to the fixed and immutable laws of nature. God is its manufacturer, and like water this drink of the vine fruit is brewed in the Brewery of Nature. Being pure, it can symbolize the pure blood that flowed on Calvary for the remission of sins. As Christ chose the drink of the fruit of the vine as this symbol, is not this drink the pure juice of the grape?

III The terms used point to the true symbol: and the symbol found agrees with the terms in every particular, and leave no grounds for cavil.

Happily for us, our religion had its anterior types. There was first, the shadow, then the substance, then the symbolic representation. In the premises, now under review, we had as an anterior type the shedding of the blood of a gentle lamb; as the substance, the shedding of the pure blood of Christ; and as the symbolic presentation, the pure juice or blood of the fruit of the vine. There is correspondence throughout.

The lamb was the gentlest and purest of all animals. Christ was the Son of the God Father clothed in the habiliments of humanity—a man without spot or blemish.

There is no product of any vegetable so sweet and refreshing, so pure and unadulterated as the juice of the fruit of the vine Search nature over for a more appropriate symbol, and none better can be found than this our Lord selected.

The natural blood of the lamb in the natural blood of the God man—the natural blood of the grape,—the pure man—the pure animal—the pure vegetable, what harmony! What concord!

IV. As further evidence, we submit that the time selected for the supper, and upon which it was held, precludes the idea that the wine used was fermented. The time was the first day of the passover, in "the first day of the feast of unleavened bread.' On this day and for 7 days following, the law of God forbade the people having leaven or ferment in their houses (Ex 12:19) and doubtless among the homes of all the faithful of God in Jerusalem, no ferment of anykind could be found. Could it be possible that he "who came not to destroy the law" should on this great day, in the face of the law, set up and institute a drink of ferment? Nay it cannot be. There is no ferment more diabolical and unclean, than that great prodncer of sin, Alcohol. There is a difference between the cup of the drunkard and the cup of the Lord, and sooner or later the christian world will find this out May God hasten the day!

As a Methodist, I submit to her ordinances in the Lord: but as a Methodist, I pray for the time "when the cup of death, no more we give."

Be Happy.

There are many people in this world who are afraid to be happy, who go moping about with the accumulated mould of sourness clinging to them so closely that nothing short of an earthquake or resurrection could shake it off, thereby denying themselves the pleasure of seeing the laugh side of nature that thrills and ripples all over, just like the sunshine. Surely there is enough joy in God's workshop to sweep out all sadness if we would but seek it. Shall I tell you when you may hope to find this antidote for sorrow? When the angels have enlarged and purified your own heart. When pain, fear, woe, anguish, hunger, thirst, has penetrated through every corner. When you have winced under the necessity of a lifetime. When you have lived long enough to detect the mockery in the key-note of living. When you depend less upon the disposition and acts of others than on your own. When the rooms in your head and heart are all rented to respectable tenants. Whose articles of agreement will be to keep the furniture and drapery in repair, and whose lease will only expire with life. When forgetfulness, envy, malice, hatred and all the catalogue of deadly sins will be rare visitors instead of fixture. When love, joy, hope, care, thoughtfulness, and above all charity, have taken possession and will thus secure to you the full and unabridged edition of happiness in this world as well as in world No. 2, and will open up a thousand avenues—a thousand outlets toward God's suffering children, and the poor, whom ye have always with you.—Ruth the Gleaner.

One Name.

The winsomeness and wholesomeness of the society of the good has been the theme of many essay, story and song. But there is only one name that carries all the potency and charm of this influence; that name breathed in the deep tenderness of a soul looking into heaven for immortal blessedness, and the strong earnestness of a soul wedded to duty for time and eternity, becomes the key of earthly hope, and the vision of eternal glory. All else will fail—much of it has already failed—this is Christ in you the hope of glory You need better friendship and loftier examples. Mortality and mutability weaken the power of all that you have. Trust not in uncertain riches of friendship, and remember that the choicest treasures of human love cannot buy off the King of Terrors. A Christ within you is the sure pledge of an endless life. The victories that amuse you now are a child's game with a child's toys; the victory that beats life and death in one last conflict come only to those who have put on Christ. The "inward man, renewed day by day," this "house which is from heaven," this "portion forever," all are represented in the one Name. Who syllables another? To whom shall we go if his do not inspire us with confidence? Death will only run us in the race of life; we shall surely be whipped in the end of every battle; but all defeats may be turned into one victory of faith and love and life by Him who builds upward and climbs on these invisible ladders into the skies.—Methodist.

A Delusion.—A young man who thinks that he can lead a reckless and profligate life until he becomes a middle aged man, and then repent and make a good and steady citizen, is deluded by the devil. He thinks that people are all fools destitute of memory. He concludes that when he repents everybody will forget that he was a dissipated wretch. This is not the case, people remember your bad deeds and forget your good ones.—Besides, it is no easy thing to break up, in middle age, bad habits that have been formed in youth. When a horse contracts the habit of baulking, he generally retains it through life.—He will often perform well enough until the wheel gets into a deep hole, and then he stops and holds back.—Just so it is with the boys who contract bad habits. They will some times leave off their bad tricks, and do well enough until they get into a tight place, and then they return to the old habit. Of those boys who contract the bad habit of drunkenness, not one in every hundred dies a sober man. The only way to break up a bad habit is never to contract it. The only way to prevent drunkenness is never to drink.

Fire-Cracker Patriotism.

We have no objection to the reading of the Declaration of Independence and the delivery of orations two hours long on a hot Fourth of July Such manner of celebration we favor for older people. But do not think that all your preaching about the grave and more serious modes of keeping our national anniversary is going to hinder us boys from having a good time in our own way. What we want is noise, and plenty of it, be ginning at five o'clock in the morning of the glorious Fourth, and ending at ten o'clock at night. It is preposterous, the lecturing which crusty old patriots are continually giving us on the subject of noise They have for the world, and now they would deny us the luxury of a day's racket. Tell us, you old fogies, in what way your great, long Fourth of July oration is better than our fire cracker? We protest that our mode is more satisfactory than yours. We light our punk, and disentangle our fire cracker from the general pack, and, touching the exploding to the explosive, in an instant there is glorious slam-bang that makes us all shout. But your orator is a fire cracker which you can hardly get touched off. You sit for an hour waiting and watching for the explosion of patriotism or wit, and probably there is no snap about the whole proceeding, and your great, long, patriotic fire-cracker is nothing but a fizzle after all. If one of ours fails us we try another and another, and we soon get what we want. Give us boys our annual racket. If you do not like our way, neither do we like yours. Old John Adams gave us permission to make all the noise we want to on the Fourth of July, and we hereby declare our fondness for din, uproar, and resonance. All boys have certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and racket, and for the defence of this we pledge our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

We rejoice in fire crackers, for they are the democracy of explosive material. Your blue lights and serpentine wheels and sky rockets cost considerable sums of money, but we can all get hold of some fire crackers. Your great cannon, that roar over the hills, suggest destruction and death, but fire-crackers mean nothing but fun and frolic. One of the them flung sputtering into the air will fill twenty boys, from cap to shoe, with unadulterated glee. And when a whole pack of these combustibles is adroitly set off together, they make a riot of satisfaction. And when three or four packs, regardless of expense, are put in a barred or box and ignited, it makes the climax of boyish jubilation, and we give "three times three" for everything. We hereby expose the heterodoxy of those who do not like fire crackers. Extinguish this annual ignition, and what will the Fathers of the Revolution say about it? If they speak at all, under their shock of amazement they will come out on the top of Bunker Hill, on the unfinished monument at Washington, and say: "Ye unworthy descendants of a brave ancestry, what means this silence and dereliction? Where are the boys? Alas! for this national apostacy."

Let our fathers and mothers, therefore, buy us at least four packs of fire crackers each, and a piece of punk about two feet long; and if they cannot stand the racket, retire to the back room, put cotton in their ears; shut down the windows, and give us uninterrupted swing, we as well as they will be dead before the next national Centennial. We will be still enough then!—Dr. Talmage.

A Centennial Sight.

I saw this afternoon, on a horse car on Chestnut street, a curious medley of nationalities. There were two delicate Spaniards, wrapped in long cloaks, such as one sees in Madrid and Valencia. These Spanish exotics were ranged on each side of a blonde and burly German who refused to understand their hints to change his seat and allow them to sit together. On the same side of the car were two young Swedes, dressed in fishermen's with green collars, which the Germans and Scandinavians so universally adopt when they go abroad. These rosy and healthy sons of the North talked in loud voices, as also did the Spaniards, and were naturally the observed of all observers. Beyond the Swedes sat an English youth, of downy chin, faultless umbrella, and sixteen shilling trousers, In the corner was a darky, rolling his eyes, and opening his thick lips with wonder as he heard the Babel chorus; and opposite him sat an old Irishwoman with a market basket. This added to the Americans crowding the remainder of the seats and the aisle, made a good variety, which I have not exaggerated in the slightest particular.—Philadelphia Correspondence of Boston Journal.

Nearly one million persons had visited the Centennial Exhibition before June 23d.

Religion.

Religion is associated in the minds of the young, the thoughtless, the uniniated, with all that is gloomy, forbidding and repulsive. It is regarded as a good theme for old men the vigor of whose life is gone, or for sick men just ready to cross over Jordan. It will do for funerals, but has nothing to do with feasts. It will answer for the melancholy, but not for the mirthful. This is the popular idea of religion.

But this idea is false in every particular, and is contradicted both by the genius of religion itself and the testimony of all its professors. Religion forbids no pleasures that are not sinful; and pleasures that are sinful can do nobody any good, and nobody knows this better than the sinner himself. Some churches, we admit, have narrow views of these matters, and may be disposed to prohibit some amusements that are in themselves sinless. But religion itself in terdicts nothing but sin. And the interdiction of sin would tend to the happiness of every human being. And a Christian, free from the power and the penalty of sin, whether he belongs to a church or not, and we believe that there are multitudes of such out of the churches as well as in them all, ought to be the happiest, liveliest, and most jubilant of men. Those morose and sour professors whose faces are as long as horses' faces, who go with their heads bowed down like bulrushes, who are as afraid of a laugh as they would be of a pestilence, are not made so by religion, but by the lack of it. It is not its superabundance, but its deficiency, that develops such characters as these.

But a man whose peace is made with God, who has a conscience void of offense, who is not afraid to die, who will knowingly do no man a wrong, who can live unseduced within arm's length of what is not his own with nothing between his desire and its gratification but the invisible law of rectitude—such a man can enjoy all that is innocent in the pleasures of life, while his assurance of the life that is to come gives him a peace of mind, undisturbed by adverse circumstances, of which irreligions men know nothing. "I should want," says John Angel James, "an angel's harp to sing the honors of such a man: a man who can look down upon all the earthborn and earth devoted geninses of fame as immeasurably below him, in whatever department of action they may labor or to whatever altitude of renown they may rise."—Weekly Rescue.

Sunstroke and how to Treat it.

The report of the Sanitary Committee of the New York Board of Health upon sunstroke says: Sunstroke is caused by excessive heat, and especially if the weather is "muggy." It is more apt to occur on the second, third, or fourth day of a heated term than on the first. Loss of sleep, worry, excitement, close sleeping rooms, debility, and abuse of stimulants predispose. It is much more apt to at tack those working in the sun, and especially between the hours of 11 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. On hot days wear thin clothing. Have as cool sleeping rooms as possible. Avoid loss of sleep and all unnecessary fatigue. If working in doors and where there is artificial heat, see that the room is well ventilated.

If working in the sun wear a light hat (not black, as it absorbs heat) and put inside of it on the head a wet cloth or a large green leaf; frequently lift the hat from the head and see that the cloth is wet. Do not check perspiration, but drink what water you need to keep it up, as perspiration prevents the body from being overheated. Have wherever possible an additional shade, as a thin umbrella, when walking, a canvas or board covering when working in the sun. When much fatigued do not go to work, or be excused from work, especially after 11 o'clock in the morning on very hot days, especially if the work is in the sun. If a feeling of fatigue, dizziness, headache, or exhaustion occurs, cease work immediately, lie down in a shady or cool place, apply cold cloths to and pour cold water over head and neck. If any one is overcome by the heat give the person cool drinks of water, or cold black tea or cold coffee, if able to swallow. If the skin is hot and dry, sponge with or pour cold water over the body and limbs, and apply to the head pounded ice wrapped in a towel or other cloth. If there be no ice at hand keep a cold cloth on the head, and pour cold water on it as well as on the body.

If the person is pale, very faint and the pulse feeble, let him inhale ammonia for a few seconds, or give him a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia (hartshorn) in two tablespoonfuls of water with a little sugar.

Stories of the Wonderful.

A REMARKABLE DREAM—RELATED BY SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Mr. Rutherford, of Bowland, a gentleman of landed property in the vale of Gala, was prosecuted for a very considerable sum, the accumulated arrears of teinds or tithes, for which he was said to be indebted to a noble family. Mr. Rutherford was strongly impressed with the belief that his father had, by a form of process peculiar to the law of Scotland, purchased these teinds from the proprietor, and therefore that the present prosecution was groundless. But after an industrious search among his father's papers, an investigation among the public records and a careful inquiry among all persons who had transacted law business for his father, no evidence could be recovered to support his defense. The period was now near at hand when he conceived the loss of his lawsuit to be inevitable, and he had formed the determination to ride to Edinburgh next day and make the best bargain he could in the way of compromise. He went to bed with this resolution, and with all the circumstances of the case floating upon his mind, had a dream to the following purpose: His father, who had been many years dead, appeared to him, he thought, and asked him why he was disturbed in his mind. In dreams men are not surprised at such apparitions. Mr Rutherford thought that he informed his father of the cause of his distress, adding that the payment of a considerable sum of money was the more unpleasant to him because he had a strong consciousness that it was not due, though he was unable to recover any evidence in support of his belief. "If I are right, my son," replied the supernal shade, "I did acquire the right to those teinds, for payment of which you are now prosecuted. The papers relating to the transaction are in the hands of Mr. — —, a writer or attorney, who is now retired from professional business and resides at Inveresk, near Edinburgh. He was a person whom I employed on that occasion for a particular reason, but who never on any other occasion transacted business on my account. It is very possible," pursued the vision, "that Mr —— may have forgotten a matter which is now of a very old date, but you may call it to his recollection by this token, that when I came to pay his account, there was difficulty in getting change for a Portugal piece of gold, and we were forced to drink out the balance at a tavern."

Mr. Rutherford awoke in the morning with all the words of the vision imprinted on the mind, and thought it worth while to walk across the country to Inveresk, instead of going straight to Edinburgh. When he came there, he waited on the gentleman mentioned in the dream, a very old man. Without saying anything of the vision, he inquired whether he ever remembered having conducted such a matter for his deceased father. The old gentleman could not at first bring the circumstances to his recollection, but on mention of the Portugal piece of gold, the whole returned upon his memory. He made an immediate search for the papers, and recovered them, so that Mr. Rutherford carried to Edinburgh the documents necessary to gain the cause which he was on the verge of losing.

This remarkable circumstance was attended with bad consequences to Mr. Rutherford, whose health and spirits were afterward impaired by the attention which he thought himself obliged to pay to the visions of the night.

Potatoes from Seed.—How many years does it take potatoes to mature from the seed? The first year the seeds produce many very small potatoes, which are planted the second year, as other potatoes are. The second crop may be called mature, though it requires a third and even a fourth to determine their qualities as to size, flavor, etc. The balls are usually kept in a warm room or cellar till toward spring, when they are washed out, dried, and at proper time sowed in drills half an inch deep and treated as other plants. They can be transplanted or left to grow in the original bed. If your seeds were properly kept through the winter there is no reason why they should not grow, unless they were immature when gathered In attempting to raise seedlings, care must be taken to keep the tubers separate, as hardly two kinds will be alike. If earliness is sought for, take those whose tops die first. Different varieties are produced by shaking the pollen from the flowers of one kind on the pistils of another kind - hybridizing.

We cannot live on probabilities. The faith in which we can live bravely and die in peace must be a certainty, so far as it professes to be a faith at all, or it is nothing.—Froude.

The Old Testament: Its Literary and Historic Value.

There is one book comprising some of the choicest lessons in history and some of the finest passages in poetry ever written which even in a somewhat faulty translation beam forth with a light of almost unsurpassed power; I mean of course the collection of writings known as the Old Testament. Its poetry was always recognized and felt, its history has in the last years received a greatly heightened interest by the discoveries of a connected history and literature of the ancient seats of Palestine—that is, of Egypt and Assyria. The English version of these writings, though not always accurate, is yet in itself of the highest classic value as an English standard work; its language can hardly ever be incorrect, for it, so to say, made the English language; and when King James ordered its publication he might have said with truth of himself as to English what the German Emperor, Sigismund, King of the Romans, vainly thought of himself as to Latin; "I do not care for English grammar, for I am the King of the English." Many lessons, therefore, both literary and historical, might be taken from King James' Old Testament, many that would be useful to the learner in more than one respect to the last day of her life; but wherever female high schools are supported by state or municipal taxation, offens may be easily taken at the use of a book, by the unbelieving if it be treated as bearing the impress of divine truth, by the believing if it be treated as on a level with the mythic histories and heathen lyrics of Greece. Wherever it can be done without provoking strife, girls should be shown the beauties of the Psalms, of Job, of the prophets. It is a poetry which, like Mozart's provos itself truly classic by pleasing the more, the longer, and the more fully it is known.—From July "Home and School." Louisville, Ky.

Scientific.

The London Lancet directs attention to the great value of chloride of lead as a deodorizer. It is prepared by dissolving half a drachm of nitrate of lead in a pint or more of boiling water, and pouring the solution into a bucket of water in which two drachms of chloride of sodium have been dissolved. When the sediment has subsided, the clear supernatant fluid is a saturated solution of chloride of lead. A cloth dipped in this solution, and hung up in a room, will instantly sweeten a fetid atmosphere; or, if the solution be thrown down a sink, water closet or over a heap of dung or refuse, a like result will ensure.

Rev. Geo. Meares Drought writes to the London Times from Ireland: "For three years I have lived in a town, and during that time my sitting-room has been free from flies—three or four walking about my breakfast table—while all my neighbors' rooms were crowded. I often congratulated myself on my escape, but never knew the reason of it until two days ago. I then had occasion to move my things to another house, I remaining on for two days longer. Among other other things moved were two boxes of geraniums and calceolorias, which always stood in my windows, the windows being always open to the full extent, top and bottom. The boxes were not gone half an hour before my room was full of flies as all those around me, and I am now writing at my breakfast table with twelve dead bodies in the slop basin, and everything on the table crowding with fresh arrivals. This, to me, is a new discovery, and perhaps it may serve to encourage others in that which is always a source of pleasure, and now proves also to be a source of comfort—window gardening."

In a communication to the French Academy of Sciences M. Bergeret points out the influence of the sulphates in the production of goiter. He states that before the year 1836 all the inhabitants of Saxony in the Valois were either goitrous or, cretins. They then drank water derived from a bank of gysum, which on analysis was found to furnish one grain of sulphate of lime per liter, besides some sulphate of magnesia. But in 1835 the potable water was derived from a spot situated far above the bank of plaster; and since then, according to M Bergeret, goiter has much diminished, the children are no longer subject to it, and before long the disease will probably have disappeared. He also makes the somewhat singular statement that, under the conditions of excessive work, a man has circulating in his blood an abnormal amount of sulphates, absolutely the same as if he had drank water loaded with gypsum; in support of which statement he cites various experiments, which appear to leave no doubt as to its correctness.

Bishop Ames, of the M. E. Church, recently celebrated his seventieth birthday.

The new church at Zion, on Dysartsville circuit, will be dedicated on the 6th of August, by Rev. Wm. M. Robey, of Lenoir.

We have on hand for publication a report of the proceedings of Washington District Conference, from the Secretary. It will appear in our next issue.

A New Daily.—On the 26th the Franklin Courier will issue as a morning daily, and so continue during the session of the District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which is to be held in Louisburg. It will contain a full report of each day's proceedings of the conference, and also fresh and spicy editorials and the current news of the day. Subscription price only 20 cents

We urge all whose subscriptions have expired or are about to expire to renew promptly by sending the subscription price to us at once, or handing to their pastors. Our expenses are large and bills must be met with the cash when due.

We are glad to see that Gen. Hawley has announced the decision of the managers that the Centennial Exposition will be closed on Sundays and that no visitors will be received on that day. This is a concession to the religious ideas of people who demand that the Lord's day shall not be violated in order to exhibit to the world what progress we and the other nations have made in civilization, arts and science.

Rev. Alfred J. Morrison, a young and talented Presbyterian minister of Lincoln county, died in Memphis, Tenn., of fever, on the 6th inst. He was more than ordinarily gifted and commenced political life a few years ago with great promise of distinction. He resigned his seat in the Legislature to enter upon the study for the ministry, at a time when he was receiving the applause of his colleagues and constituency for industry, fidelity and the display of talent. He was the brother of Mrs. Stonewall Jackson.

Dr. Haygood's New Book.

Dr. Summers in the Nashville Advocate of July 8th, gives the following very just and complimentary notice of Dr. Haygood's new book, which we take pleasure in transferring into the columns of our paper. As heretofore stated, we are the agents for the book in North Carolina. Thus far we have had encouraging success in the sale of the book, and it meets with universal favor wherever it is read. Dr. Haygood writes us that the first edition is exhausted and that the second edition will be out in about three weeks. This, of itself, is a high compliment to the gifted author and a practical endorsement of the book — With Dr. Summers we believe "it would be a godsend to the country if a copy of this book were put into every house in our land, and blessed would be the result if everybody would read it." Send in your orders at once. Agents wishing to canvass our large towns and cities will find it to their interest to correspond with the editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, or with Dr. Haygood, Oxford, Ga. Read what Dr. Summers has to say of the publication:

"From an intimacy of several years with the gifted author of this work, and from numerous conversations with him on the subjects here discussed, we anticipated no little satisfaction in its perusal; and we have not been disappointed. We heartily indorse all that it contains. We commend it as the best treatise of the kind of which we have any knowledge. It is written in a racy, vigorous, popular style. It is divided into two parts—I. The Family—in which every phase of family religion is presented; and II. The Sunday-school—in which that institution is discussed in regard to all its great salient features, as an organic department of the Church—an auxiliary to family religion and the ministry of the word, and not a substitute for either. The charm of the book consists not only in the lively style of the author, but in the affluence of illustrations, anecdotes, and extracts, with which it is enriched. We have noted a number of passages for quotation, but have not room for them in this issue. It would be a godsend to the country if a copy of this book were put into every house in our land, and blessed would be the result if everybody would read it. It is gracefully dedicated, "To my mother and the memory of my father." And well it might be, for without such a parentage the author would never have been the Rev. Dr. Haygood that he is! We knew his father a quarter of a century ago—he was the noble sire of a worthy son, who shared also in the pious care and nurture of a wise and godly mother. The work is introduced to the reader by an Introduction from the pen of the author's venerable mentor, the patriarchal Lovick Pierce—it is in the Doctor's characteristic vein. We besbeak and predict for this book a very wide circulation North and South."

A Word of Counsel.

Under the above caption we find the following timely article bearing directly upon the present political campaign, in the Methodist Advocate, a paper published at Atlanta, Ga., in the interest of the Northern Methodists. The editor is understood to be a Republican in politics but this article is free from political bias and is applicable alike to all parties. If the people will heed the advice given the country will be saved from great evils and political demagogues will soon find no place among us as a nation:

"The Presidential campaign is opened. The candidates for this high office are before the people. Now is the time for a word of counsel to professed Christians of both parties and all Churches. We do not propose to direct any as to how they ought to vote or what platform to sustain. Of these things all must judge for themselves and act the part of American citizens and Christian men. The duty to do this is evident, and no man is worthy to be intrusted with the responsibility of the ballot who will not inform himself of the main principles at issue and judge prudently and act thoughtfully, conscientiously, as in the sight of God.

A political canvass is not necessarily corrupting. If it has that tendency it is because of the deceit, lying and corruption of bad men. There ought to be the same adherence to right principles in politics as in other matters. Wrong and wickedness in these things are as offensive to God as in any affairs. Men who are otherwise good, but unscrupulous and mean in politics are sinners, and sometimes the worst of sinners, against society.

Differences of opinion exist among men. Some favor one course, some another. Some will vote this ticket, some that, but all may be honest, charitable and Christian. This is the point which we are trying to impress. If discussions occur, they should be conducted in candor and kindness especially among neighbors and Christian brethren. Better not argue than become angry with a friend. Two rules may be laid down which form a safe guide in all such cases. The first is: one should never do any thing which would make him ashamed of himself. If our conscience condemn us not, then we have boldness toward God and man. The other is: Do nothing upon which we can not ask the Divine blessing. Our political reading and thinking and talking and acting should be of such a character that we can devoutly ask Divine aid and guidance therein. Christians have no more right to backslide during a political campaign than at any other time. To prevent doing so, they should heed the words of Jesus: "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation."

Beware of two things: First, of political liars. There are men otherwise honorable and worthy of esteem who in politics have no more regard for truth than Turks or Hottentots. Many expect to carry party measures by pure, unmitigated, unscrupulous and outrageous lying. They run from truth like mad dogs from water. It is death to them. There are also political papers so utterly depraved that if they were used in a butcher's stall in wrapping up dog-meat, they would spoil the meat if not also the dogs that ate it. Such are imps of the pit of darkness and agents of Satan. Keep clear of them. Seek to know the truth from reliable sources. If any one has common sense, these are times to use it. The only safe course for those who have not this invaluable qualification is to keep clear of politics altogether, lest they become the tools of designing men and be made instruments of wrong. "Quit you like men" in the fear of the Lord.

Beware of whisky. This is the demon of our nation, of our times, and especially in politics. Thousands of good men will be made drunkards and lost in perdition through the agency of the flow of whisky during the campaign. This is a probability too fearful to contemplate. Beware of whisky. One of the most painful, disgusting and infernal tricks in politics which we ever knew occurred in this city recently. The candidates for nomination were prominent members in the two leading evangelical denominations in the State, but the grog shops of the city were opened and advertised free to ticket-holders by the friends of each and the town was made fool drunk. It was a burning shame to Atlanta. Christians indeed! There are thousands of heathen who are not low enough to do such a thing. Christians making their neighbors drunk for votes! How can Christian men do that? Beware of whisky!

The campaign is upon us. Let us fear God, obey his precepts, and live in constant fellowship with him and at the same time do our duty as citizens.

A word to the Churches. More than ever we should pray and work for revivals. They are needed especially this year. Prayer-meetings should be kept up, and class-meetings held every Sunday in the country Churches. The Sabbath-school should be reinforced and sustained with double energy and camp meetings be held every-where that it is practicable to do so. This is the year of trials. The powers of darkness will break in like a flood, but our Shepherd is the Almighty, able, willing, watching to guard and save from sin and folly those who trust in him.

To all of the followers of Christ of each and all the Churches, whether Republican or Democrat in politics, we say, Be strong in the Lord, watch unto prayer, live purely, lovingly, with those from whom you may chance to differ in opinion, and you may pass through the campaign without spot or wrinkle though surrounded with the snares of Satan and the devices of wicked men. Act like Christians, whatever the cost. By saving yourselves from sin you will help to preserve the nation from corruption. Will preachers and people do their duty this year?

Bro. Bobbitt: Please let me correct myself with reference to the camp-meeting notice. The one at Hatteras inlet will take place on the 25th July, and the one published to have taken place at Kennakeet, is removed to Chickimacomico, 40 miles north of the inlet. I hope yourself, with other preachers, will come to help us; for the camp grounds are both situated on the sound side of the banks, yet open to the sea shore, and not over ½ mile distant, and Mr. Stow's new, fast sailing boat, Dexter, which can accommodate 40 or 50 persons comfortably, with a nice cabin for the ladies, will take the preachers and their wives starting from Beaufort on Tuesday the 25th. I think those brethren who may come, will enjoy their visit to the seashore, and have an opportunity to do good.

I am also glad to say to the lovers of Zion that God has revived his work on Hatteras. We held a meeting at Kennakeet of ten days and had 24 happy converts, and 6 others at other places;—to God be all the glory!

Yours truly,

Ritualistic Communion Illustrated.—A correspondent writes as follows to a Church of England paper. "An eye witness, describing the mode of celebrating the Eucharist in the church which she attended, asserts that the vicar 'licked the cup all round the outside' after the service. You will agree with her remark that it was 'disgusting;' and you will not wonder at the observation made by a medical man in my own neighborhood, to whom I related the circumstance: 'I should have had no hesitation in signing a paper to certify that that clergyman was insane.'"

Fortune's Freaks.

Postmaster General Jewell recently spoke most feelingly to a lady who applied to him for a clerkship. She is the daughter of a member of the Cabinet under a former Administration, a gentleman of large means who lived in great state in Washington, and subsequently was Minister to one of the most important courts of Europe, where also he maintained an extensive estsblishment, as his great wealth justified him in doing. That was a score of years ago. The war so greatly reduced his fortune that his children are now compelled to labor for their own support. When Postmaster-General Jewell had respectfully listened to the lad's application he said, in tones of deep sympathy: "It makes me sad for you to ask this of me. Twenty years ago, when I was a mechanic, I was in—and your father was Minister there. I desired to call on him, but doubted the propriety of my doing so under the circumstances. Now you, his daughter, come to me to ask a $900 appointment. How do I know but what in twenty years my daughter may be compelled to ask a similar favor of one of my successors."—Detroit Free Press.

During one week Mrs. A. T. Stewart gave to fifty different benevolent societies and institutions in New York city sums varying from $500 to $2,500 each, aggregating $74,500.

Newbern District Conference.

The Conference was held in Kinston, beginning 14th June, and continued its business session four days. There was an average attendance of clerical and lay members.

The whole session was characterized by cheerful hard work, good order, christian courtesy, and harmony, bating one or two slight ripples, the result of excessive sensitiveness. All the interests of the work was carefully considered, the members manifesting usual earnestness and anxiety for the prosperity of every department of the church.

Reports from the different charges showed a general healthy spiritual condition of the District; while some of the charges had been blessed with deep and far reaching revivals of religion, with many and valuable additions to the membership. I think the additions to the membership, up to date, show a larger per cent than the general average of the whole Conference at its last session in Wilmington.

The report on finances showed a great deficiency, but all were hopeful of success ultimately.

One of the worst forms of evil, (because infidelic) which opposes "christianity in earnest," at some points in this District, is Universalism. The Conference incidentally discussed the propriety of our members attending the preaching of this doctrine, and entered its emphatic disapproval of such practice. Worldly amusements generally, and dancing particularly, received that attention which its character, as one of the most destructive practices to all vital godliness, demands; and the manifest determination of all the preachers is kindly, but rigidly, to enforce the Discipline against those who engage therein.

Special prominence was given to the baptism of children, and it was

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Conference that the children of the church should be baptized in public, for the sake of the moral effect of the example. The reports showed a large increase on some charges, of infants baptized, and one pastor reported that, by request, he had baptized all the children of a Baptist family.

Is it not a hopeful sign of the times, that even they are beginning to adopt this apostolic practice? If all the christian churches would only practically recognize the rights of children in the church, what a grand impetus would thus be given to the cause of the Master!

Special stress was laid upon the time to be given Sunday school exercises, and it was almost unanimously agreed that one hour should be the limit.

The following action was had in regard to the Literature of the Church:

Whereas, A church paper published in our midst, and in our interest, is a necessity to our people; therefore,

Resolved, That we will make renewed efforts to circulate the Raleigh Christian Advocate within the bounds of this District.

The following action was also had, which may be of general importance, and hence I publish it:

Whereas, The practice prevails to a large extent upon this District, of preachers and delegates coming in two or three days after the session commences; and this is regarded as having a damaging influence upon the work, and the efficiency of the District Conference, therefore,

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this District Conference, that the practice is highly censurable, and cannot be longer tolerated.

The attendance of visitors was unusually good all the while.

Upon the whole, I think this was one of the most enjoyable and profitable District Conferences we have ever had.

I doubt if Methodism ever made a better and more lasting impression upon the public mind in that community.

Frank H. Wood, Sec'y.

Responses of th Children.

Dear Brother Bobbitt: I am so happy in being able to say to you that the dear little children of our country are responding to my call in the Advocate. Already have I received 28 letters from the sweet little creatures, bearing the amount of 10 and 25 cents, to aid in building our college house. I have laid each letter before the Lord and humbly prayed God's blessings upon each little donor by name. I have recorded each name and amount given in the College-book, and filed all the letters where they can be seen and read at any time. At some future time I may publish these letters and names in a little book.

It will be a remarkable affair, if after I have applied in vain to all the people and churches of our land, travelled over the Northern cities begging means to build our college, the dear little ones at home among us should do it! I believe they will do it, and I want it to be so. If they do complete the building, the fact shall in some way be incorporated with the name of the college by the next Legislature of N. C.

Thank God for dear little children! The Bible says: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise."

The ages of these little donors are from 4 to 10 years.

Yours truly,
R. L. Abernethy.

Wilson College.

Messrs Editors: It was my privilege to attend the commencement exercises of Wilson College during the last week in June. While all the exercises were interesting and quite creditable to the Institution, I was specially pleased with the Literary address of Col W. F Green, of Franklin. His subject was Truth, and the main design of his address was to show the perfect harmony between elevated and scientific truth. In pursuance of this design, he showed that, while the Bible does not professedly and dogmatically teach science, yet its incidental giving forth of profound scientific truth constitutes a very strong proof of its divinity. That these casual, but not very accurate, scientific deliverances attest very clearly the fact that the Hand that wrote the volume of nature indited also the Book of Revelation. His exegesis and scientific illustration of some obscure passages of the Old Testament were exceedingly interesting and instructive. One could feel his faith in the divine origin of the Bible and in the wisdom and goodness of the Creator grow and strengthen as the beautiful and exact harmony between the teaching of these two systems was more apparent. The perfect unity of this two—one picture of the Divine mind was seen in striking outline under the exquisite teaching of his skillful hand. The address not only indicated superior culture and rare literary taste, but its lighter and more practical parts were spiced with numerous hits and rallies of wit that "brought down the house."

At its conclusion, Judge Biggs, President of the Board of Trustees, publicly paid the Colonel a handsome and well deserved compliment. There was a general desire for its publication, in which wish the writer joined. But, as this will probably be denied the public, I trust that other literary institutions of the State will avail themselves of Col. Green's services and have him repeat it.

Fraternally yours,
Jno R. Brooks.

Freedom to Worship God An Eloquent Voice.

The patriot Castelar has again spoken boldly and eloquently in the Spanish Cortes. The subject before the body was the adoption in the Constitution of an article on religious toleration. There was a great and brilliant audience. The distinguished patriot and advocate of religious liberty was inimitable in utterances which electrified the entire assembly, and which, in despite the opposition of the Roman Catholic deputies, elicited outbursts of applause, and carried the question. He said:

I see honored statesmen around me who wish to bind the consciences of their subjects by the power and force of the State. What, brother deputies! if the State tells you what is the true, what the false religion, would you believe it? If you do, if you will vote for a religious unity of coercion, why, you are voting that the power of human law shall be paramount and tyranize over the divine and moral powers of the human soul. Conscience is uncoercible, is inviolate, you may persuade, but never can you coerce it by force. No, deputies, you know you cannot. You can move it by inspiring it with a new idea; you cannot move it by a mandate. The persecutor gets his way outwardly, but he does not in reality; outward obedience and assent is all he can obtain: and is such a victory to be called a triumph?

Sirs, I charge no one with desiring to bring back the cursed age of torments, the horrors of the inquisition, the street and altar smeared with innocent blood; nay! but, sirs, I charge you with trying to coerce men to be hopocrites and liars from fear—fear lest their rights of citizenship be taken from them; fear lest when dead their bones should rot on some dung hill, or in the Campo. You say, "The State undertakes to support the Roman Catholic religion and its ministers." Well, I give that creed its due honor; I own its beauty, and its force, and its antiquity. And you say, "This is the true religion." Sirs, are you so gross as to say, "This is true," because it is imposed by human law and force of arms! Nay, you will surely say, "This is true" because it recommends itself to your heart and conscience as the true one; and if so, why do you want a human law to force you to follow that which your conscience tells you is true? Are you afraid of a revival? Sirs, you do an honor to Protestantism if you think it so true as to be able, in a fair race, to outrun Roman Catholicism. But if it be not true, brother deputies, what then? Magna est veritas et prevalebit. If the Roman Catholic creed be true, it will prevail by force of truth: if Protestantism be true it will prevail, and you cannot crush it. If this liberty of conscience be of God, you cannot—if of man, you need not—crush it.

Col. Jno. A. McDonald having been the first original Hayes man in the State, it was expected by his friends that he would receive the nomination for elector of this Congressional District. It was an honor due him, perhaps, in view of his advocacy of Gov. Hayes' nomination and his influence in Chatham county especially, but the Republican Convention saw fit to award the place to another.

The Church of England is making arrangements to send a missionary expedition to Lake Nyassa, similar to the Scottish mission expedition now at the lake. A boat for the navigation of the lake is partly built, and a medical missionary and some mechanics have been engaged. The entire amount of money needed for the expedition has not yet been subscribed.

The Southern Churchman says: "If Episcopal churches cannot be built, and supplied when built, except we have horse races, balls, and theatres, then we devoutly hope that all such churches will be swallowed up by earthquakes."

At the first anniversary of the Metropolitan Lay Mission, held at City Road chapel, London, the reports showed thirty-six paid and five hundred voluntary agents at work under the auspices of this mission.

The Canada Christian Advocate reports that a number of the missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada are generally in a prosperous state. Most of the stations report an increase of members, but many a financial falling off.

As the native church develops into strength the foreign missionaries become superintendents, rather than pastors. Thus in the Church Missionary districts of Tinnevelly, India, Dr. Sargent has twenty-four and Mr. Dibb twelve native pastors working under him.

Lieut. Cameron, who has recently returned from his trip across the continent of Africa, speaks of the natural wealth of the country west of the great interior lakes. He believes that this region will become a center of civilization and productive trade. It is, therefore, all the more desirable that Christianity should be early in the field.

Rev. Green Clay Smith, Prohibition Candidate for President, is a Baptist minister of Kentucky. He was born at Richmond, Ky., July 2 1854, and is a nephew of Cassius M. Clay. He graduated at Transylvania University, and read law in the office of Chief-justice Marshall.

Methodist Fraternity.—The Rev. Dr. J. A. Duncan, of the Southern Methodist Church, preached the morning sermon at Round Lake camp-meeting, New York, on Sunday before last, the subject being a life devoted not to self, but to God. The New York Herald in reporting the sermon says:

"In developing the points of his discourse a wealth of illustration was used, oftentimes of a most eloquent character, bringing tears to the eyes of his auditors, and expressions of praise to their lips."

This meeting, reported in the Christian Advocate of last week, closed on Monday, July 3. Bishop Janes presided during the first week, and Bishops Simpsons and Foster during the latter week. Bishop Peck was also present. Drs Duncan, McFerrin, Poisal, and Clarke, of the M. E. Church, South, and Mr. Ware, Agent of Randolph Macon College, were among the Southern ministers who efficiently aided in the services.

Step by Step.—Ministers of the gospel, laymen and the religious press, all combined, are striking many and heavy blows at the great sins, and the little ones are left alone, untouched, while those upon whom they rest are in the most danger.

But few men ever jump from the second floor to the first when there is a stairway. The reason is obvious: he fears that such a leap would be fatal—he sees the end, and knows that it would be pain. But he can walk down, step by step, unhurt—Men are not so free to indulge in what we call great sins, because well they see the end, yea, they feel it. But then they can indulge in the so-called little sins, and the end is not so vividly present to them; and thus thousands are going to torment and eternal damnation—step by step.

Let Christian effort give attention to this matter, and may be we can awaken some from this sleep ere they reach the bottom steps of woe.—Ernest.

The Lord will Provide.—Whether he be a prophet beside the brook, or a raven who brings the prophet his daily bread; whether they be a million of pilgrims spending forty years in the desert, or those lilies on the mountain side, God feeds his servants and clothes them; and while they today are doing his work, he is taking care for their morrow.

He that hath given thee his Son, what can he deny? He that hath given thee an ocean will not deny thee a drop! If thou hast the kernel thou shalt not want the shell! If thy Father vouchsafe thee bread, manna, the ring, a kiss—he cannot well refuse thee the husks! Seek first the kingdom of God, and all these shall be added be cast in as paper and packthread to the bargain.

Annual catalogue and announcement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md. Session 1875-76, Peters & Sons, Publishers.

Catalogue of the Officers and Students of Greensboro Female College, for the collegiate year 1875-76. Printed at Patriot office.

This is a neatly arranged and published catalogue, containing the names of the officers, trustees teachers and scholars of the College, the courses of study, charges for tuition, board etc., and remarks upon the location and many advantages of the college. From the catalogue we learn that at the last session there were 132 students in attendance, of whom 101 were boarding pupils and 31 day scholars. We are pleased at the good showing which the college makes.

Record of the Year is a new monthly magazine, edited by Frank Moore, and published by G. W. Carleton & Co., New York. This magazine is literally a "reference scrap book," giving the important events and much choice, current miscellany. Each of the monthly parts contains an elegant steel engraving of some eminent person; that for August, the number now before us, furnishes that of Vanderbilt, the American Croesus. The price is fifty cents per month, or $5 per year.

Littells Living Age.—Numbers 1673 and 1674 of Littell's Living Age, for the weeks ending July 1st and 8th respectively, have some noteworthy articles, as follows: The Conrads of Religious Thought, by Rt Hon. W E Gladstone Contemporary Review; The Intellectual Revival of the Middle Ages, Westminister Review; Natural Religion. part IV. McMillan; Remarks on Modern Warfare, by a Military Officer, Fraser; Zachary Macaulay, by W. G. Blaikie, D. D., Sunday Magazine, Visit to Spanish Prison, Temple Bar; The "Venus" of Quinipily, McMillan; The Kings of the Renaissance, Charles VIII and Louis XII, by the author of "Mirabau," etc, Temple Bar; Tricks of Memory, Queen; Early Autumn on the Lower Yangtz, Fortnightly Review; Norwegian Deep Sea Explorations, Academy; Pocket Money, Saturday Review; James Northcote, R. A, Fortnightly Review; together with a new serial, "Carita," by Mrs. Oliphant, and instalment of "What She Came Through," by Sarah Tyler, author of "Lady Bell," and the conclusions of two shorter stories. The usual select poetry and miscellany complete the numbers.

These numbers are the first of a new volume - the one hundred and thirtieth—of this sterling eclectic, and are therefore good ones with which to begin a new subscription. Now fifty-two such numbers, of sixty four large pages each, (or more than 3,000 pages a year) the subscription price ($8 is low, or still better, for $10.50 any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies is sent with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co, Boston are the publishers.

Republican State Convention.—The Republicans of the State met in convention last week to nominate candidates for the various State offices to be filled by election in November. The Greed of Gain, and Thirst for Pleasure.

The ruling passion of the human family; all arise in this hurly-burly age in lost sight of in grasping after riches, the mind is wholly absorbed, the brain taxed, the nervous system strained to its utmost tension. In the pursuit of pleasure, all hygienic rules are disregarded; the body distorted by fashion's despotic sway, and the hours designed for repose are devoted to exhausting revelry; the stomach, the source from which the majority of diseases emanate, is ruthlessly imposed upon pure water, the natural drink for all created beings, is ignored, and liquids that in one shape or another, is substituted until ere we are aware of it, disease has fixed its iron grasp upon us. Then we perceive our danger and look for the elixir of life.

Departed this life on the 27th of May, Mrs. Elizabeth Myatt, relict of Bennett Myatt deceased, in her 85th year.

The deceased was a member of the Baptist Church some forty five years, and died in hope of a blessed immortality.

She was a sufferer for six weeks, being confined to her bed, but bore her sufferings with great forbearance. She leaves two children and many grand-children to mourn their loss. Her sufferings are now over and while we miss her no earthly tear is her eternal gain. May the blood of grace sustain and console her bereaved sons and grand children every trial through this sad affliction and sorrow, and finally conducting good, and may they all look to a reunion in the better land,

SOMETHING NEW!

AN IMPORTED REMEDY.—CANNABIS INDICA.

This wonderful preparation, known by the above title, which has at stood such celebrity during the last few years in all parts of the United States as a POSITIVE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA, can now be obtained at all first-class druggists. We have made permanent arrangements to procure INDIA, for obtaining "PURE HEMP," and having it extracted upon its own soil (the climate in America being so changeable to extract large quantities free from mildew). These remedies are now prepared from the best Hemp, gathered at the right season, and extracted during midsummer in Calcutta. There is not a single symptom of CONSUMPTION that it does not disappear, and it will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical.

Sent per bottle or 3 bottles for $6.50.

As this is an imported article, we do not commission our remedies, but will be prepared to make Cash Agents every where. Address

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.

Will begin its twenty-seventh Annual Session, September 21st, 1876. Rev W. A. Harris, D. D., President, with an able corps of twenty three Teachers and Officers.

Modern Languages taught and spoken in the colleges by a European Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among whom are some of the most cultivated teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union. Its marked effects in the rapid promotion of the health and vigor of our pupils. Those who come here from the South with feeble constitutions, and often with diseases, are generally restored.

Buildings elegant—fanned by purest breezes, commanding the most magnificent scenery, and combining such varied attractions as to make it one of the most delightful dwelling places in the Union

This council will, if possible, keep its pupils from all access to scenes of dissipation.

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A simple uniform worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practical to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop D. S. Doggett, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., under the Presidency of Rev. W. A. Harris, is, in my judgment, one of the best institutions for young ladies in the South. I have occasion to know and appreciate its value by the advantages enjoyed by one of my daughters there. Its course of study is ample; its Faculty accomplished, and its instruction both solid and elegant. Its person and accommodations are all that can be desired for health and comfort, or taste. No location could be more eligible; no scenery more magnificent; no atmosphere more salubrious. Not the least of its merits is, that sacred regard for religious training, without which no Female College especially, would be a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT.

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Church, Instruction is thorough. In music, advantages are offered of very high order. The most talented Professors are employed, and neither pains nor expenses are spared to make this department eminent,

From Prof F H Smith, M. A. L L D, University of Virginia.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys Having had a daughter in the Mr. Harris' care, my observation leads me to believe this school to be one of the best of Female Seminaries which adorn our State * * The Halls of the Wesleyan Female Institute should be filled to overflowing with pupils from all our Southern States.

JEWELS STOLEN.

A million little diamonds
Twinkled on the trees;
And all the little maidens said:
"A jewel, if you please!"
But while they held their hands outstretched,
To catch the diamonds gay,
A million little sunbeams came,
And stole them all away.

GIVE AND TAKE.

Don't ever go hunting for pleasures;
They cannot be found thus, I know.
Nor yet fall a-digging for treasures,
Unless with the spade and the hoe!

The bee has to work for the honey;
The drone has no right to the food.
And he who has not earned his money
Will get from his money no good.

The ant builds her house by her labor;
The squirrel looks out for his mast;
And he who depends on his neighbor
Will never have friends, first or last.

In short, 'tis no better than thieving,
Though thief is a hard name to call it,
Good things to be always receiving,
And never to give back at all.

Lame and Lazy—A Fable.

Two beggars, Lame and Lazy, were in want of bread. One leaned on his crutch, the other sat rubbing his red eyes and staring in the gutter.

Lame called on Charity, who was standing at her door, and humbly asked for a crust. Instead of this he received a loaf.

Lazy, seeing the gift of Charity, exclaimed, 'What, ask for a crust and receive a loaf! Well, I shall ask the old lady for a loaf; perhaps I shall get a cake.'

Lazy now applied to Charity, and loudly called for a loaf of bread.

'Your demanding a loaf,' said Dame Charity, 'proves that you are of that class and character who ask and receive not; so be off directly, and got some work to do.'

Lazy, who always found fault, and had rather whine than work, complained of ill treatment, and even accused Charity of a breach of an exceeding great and precious promise, 'Ask, and you shall receive.'

Charity pointed to a painting in her room which represented three beautiful figures—Faith, Hope and Charity. Charity appeared larger and fairer than her sisters. He noticed that her right hand held a dot of honey, which fed a bee disabled, having lost its wings. Her left hand was armed with a whip to keep off the drones.

'Don't understand it,' said Lazy, yawning and stretching his arms.

Charity replied, 'It means that Charity feeds the lame and flogs the lazy.'

Lazy gathered up his rags, and turned to go shambling off.

'Stop!' said Charity, 'instead of coin I will give you counsel. Do not go and live on your poor mother, for I will send you to a rich aunt.'

'Rich aunt!' echoed Lazybones.—'Where shall I find her, I'd like to know?'

'You will find her in Proverbs, 5th chapter, 6th verse.' But that is where Lazybones did not look; so he sat down by the gutter again, and rubbed his eyes and grumbled.

Shoeing Horses.

A writer in the New York Herald states some facts about how horses should be shod, which are worthy the consideration of blacksmiths, and farmers as well:

Most of the horseshoers of the country prepare the foot, fit a shoe and secure it to the hoof in the same manner that a wood butcher fits a shoe to an old wood or ox sled. The mechanism of a horse's hoof is one of the most wonderful and ingenious structures that can be found in all the works of the Creator. Beneath and in the rear of every foot there is a frog which is a tough and elastic pad for preventing injury to the animal whenever he plants his foot on any hard substance. Large rolls or cylinders of India rubber are placed beneath railroad cars to prevent injury to any part of the car, or to the cargo with which it is loaded. The frog beneath the foot of a horse is designed to subserve a similar purpose. But the manner in which most horses are shod lifts them up as it were, on short stilts, so that the frogs cannot perform their appropriate functions. If we look carefully at a young horse when he is trotting or running, it will be perceived that every foot is brought down to the ground in such a manner that the frog receives the powerful blow. By this means all injury to the animal is avoided. Science teaches us to permit the frog to develope and expand downward. But most blacksmiths seem to think that the all wise Creator made a mistake when he formed the hoofs of horses. Hence they fall at the frogs with red-hot burning irons, with edge tools, and with any other appliances that will enable them to remove this extraneous excrescence. Illustrious ninnies! Why not shave all the rough, adipose tissue beneath their own heels, and leave the bare bones to rest on plates of iron inside of their own boots and shoes?

BLACK TOOTH IN SWINES.—The American Swine Journal says: Black tooth, so called, in swine, is sometimes caused by mechanical injury to teeth, received by chewing the dry and hard kernels of corn. The ailment consists in a state of decay of the tooth (caries.) Such decayed teeth may be moved by the same instrument as a dentist would apply to one's own tooth under similar circumstances. The symptons of tooth ache in swine are similar to those exhibited by mankind viz., loss of appetite, salivation or slobbering, hanging the head, mostly to the side which is affected, peevishness, loss of all fear of man, and hot, repulsive breath. When hogs are fed on strongly acidulated food for any length of time their teeth may become discolored; but it is a question whether the teeth at the same time are materially injured. So long as no decay or diminution of their substance can be noticed, and while the appetite and chewing faculties of the animal do not appear diminished, no interference will be necessary.

A correspondent of the Western Rural says: "I discovered many years ago that wood could be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought the process so simple and inexponsive that it was not worth while making any stir about it. I would as soon have poplar, basswood or quaking ash as any other kind of posts. I have taken out basswood posts, after they have set seven years, that were as sound when taken up as when they were first put in the ground. Time and weather seem to have no effect on them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents apiece. For the benefit of others I will give you the recipe. Take boiled linseed oil and stir in it pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber, and there is not a man that will live to see it rot.'

THINNING FRUIT.—Among my native trees was one which yielded a large crop of small apples each alternate year. They were of a fine flavor, but so small in size that they were worthless for marketing. To cause them to increase in size, I thinned out the small branches after the fruit had formed, taking on about half the fruit On gathering the apples from this tree in the fall I found them nearly double the size of previous years, and about the usual quantity in bushels. I also found the tree blossomed abundantly the ensuing season, and by picking off about half the fruit, when about the size of gooseberries, the tree yields fruit every year.—Maine Farmer.

Of the thousands of victims of Consumption and kindred diseases in our climate, a large proportion would be saved by using Baker's Cod Liver Oil and Phosphate of Lime, which, as we prepare it, is a decidedly pleasant medicine. Try it. See that the label has our signature—Jno. C. Baker & Co., Philadelphia.

A Health-Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulation is not only desirable, but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined with it, it becomes infinitely more efficacious as a remnant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have received the emphatic sanction of medical men who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other disorders. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and its self possessing tonic properties of no mean order.

VALUABLE

Real Estate for Sale

—AT—

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5,000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with splendid, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs, in fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has been cleared and cultivated in tobacco, Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, low well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying 1½ the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 426 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 351 acres, lying on Rutledge and Reed Gane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and in one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

A Funeral Sermon preached in Hickory by Rev J O Hartsell and published for the benefit of relatives and friends of little Mary and Charlie Wilfong and Elva Crowth, who died in Hickory, N. C 1875.

Text, St. John 13th chap. 7th verse: "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."

The subject before us is knowledge, finite and infinite. The former belongs to man, the latter to God.—Finite knowledge can only play within a certain compass, while infinite, or that which belongs to God, can penetrate all things and is conversant with eternal secrets: "For known unto God are all things."

True, man's knowledge is sometimes very extensive. Going far out in the field of science and octaphysics, unraveling many of the wonders of God's universe, and standing upon the outposts of creation, she often gazes into the face of the Unknown, as if anxious to walk by his side, and sport along his path and play at his feet. In fact, man may count the stars and measure their distance, may weigh the atmosphere and fathom the ocean; nay more, he may look out upon this earth peopled with its teeming millions of created beings, and understand something of the laws by which they are all regulated. He may also look at himself, the master piece of God's own workmanship, and hear his throbbing heart pulsating with organic life and power, and feel the currents of vitalizing fluid as they net and react upon him, and may know something of his own existence, and how his splendid and well wrought frame is nourished and fed; yet he is shut out from the Infinite, and is compelled to fall quietly at his feet and say, "What thou doest, I know not now.' The evidence of this is seen written in living letters in the record of the past. Even far down retreating ages there stand in monumental splendor, instances of God's wrath and mercy, the reasons of which we know but little; they only afford us a little light to draw us nearer to him Take for instance the children of Is- yoke of a wicked tyrant, crushed nearly ont of existence by hard oppression: just think of them as they trudge along life's rugged pathway foot sore and weary, not allowed to make public demonstrations of God's former goodness to their fathers, and barely permitted to mingle their tears of grief and sorrow together, until the time of their departure from the land of bondage; then when it came, hard ships still awaited them in their lone ly wandering march of forty years in the wilderness, for notwithstanding God's abundant goodness and loving kindness to them in the pillow of cloud by day and of fire by night, and their miraculous deliverance at the Red Sea, when hard pressed by the advancing hosts, there were many things dark and mysterious in God's providential dealings with them.

When God withheld the showers of blessings, they were often inclined to murmur and complain even at him who gave them their being, and continued to them the pulsating throb of life, while in their perilous journey to the land of promise. Such, for instance, is human nature in a corrupted state with the finite mind partly paralyzed, trying to reach out after the infinite beyond a proper bound. But alas! for such; for their condition is too often symbolised in the case of those bitten by the flying firey serpents, or the persons who ate quails meat till it came out of their nostrils. Thus from instances of Divine wrath and mercy in such happy combination, let us learn the simple Scripture lesson, 'That he led them forth by the right way that they might go to a city of habitation.'

Oh! how little we know of God's providential dealings with us; look at the case of Daniel fully aware of a wicked and unalterable decree, bowing in humble prayer before Almighty God and subjecting himself to the dread ordeal of a lion's den, not knowing but that it might prove his last resting place until the resurrection morn.

Again we see walking in the midst of burning flames three mortal, but pious men, attesting by their endurance the power of an endless life.—Farther down in the history of the past, we have the case of Abraham, the friend of God, starting and journeying in obedience to his command, then erecting an altar and preparing the wood and binding the sacrifice, and raising the gleaming knife to penetrate the heart and let out the life blood of an only son, in whom the promise of the world's future greatness and glory is lodged, at the same time not knowing what God meant in this strange procedure, but doubt less satisfied with the fact declared in the text that "I shall know hereafter." Again we have the case of Job, a man perfect and upright, fearing God, and eschewing evil. Stripped of property, then of friends, lastly of health, and sitting down in sack cloth and ashes scrapes himself with a pot-sherd giving to the world a living monument of integrity and pure principle, and illustrating the truths of the doctrine afterwards taught by the world's redeemer—"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall have a crown of life."—But commencing with the christian era, we have many illustrious examples of God's heroes; for they "endured hardness as good soldiers of the cross." Behold Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles, after his conversion not conferring with flesh and blood, but entering upon active ministerial duty at once, and going out into this wicked world with burning zeal to proclaim or to preach the unsearchable riches of his master to dying men, knowing that in all probability he would meet with opposition, stripes and imprisonment, with perils by land and sea, and though he did not know why all this befell him in his path, yet he said "none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy and ministry of the Lord Jesus."

And we come to our own experience and how little we know of God's peculiar dispensations. Our precious loved ones are taken away by death's resistless hand, and the dark cloud of gloom and sorrow gathers around the very threshhold of our homes, because loved ones are taken away and seats are vacant, and the precious family circle is broken and the mellow voices of those who charmed us in other days are hushed in silence, the music of which kept us buoyant with bright expectations of hope; their pulses are still and cold until they quicken at the last trumpet's cadence; their hearts beat no more till they thrill to the trump of God; the fire in their eyes is all gone out until it shall be rekindled in the radiant resurrection morn, when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation, while the flashing splendor of his dazzling throne shall almost eclipse the eye of a congregated universe.

In this case before us, little Eliza Mary and Charlie have been taken from fond parents and from earth, and placed in the upper kingdom to shine like so many little stars more brilliant in a Heavenly clime, and we can only ascribe to them the sentiments of the poet in the following beautiful poetic lines:

Oh! children, dear children, we loved you so well,
But you are gone up with Jesus to dwell,
And to mingle your notes with angels above
Where all is harmony, beauty and love.

Your sparkling eyes so pretty and bright,
Have gone to the land where it never shall be night,
And your tiny white fingers that played here at will
Are playing 'mid bowers on the heavenly hill.

Where the clear crystal river goes rippling along,
And the ears of the saints are saluted with song,
Where anthems eternal are constantly sung
And the harps of the ransomed are never unstrung.

Oh! children, dear children, we know you are there,
And a crown in that Kingdom forever you'll wear,
And palms in your hands you'll certainly bear,
And the joys of that place you'll constantly share.

Then why should we weep though you're gone from us here,
To the place where your spirit is freed from all care
Where sickness and sorrow are never to be known,
And the light of God's presence is constantly shone

Perhaps, little children, we loved you too well;
For Jesus has taken you with him to dwell;
But, be this as it may, we'll submissively bow
To the stroke of his providence that falls on us now.

And when to thy grave at evenings we go,
And the sad tear of grief commences to flow,
We'll look up on high and remember you're there,
'Amid the bowers of Eden its joys to share.

And while in the twilight homeward we turn
In silent meditation we'll his providence learn,
And think of the robes and the crowns that await
The ones who with joy enter through Heaven's gate.

Now why he has called these precious lovely children so soon from fond parents and from this world, we cannot tell, but he has promised to explain this hereafter, if we are faithful to the grace given. Then it matters not if clouds and darkness are round about him, an I the mystic future should hide these things now from our mortal vision. The time is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. Then we shall see again those sainted ones clad in light and deathless bloom, harping with their harps, borne softly there by angel pinions from this sincursed earth.

Oh! what comfort do we find in the precious words "Thou shalt know hereafter." They are to the christian in his grief, like the mellow hues of the arching rainbow to mortal vision, or the silvery moon that plays amid the planetary hosts or the sun, the mighty king of day, that sheds his lustre and brilliancy over these hills of ours, dispelling the sable curtains of the night, and giving light to all. "Thou shalt know hereafter." Oh! precious words, will our knowledge be increased and our ignorance taken away, and the light of eternity flash upon these immortal minds of ours, as they stand disconnected from a clod of earth, gazing upon him who loved us and gave himself for us?—Yes it will, for he is infinite and has promised it.

His infinity as well as wisdom is seen in creative acts. Look at this earth of ours with its living millions of human forms. Think of its magnitude, its properties, its rolling rivers, its huge mountains, its deep caverns, and dense forests, beautiful streamlets, and mighty oceans. In fact, think of everything grand and glorious about this mighty sphere, and you will see the outcroppings of infinite wisdom manifested in design, plan and system, corroborating the Scriptural statement that "He made all things, and without him was not anything made that was made." In fact, his wisdom shines in every star, glitters in every sunbeam, plays in every dewdrop that twinkles to the morning light, forces its way in every passing breeze, rests upon the verdant land scape, and plays upon the bosom of the angry cloud, and is seen stamped upon every human form; and yet sometimes short sighted finite man would attempt to measure arms with him who spake as never man spake.—Though God has made us immortal, has united a spirit to a clod of earth—a spirit that is immortal and out upon endless career, and though we know but little of him now, the time is coming when we shall see him face to face and know as we are known.—Then the grand fulfillment of what he has promised shall take place; even old ocean shall roll his millions to the shore, at the voice of the archangel's trump, who standing one foot on sea and the other on solid ground, swears by him that liveth that "time was but time shall be no more."

Oh! what a scene to the enraptured gaze of men and angels! We will all be there, the great and small, the rich and poor, the bond and free, the learned and unlearned. Yes, unnumbered millions shall gather at his bar, and among them will be found the men of classic mould, whose giant tread left departing footprints on the sands of time; also those of spiritual perception keen, who in this world were attracted by a Saviour's cross, and coming within the reach of his dying love, washed their robes and made them white in his precious blood. Gazing still on this large assize, I behold the very men whose infidelity and skepticism cursed this lower world, but these, with many others, are soon to be turned away at God's left hand with their minds in a paralytic state to burn in darkness, while eternity shall roll its ample ages on; but the righteous shall shine forth in the kingdom of their father with spotless robes and expanding minds, with clear conceptions and perfect views of him "who loved them and gave himself for them." Then we shall know why in this world God so often sent the sunshine intermingled with the cloud and storm, and also why the death angel with barbed arrow keen, entered our lovely homes, and claimed the ones on whom our best affections fell. Yes, then shall open up to our immortal vision the reasons of dark dispensations in our pilgrim days, and we shall be satisfied that God hath done all things well.

"Thou shalt know hereafter." Oh! precious words. They ring upon our ears while in this vale of tears, like the melodious sound of angel harp strings, softly touched by heavenly fingers, bringing consolation to our grieved and stricken hearts, filling our souls unutterably full of glory and of God Wicked men may hide themselves in the strongholds of infidelity; may be fortified by the power of science and argument against the Bible; may utterly denounce divine revelation whose steady light points the christian pilgrim through the cross to the crown, and from his home of toil and sorrow here, to his bright and everlasting mansion in the skies. But let me have the comfort produced in my poor heart which Jesus through his father bring, in burning words of glorious hope and life to fallen man, and here I'll rest my all for this life and the one to come, and standing firm in faith upon the rock of ages sure, I'll catch a glimpse of that inside the vail, and say in poetic lines:

"No mortal eye hath seen the glories of that land beyond the river,
Its fadeless flowers, and the unchanging sheen around the throne forever.
No ear hath heard the song of rapturous praise within that shining portal,
No heart of man hath dreamed what joys belong To that redeemed and happy bloodwashed throng. All glorious and immortal."

"Thou shalt know hereafter." Oh! glorious words by Jesus given. Weeping friends, they point us to a land of hope, a better day, a brighter clime, a glorious home where sickness never comes, and where no death angel, on eager pinions, shall ever bear loved ones away, nor yet where we shall ever stand by infant forms in sore affliction laid, watching anxiously to catch their dying words, and weeping to see them torn from our kind embrace, though taken to where all is bright and glorious and immortal for ever. Where grows the tree of life, and waves the ambrosial fruit, and flows the crystal stream, and sings the angel choir. That's the faithful christian pilgrim's home, the night of sorrow here will not be long; his trials in a sinful world will soon be past. Then with the blood-washed millions around the throne, he shall forever sing. "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, unto him be glory and dominion forever and ever."

"Thou shalt know hereafter." What does it mean? That Jesus will explain. Yes, more than this; it means the happy realization of that which produces joy, perhaps that of which the christian poet sings when he says:

"I see a world of spirits bright,
Who reap the pleasures there,
They all are robed in spotless white,
And rejoicing palms they bear,
Adorned by their redeemer's grace
They close pursue the lamb,
And every shining front
Displays the unutterable name.

They drink this vivifying stream
And pluck the ambrosial fruit,
And each records the praise of him
Who tuned his golden lute.
At once they strike the harmonious wire,
And hymn the great three one,
Ev'hear, he smiles, and all the choir
Fall down before his throne.

"Thou shalt know hereafter." Oh! glorious hope of secrets now to us unknown. It comes to our poor hearts to cheer us in our gloom and point us to our glorious mansion in the skies.

They fill our souls, they expand our views, they dry our tears. Oh! what glory shall be revealed in us if faithful to the grace given. The great apostle breaks forth in rapture and says: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. For when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Oh think of the heavenly home, where there's Eden bowers and rosy lawns and flowery dales and crystal streams, and golden streets, and pearly gates and jasper walls, and radiant thrones and angel choirs, and many precious loved ones, sceptered and crowned and harping with their harps. May we all be there to know hereafter.

Washington District Conference.

The Washington District Conference assembled in the town of Warrenton, N. C. July 6th 1876, and was called to order by the P. E. of the District, Rev. Wm. Closs, D. D. at 11 o'clock A. M in the Methodist Church.

N M Lawrence was elected Secretary.

The bar of the Conference was fixed, visiting brethren invited to seats and requested to participate in the proceedings.

Rev. J. P. Moore, P. E of the Raleigh District, and Rev. A. A. Boshamer, P. C. of Henderson circuit were introduced to the Conference.

The following delegates were present Clerical: Rev. J. W. Shackford, Warrenton station, J. R Griffith, Warren circuit, R. O. Burton, Roanoke circuit, L. L. Nash, Williamston circuit, W. S. Rone, Plymouth and Jamesville, B. B. Culbreth, Washington station, B. F. Long, local preacher Warrenton. Lay delegates, W. S Davis. T. C. Williams and J. Draper, Warrenton station; Jno. M. Brame, John B. Williams and R. W. Kearney, Warren circuit; and N M. Lawrence and Jno. J. Garrett, Tarboro circuit.

A committee of 5 was appointed to look into the subject of missions on the District, consisting of Rev. R. O. Burton, Rev. B. B. Culbreth, Rev. L. L. Nash and Jno J. Garrett and Jno. M. Brame.

Reports from the different charges were called for, Rev. B. B. Culbreth of Washington station reported his congregations good, the social meetings of the church largely attended, class meetings held, but sparingly attended. Sunday school in an improving condition. The international lesson papers used together with Wesley's Catechism. The communion largely attended. Has no member who habitually neglects it. Assessment for the station $1000, one third of which has been paid.

Rev. J. R. Griffith, of Warren circuit reported the condition of the church in his charge only tolerable; has 7 appointments, attendance at some very small, at others good; preaches in the week but has no congregations scarcely at all. Has no social meetings except a prayer meeting at Hebron. Good Sunday schools at 3 appointments, none at the others. Assessment for the circuit $1200, very little paid in.

Rev. R. O. Burton, of Roanoke circuit reported the congregations tolerably good on Sunday, very small on week days, has 11 appointments 4 Sunday schools. Prayer meetings at 4 places on the charge. No class meetings.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Conference assembled at 3½ o'clock P. M. and was opened with prayer by the Rev. R. O Barton, minutes of last session read and adopted.

The following delegates reported: B. I. Powell, Warren station, Rev. J. A. B Kilpatrick local preacher, Roanoke circuit, and Rev. J. D. Bnie, Matamuskeet circuit.

The following visiting brethren were present and invited to seats in the Conference, viz: Rev. V. A Sharpe, College Agent, Rev. Dr. Burkhead, P C., Edenton street Church, Raleigh, Rev. W. C. Norman, P C, Person street Church, Raleigh, Rev. F. L. Reach P C, Louisburg.

Reports from charges again taken up, Rev J. W. Shackford of Warrenton station reported the attendance upon public worship improving, some manifestations of a deeper spiritual life; a few attend prayer meeting. No class meetings. Sunday school in good condition, but could improve: no conversions this year, about 1 5th of the assessment paid. Rev. L. L. Nash, of the Williamston circuit, reported spiritual condition of the circuit improving, attendance on Divine worship good, 14 conversions and 11 accessions to the church. Social meetings not good but improving. 5 Sabbath schools in the circuit, use the international lesson papers and Methodist catechism; 7 appointments. Financial condition good, half of the amount assessed, paid.

The preacher was furnished his living free for three months.

Rev. Jno. D. Buie of the Matamuskeet circuit reported the work improving; has several Sunday schools in a flourishing condition; at one appointment teachers meetings are held, which are well attended, has very few members that will pray in public No class meetings held except what he holds himself; has raised money to complete 2 churches; about ½ this years assessment has been paid.

Rev. W H. Watkins of the Columbia circuit, reported by letter that the spiritual condition of the church had improved, attendance upon the ordinances and social meetings of the church good, 6 Sabbath schools in operation conducted in the usual manner. One school in the bounds of the circuit taught by a Methodist, contributions to church purposes good. Have bought a parsonage and paid for it except $125 Raised $250 for the colleges, $250 for building a church at Columbia.

The Pastor in charge of the Tarboro circuit being absent, N. M. Lawrence the lay delegate was called upon who reported the spiritual condition of the church at Tarboro very good, gave an account of the gracious revival of religion which took place in that place last January, resulting in 70 conversions and 52 accessions to the church; stated the plan adopted by the church in dividing the new converts into classes and meeting them for the purpose of instruction and prayer; spoke especially of class of boys 12 to 18 years of age under his own charge, every one of whom will pray when called upon. The young men of the church recently converted held a prayer meeting especially for their own benefit and every one prayed in public. The S. School is in a very prosperous condition, 100 scholars and teachers, $50 in the treasury, 400 books in library, collections taken up every 4th Sunday for missionary purposes, prayer meetings well attended and blest by the continual influence of the Holy Spirit. Financial condition good, especially of the church at Tarboro, has paid up her assessment in full to date.

This report called forth many remarks from the brethren present, who had labored on the Tarboro circuit in years gone by, and by special request the Conference engaged in singing a hymn of praise to God for his blessings, and engaged in prayer for a continnance of the same and especially that He would pour ont His spirit upon this Conference and upon the people of Warrenton, that a gracious revival might result from their labors, Rev. Dr. Burkhead and Rev. A. A. Boshamer led in prayer.

Portsmouth and Ocracoke and Hatteras had no report.

On motion it was resolved that 15 to 20 minutes of the morning sessions be devoted to a prayer meeting and the whole church invited to attend. Conference adjourned with the benediction.

FRIDAY MORNING.

Conference met at 8½ o'clock and devoted 20 minutes to prayer meeting, conducted by Rev. J. D. Buie. Minutes of last session read and adopted.

The following delegates reported: Rev. F. D Swindell, P. C Tarboro Circuit, Jno E Boyd, Warren Circuit.

The committee on missions made the following report:

Resolved 1st, That the Bishop and P. Elders at the next session of the N C. Conference be, and are hereby requested to establish a mission between Enfield and Tarboro, and extending from Battleboro 20 miles or more towards the Roanoke river, in an easterly direction, and that an appropriation be made to aid in support of the missionary.

2nd, The committee recommend a continnance of aid from the missionary board, to Portsmouth and Oakracoke and Hatteras.

3rd, That this report be laid before the Bishop at the next annual Conference by the P. Elder of the District, signed by the committee.

The following resolution was presented; "That whereas the circumstances surrounding us, necessitate the giving of Sabbath preaching by the Pastors to their charges, wherever practicable so that the community may be reached by the services of the ministry, and the Sabbath thereby duly observed and made promotive of spiritual health to the population, and the Church preserved, the P. E. be requested to use his influence with the Bishop, so to arrange the Circuits as to give all the appointments Sunday preaching." After lengthy and animated discussion the report was adopted.

The following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, There is a demand for an amount of Gospel preaching and pastoral visitation beyond the present supply of effective ministers: Resolved that each preacher of this Conference be requested to preach a sermon in his charge, during the week of prayer in August, on the "call to the ministry" and urge upon the people to pray the Lord to send more laborers into the harvest." Conference adjourned with the benediction.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Conference met at the usual hour and was opened with prayer by Rev. J. R. Griffith. Minutes of morning session read and adopted. The following delegates reported: Rev. J. T. Gibbs, of Warren Circuit; Rev. C M Cook, of Roanoke Circuit; and A. W. Thomas, of Washington Station

It was moved and carried that a competent layman be elected as a permanent recording Secretary for this District Conference, and that the secretary of each session be instructed to forward the minutes to said Recording Steward immediately after the Conference.

N. M Lawrence was elected to the position.

The following delegates were elected to the next Annual Conference: N. M. Lawrence, B W Browen, T. C. Williams, and Riley Murray.

It was moved and carried that Sunday at 4 o'clock P. M., be set apart for a Sunday school mass meeting

The next District Conference was voted to be held at Washington.

A resolution recommending the Raleigh CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to the patronage of our people was adopted.

On motion the thanks of the Conference were tendered to the people of Warrenton for the kind and courteous manner in which they have entertained the ministers and delegates of the Conference.

The thanks of the Conference were returned to the W. & W. R. Road, S & R. R. Road, and the Steamer Cotton Plant for allowing a reduction of fare to the delegates.

The following preamble and resolution was introduced:

WHEREAS, Many of our churches are inferior and a reflection on our beloved Methodism, and whereas, we have too many of this kind of churches and in the wrong places, therefore.

Resolved, That we urge upon our people to build better churches, make those we have more comfortable, and take greater care to locate them at the place most convenient to the greatest number of people. After some discussion on motion the resolution was made the order of the day, to morrow.

The thanks of the Conference on motion were extended to the Baptist Church in this community for kindly opening her doors to our ministry on this occasion.

Conference adjoured with the benediction.

SATURDAY MORNING.

Conference opened with religious services, conducted by Rev. L. L. Nash.

Minutes of last session read and adopted.

The following delegates reported; E. A Thorne and Thos. W. Harris, of the Roanoke Circuit.

The resolution of yesterday being the order of the day, the following substitute was offered as being more specific:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that the cause of Christ demands better churches, and located with specific reference to the consolidation of congregations already too near one another. Adopted.

It was moved and carried that the P. E., he requested to call the attention of the several Quarterly Conferences of this District, to the foregoing resolution.

On motion it was resolved that the Conference recommend to our people the condition of the Washington Church as worthy of their aid, and earnestly request them to help in the completion of the building.

The secretary was requested to furnish the proceeding of this Conference to the Raleigh CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

On motion the action of the annual Conference in reference to the liquidation of the debts of our Colleges and pledge ourselves to cooperate with the agents of these institutions in their work.

There being no further business before, the Conference the Presiding officer, in a feeling and appropriate speech, expressed his gratitude at the presence of so many of our visiting brethren and at the interest manifested by them in the general interests of this District; also the good feeling and harmony with which the business had been transacted, and tenderly invoked God's blessing to rest upon every one present, which was kindly responded to by the Rev. J. P. Moore P. E., of the Raleigh District, who cordially invited the members of the Conference to attend his District Conference to be held in Louisburg July 26th.

Conference adjourned with the benediction.

Tribute of the Board of Missions to the Late Rev. E. W. Sehon. D.D.

AT a meeting of the Board of Missions, June 14, 1876, the President stated that since the last meeting of the Board, the Rev. Dr. Sehon, Vice president, had "passed through death triumphant home"—whereupon the following members were appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions to be entered upon the Journal of the Board, testifying the sincere and ardent affection of the members to their late associate—to wit: the Rev. Drs. Young, Kelley, and Cunnyngham. The committee reported the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Rev. Edmund W. Sehon, D.D., by the several offices of Manager, Secretary, and Vice president, has been connected with the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the last twenty five years.

And, whereas, it has pleased God, in his wise providence, to remove him from our counsels by death, June 7, 1876; therefore.

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Sehon this Board has lost one of its most intelligent and devoted members, and the cause of Missions an eloquent and successful advocate.

Resolved, That our country has lost a useful and patriotic citizen, and the Church one of its most zealous and gifted ministers.

Resolved, That we send a representative to the Memorial service that may be held in honor of our deceased brother at the next session of the Louisville Conference.

Resolved, That we tender the sympathies of this Board to the family of Dr. Sehon, and that a copy of these resolutions be furnished to them, and to the Christian Advocate for publication.

ROBERT A. YOUNG,
D. C. KELLEY,
W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM.

Several members of the Board bore oral testimony to the noble character and eminent services of Dr. Sehon, whose loss is most sincerly and deeply deplored.

Mission room of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn., June 14, 1876.

To the Friends of Missions in the Methodist Episcopal Church. South.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We have printed our Annual Report, and have it now ready for gratuitous distribution. We have also printed a sheet of select missionary information of the most attractive and valuable character. We design to send both of these to every itinerant preacher on our Church, whose post-office address we can obtain. We request of every preacher and friend of Missions to send us names and post-offices of such members and friends of our Church as they may deem it advisable to furnish with these publications. We are determined to get the information before the Church, and only ask your help that we may do it in the most judicious way. Yours, in the love of Christ,

J. B. MCFERRIN,
D. C. KELLEY,
Secretaries.

CENTENNIAL NOTES.

We have 975,000 domestic servants.

We have 126,822 teachers, and enough for them to do.

German immigration reached its highest point in 1854.

Our population in 1776 was 2,750,000; now it is 44,675,000.

Our area in 1776 was 800,000 square miles; now it is 3,603, 844.

In 1790 one thirtieth of our population lived in cities.

In 1790 we had only six towns with a population of over 8000.

According to the last census there are 6,000,000 farmers in this country.

In 1870 the ratio of the colored to the whole population was 14½ to 100.

We have 43,000 clergymen to keep us in the straight and narrow way.

We have 40,000 lawyers to keep us in the broad and crooked way.

We have 62,000 doctors, and each with a bill, long if not crooked.

Nearly 10,000,000 of our population are foreigners or their descendants.

We have 2000 actors, who ridicule vices by night and often follow them by day.

Immigration reached its lowest points in the panic years of 1837, 1857, 1873.

There was not a single bank in this country in 1776; there are more than 6000 now.

From 1845 to 1851 nearly 1,500,000 Irish landed at Castle Garden, New York.

We have 5,200 journalists to show the politicians how to talk without saying anything.

It was Morton, of Pennsylvania, who gave the casting vote of this State in favor of independence.

We have 1,000,000 baborers, for whom we have by no means 1,000,000 jobs, as they know to their sorrow.

At the close of the Revolution the production of cotton in the South scarcely exceeded 100 bales. The invention of the cotton gin made it the great staple of the South, the production increasing with marvelous rapidity until it reached its maximum in 1870—over 5,000,000 bales.

The Declaration of Independence was read publicly to the people of Philadelphia on the 8th of July, from the platform of the observatory erected there by Rittenhouse to observe the transit of Venus. Captain Hopkins, who read it, belonged to the navy.

Thursday, July 4, 1776, was a day of intense heat, the session had been long; the delegates were weary and impatient; swarms of flies from a livery stable in the neighborhood came in at the windows, and bit through the silk stockings the legs of the patriots. Jefferson used to say, langhingly, that the annoyance rendered Congress impatient of delay, and hastened the conclusion of the great business of declaring independence.

Drawing Preachers.

It is a question of frequent occurrence among the gay and worldly minded, and sometimes even asked by members of the church, 'Will the minister draw?' When a new minister is appointed to a circuit or station—especially in charge of one of our city churches: "does he draw?' The question is barely tolerable, even touching a play actor, but of a minister of the gospel it is insulting to his high calling. The gospel is not to be sold in the shambles, nor offered to the sweet tooth and perverted taste of the vicious and idle, but addressed to the conscience and the sinful heart in the name of Christ;—its paying or drawing power is not its first test. Physicians (excepting perhaps quacks) do not draw. They are sought, in spite of the reluctauce to accept their painful aid, by necessities, the fear of death or the alarm of pain and sickness. Churches are not theatres or places of amusement. They cannot be made attractive in a pure sense by secondary inducements and solicitations. Their attractions must be for the understanding, anxious for light—conscience, sick and wanting healing—the heart, sore and craving consolation—the faith, trembling and begging reassurance. These are permanent and honest attractions—such as carry people to skilled physicians, to learned colleges, to honest dealers—to satisfy wants. But the wretched substitute of an hour's sensational twaddle, undignified expression, theatrical posturing, parade of voice or person, in place of solid, serious, sincere, and earnest teaching, is a disgraceful abuse of Sunday and the church and the gospel of Jesus. It should be discountenanced, and always is, by all right minded persons in the church and among the gay and worldly-minded.

The true gospel attractions are the winning power of a preacher, who is seen and felt to love human souls and to desire above all things their salvation, and the existence of a contagious enthusiasm for piety and usefulness. In this there can be nothing artificial, false or uncertain What the church needs is a ministry to draw souls nearer to Christ, and not audience drawers and sky scrapers—pure, earnest, logical and eloquent, called of God, and imbued with the spirit of the Master.

The Junior notes that Emory College, at Oxford, Ga., of which Dr. A. G. Haygood is President, has conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. J. B. Bobbitt, the Senior Editor of this paper.

Mr. Spurgeon.

The report has been circulating through the papers that Mr. Spurgeon, the great open-communion Baptist preacher, would soon visit the United States. From a letter written by him to a Boston paper, this report seems to have been unauthorized, as he is too busily engaged in his work at his Tabernacle, College, and among his people, to leave it for a short period even. His thorough consecration to the work of the ministry and the labors akin to and connected with it, has been the secret of his great success In his letter he says: "Here I am, and here I must be till I go to another and yet more glorious land than yours. I am still weak, but free from any complaint. All goes on gloriously with the Tabernacle and its works, 'for the Lord is our helper.'"

The Raleigh District Conference convenes in the town of Louisburg this week A full attendance of ministers and delegates is expected, and the citizens of Louisburg, noted for their hospitality, extend a hearty welcome. We trust the spirit of the Master will be with us, and that the occasion may be one of great profit to the church. The best evidence of the success of a District Conference is a gracious revival of religion and the conversion of sinners. Let us pray for, and expect this happy result, during our Conference at Louisburg.

Another wind fall comes to the Vanderbilt University in being made the residuary legatee of the estate of Wm. M. Cartmell, of Lebanon, Tenn It is thought that the University will receive at least twenty thousand dollars.

The American Tract Society has employed over two hundred colporterns, twenty of whom are in North Carolina. They held or attended 6491 religious meetings and made 170,848 family visits, holding religious conversation or prayer with the largest portion of them.

A Subterfuge.

The fact that Tom Paine, of infidel memory, wrote a book entitled "Common Sense," and other works of a patriotic nature, at the beginning of our national struggle for independence, does not entitle his memory to be perpetuated by the erection of a monument in Independence Hall at Philadelphia. His "Age of Reason" and other books in which he assaulted the Christian religion in a rude and vulgar manner, have done more harm to society than his patriotic utterances did good to our country. Other men wrote with as much patriotism and effect, and fought and died for their cause, who have no monuments erected to them; and the scheme of placing one in Independence Hall to the memory of Paine for what he did for the cause of liberty, is a miserable subterfuge by which his followers hope to glorify him for the vile attacks he made upon christians and the christian religion. It was only through the favoring kindness, the good providence, of God that the weak colonies were made strong in their struggle against the powerful enemy that swarmed upon their shores. By Heaven's assistance, and not by patriotic tracts of Paine or others, our independence was achieved, and the proposition to honor the infidel Paine, is an insult to Providence as well as to the American people who gratefully acknowledge the protecting care and helping hand of God.

Keep Cool.

With the mercury climbing up in the thermometer to one hundred in the shade, the injunction to "keep cool" would seem to be more easily given than obeyed. Open the doors and windows, doff superfluous clothing, think of the heat as little as possible, and keep to the work that your brain or hand has to perform. We have noticed that loafers and idlers complain more of heat than those who keep steadily at their work, and we do not doubt they feel it more sensibly. The man who pursues his work quietly and steadily, without worry or hurry, may spoil as many paper collars in a day as he who abandons his work to use a fan, talk politics on the street, and watch the thermometer; but he does not suffer the tortures that the latter undergoes. The more one talks or thinks about the heated term, the more he will realize how hot it is. It is like brooding over sorrows—the more it is indulged in the more vexations and troubling will those sorrows be.

Sorrows must needs be met with in life; so must heat in summer weather; but the effects of both can be greatly lessened by withdrawing the mind from contemplating them, and busying it with the duties of life. We don't know but that a thermometer in the office, or house, is a nuisance—so constantly does it draw our attention to the state of the weather and makes us realize what we might not otherwise be conscious of.

Because the weather is warm, we should not worry and fret ourselves about it. Impatience and anger heat the blood as much and as quickly as the sun's scorching rays, and makes us far more uncomfortable. Avoid contentions too, in warm weather, for a man in a rage is more subject to a sun stroke than one with an even temper. To be snappish and choleric in midsummer is as foolish and uncomfortable as to wear an army-blanket or fur-lined overcoat.

Keep busy, and if it is hot, you will not be apt to feel it very sensibly.—Be patient and keep your temper down, and if you do not keep your body cool, the heated term will be passed without much discomfort or suffering.

The St Louis Advocate, says: "We learn from the papers that the Republicans of North Carolina have nominated Judge Settle as their candidate for Governor in the coming August election. Judge Settle and Judge Battle were two notable judges in that State in days gone by. Judge Battle perhaps has ended the battle of life, while Judge Settle remains, and as ex-Governor Vance is his opponent, it remains to be seen whether Vance will settle Settle, or Settle settle Vance."

We would inform Dr. M'Nally that Judge Settle, the Republican candidate for Governor, is the son of the Judge Settle who adorned the Superior Court Bench in the days gone by. The son is, or was until his recent resignation, a member of the Supreme Court. The Dr., too, is wrong in thinking that Judge Battle "has ended the battle of life." He still lives full of mental, and with much of physical vigor. He has retired from the practice of law and is President of one of the Raleigh Banks.

He is an Episcopalian, but at our Centennial celebration in March, he was one of the most deeply interested and constant attendants upon the exercises, and expressed himself highly gratified at the showing made by Methodism in general and North Carolina Methodism in particular.

The week of prayer appointed by our Bishops begins on the 4th of August. We trust it will be observed generally by our people throughout the connection. Let the preachers make arrangements for its proper observance.

The third Quarterly Meeting for Edenton Street Church was held last Saturday and Sunday, Rev. J. P. Moore presiding.

Last Hours of Bishop Cummins.

We have already chronicled the death of Bishop Cummins, founder and Senior Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church. His associate Bishop, Bishop Charles of Chicago, in a memorial sermon delivered July 2, gave a subjoined account of his last moments:

"Last Monday, at half past two o'clock in the afternoon, our beloved presiding Bishop breathed his last. To the instant of his death his consciousness was unclouded; his great mind lost not for a moment its power. So sudden was the blow, so little was the fatal result anticipated, that few of his brethren knew even of his illness. Shortly before he died he was asked what message should be given to the Church that he had been God's instrument in founding. "Tell them,' he answered, with energy in every tone—"tell them, Go forward and do a grand work.' A little later Mrs. Cummins—herself in feeble health, and prostrated by the awful shock—bent over him and asked: "My darling, do you know me?' "Yes, dear, he answered, "I know you.' Again she said, "Do you know Jesus?' His whole countenance was glorified by a beaming irradiation, as he replied: "O, yes, I know him!' Then he repeated the first line of Charles Wesley's hymn:

"Jesus, lover of my soul."

But the voice grew feebler with each word. For a moment hushed silence fell upon the room, hardly broken even by the sobs of his household. Then was heard the last expression of those lips on whose words listening multitudes had hung entranced. But to the latest breath it was the same thought to which in thronged assemblies they had given utterance. He breathed out his life in the distinctly heard recognition of his Lord, "Jesus! Precious Saviour.'

Round Lake Fraternal Camp-meeting.

The New York Advocate says of this meeting, which closed on Monday, July 3rd:

Bishop Janes presided during the first week, and Bishops Simpson and Foster during the latter week. Bishop Peck was also present. Drs. Duncan, McFerrin, Poisal, and Clarke, of the M. E. Church South, and Mr Ware, Agent of Randolph Macon College, were among the Southern ministers who efficiently aided in the services. Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, of this city, were also earnest and successful workers in the meetings The attendance at the meeting during the first week was not large, but later the people came in great numbers, and the services proved to be of great interest. Many powerful sermons were preached, and the social meetings, as well as the services from the main stand, were seasons of marked spiritual fervor.

A correspondent of the Northern Advocate writes of a sermon of Dr. M'Ferrin on 'The Unity of the Church' as follows:

It was peculiar in many respects. It was a sort of rambling talk, though with a certain kind of bearing upon the subject. He evinces such a Christian spirit, that the effect of his sermon was to melt the congregation into full sympathy with himself. He attained a result beyond the reach of art, and every hearer forgot the absence of the graces. His remarks derive a significance from the fact that he is from the M. E. Church South, and is an earnest advocate of the reunion of the two great branches of the Methodist Church in this country.

District S. S. Conference.

Messrs Editors: I wish to say through the columns of the Advocate that the Newberne District Sunday-school Conference meets in Snow Hill Aug. 10th. All ministers in the District, travelling and local, and Superintendent of schools are members. Each Station school is entitled to four delegates, two of which may be ladies. Each Circuit school is entitled to two delegates one of which may be a lady. Pastors and Superintendents are urged to get out full delegations and meet with them promptly on the first day of the Conference

Neuse Circuit.

Messrs Editors: The old Neuse Circuit has been abundantly blessed of God during my pastoral connection with it. Nearly every appointment has enjoyed a gracious revival. Congregations gradually improve in numbers and deportment every round I make on the circuit. The prudential means of grace, as well as the divinely appointed sacraments of the church, are well attended and regularly observed.

We have baptized fifty six infants and received one hundred and forty four persons into the church since I came to this charge Glory to God in the highest!

We are on the very best terms with all other denominations represented here, and from many of them we receive the kindest attention. Episcopalians and Baptists, as well as others, heartily unite with us on communion occasions in celebrating that holy supper.

We have erected a neat little parsonage of six rooms at a cost of $500 at Grantsboro which is very central in the circuit and just ten miles over the river from Newbern The place was not named for U. S, the President of U S, but it was named for a very thrifty merchant by the name of William Grant who had, and still has, a store at the place, and who, by the by, holds with the opposite political party to that of the President, and in faith is a Presbyterian, but don't care or study as much about the eternal decrees as he does about the welfare of his "Methodist pastor," quick sales and a good bargain.

The next session of the Newbern District Conference is to be held at Stonewall, the second best appointment in my circuit. Stonewall is a pretty little village on Bay River, having for its near neighbor, just across the stream, the pretty little town of Bayboro. We hope to have the venerable Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh, right fresh from the Pacific coast, and one or both the editors of the Raleigh Christian Advocate with us at the District Conference next May, together with the Rev. Braxton Craven, D. D., LL.D., who has already promised to be with us, and if so, I know we will have a glorious time, and if so, what will be too great, as an element of religious humility and love for us to do?

Aurora, in several particulars, is the best appointment in the circuit, and it is also a pretty little town surrounded by a very energetic and wealthy people, and filled with excellent families of much refinement and taste.

Aurora is the residence of the Rev. R Hooker, M D., formerly of Hillsboro, Orange county, and the Rev W H Cunninggim, formerly of Raleigh.

Bro. Cunninggim, together with the other members of the church at Aurora is doing an excellent work in the Sunday school enterprise. He has an extraordinary talent and special gift for that, in my estimation, the most important work of the church. I think it is much harder to superintend a systematic Sunday school well than it is to preach. I would like to notice all the appointments in this letter but it would take up too much room in your excellent paper. If you will allow me I will report them in my next.

Revival in Newberne

Messrs Editors: We have onjoyed a gracious out ponring of the Spirit of the Lord in Newberne, such as has not visited this place for many years. It has been a time of spiritual power, and a gracious ingathering of souls. The Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist Churches have all shared in this great revival. In connection with our church, there have been 62 professions of faith in Christ and 65 have joined our church. Many of them are young men and women of great promise to the church. The revival commenced in the Sunday school, and spread out in the congregation. The results have been glorious

W. C. Gannon.

[The above notice should have appeared last week, but was unintentionally omitted We are glad to learn of the remarkable work of grace in Newberne and trust it will continue. —Eds.]

Errata.

In the letter of Bro. Brooks concerning the commencement at Wilson College, printed last week, some errors occurred, and we note the following corrections:

For "elevated and scientific truth," read "revealed and scientific truth." Instead of "these casual, but not very accurate scientific deliverances," read "casual, but yet very accurate,' etc. For "was more apparent," read "was made apparent." Instead of "exquisite teaching of his skillful hand," read "exquisite touches" etc. For "numerous hits and rallies of wit," it should read "humorous hits and sallies of wit."

Conference Notice.—Members of the Hillsboro District Conference, on their arrival in Chapel Hill, will report at the store of Long and Norwood, where they will be assigned to their homes.

The Methodists in Italy have twenty one preachers, twelve of whom are native Italians.

Ho! Excursionists.

Messrs Editors: I ask space to inform my friends who have written to me in regard to the Beaufort Excursion, that it is a perfect failure. I could not get a train on the N. C. Road without buying it, and I was not able to do that. The authorities asked me $1300 for 5 cars, and $150 for each additional car needed. I needed at least in all not less than 15 cars. This would have run the amount up to $2800, a sum which I was required to pay before the train could move off from Salisbury. Add to this $100 for Western Road, $200 for printing and advertising, and the expense of the trip would have been about $3100.

Now, each car would carry about 60 persons The 15 cars would carry about 900 persons. These would pay an average of $3, making $2700 At these figures I would fall minus $400.

But as I proposed to run the excursion in order to get money to build the New College house, I have concluded to pay the $400 to the College and not pay it to the N. C. Railroad.

I would like to know who controls the N. C. Road. I engaged the sympathies of the managers on the Western Road, and requested some very prominent men in the Church, as well as men of both political parties, to pray for me. But it was of no avail.

I turn to the children for help

Yours truly,
R. L. Abernethy.

Revivals.

Messrs Editors: While reading an article in your paper upon the subject of "christian work,' noticing the statement that the revival season had opened, my memory took me back to times when, and places where I have seen attempts at revivals fail and others succeed. And I could but ask why is this? And no v could not some of our experienced brethren tell us why? There is a cause of failure and there is a cause of success. Would it not be interesting to know the cause of these results? Would it not be interesting just at this time to have through the Advocate, timely hints upon the cause of success in revival work. The time is now near at hand when most of our churches will be engaged in prosecuting revival work, and we know not how many will have their destiny fixed, this Fall, for weal or woe I, for one, am anxious to know the cause of success in revivals. I regard this as the greatest work of the church. And if I think I know how to succeed I may be deceived; so let us have your experience brethren.

Bro. A. you attempted a revival some time ago, but you failed. Do you know the cause? Tell us. B. you attempted a revival some time ago and you succeeded. Do you know the cause? Tell us. If you will not tell us the cause of failure, do tell us the cause of success. Then we shall know how to succeed, if we do not know how to fail. I had rather know the former.

MISSIONARY COLLECTIONS.

The second and third quarter drafts drawn by the Bishops on the Treasurer of the Board of Missions, are now falling due.

In order to enable us to meet them, the preachers are hereby requested to forward to me, immediately, the amounts collected by them in their several charges for Foreign Missions. Brethren who have not taken up their collections will please do so at once, and forward the same to me.

A. H. Redford,
Treas. Board of Missions.

NOTICE.

Rev. G. W Hardison writes under date of 13th inst. concerning his work in Onslow and says:

"The Lord has blessed us with a glorious revival of religion at Tabernacle. It was very powerful. We have had 17 accessions, and more expected. The church has been greatly strengthened. We feel constrained to say, "Glory be to God for what we have seen, heard and felt during the past week."

Stand for the Right.—Of all the acts of cowardice, the meanest is that which leads to abandon a good cause because it is weak, and joining a bad cause because it is strong. The smitten deer is said to be abandoned by the herd; it is the instinct of the brute; but in the higher law which reigns in the breast of mankind and womankind, you never saw the smitten son abandoned by the mother. I have, in the great questons of the day, educational and religions, in Scotland and Ireland, cast in my lot with the minority; which in due season became the majority; when I left any cause, it was because it had waxed strong, and did not need my poor aid. We have to see to it that, in the struggle of life, we stand by right, and not by might, being sure that in the end the right shall have the might.—Pres. McCosh.—The Sabbath Record.

A regular attendant on the ministers' meeting at Boston is reported to have said: 'Some of the brethren have weighty thoughts, but have difficulty in uttering them; others express themselves with facility, but communicate little of value The former have ball without powder; the latter, powder without ball" That is just the difficulty with the majority of ministers, outside of that seat of learning as well as in it. A proper combination of powder and ball, well fired off, is an exceedingly felicitous thing.

The Transylvania Presbyterian says "that Salem church (Kentucky) which has just lost its pastor, Rev. E. O Guerrant, by his removal to Mt. The Jewish Messenger, of New York, calls upon the police of the city to look after the Jewish traders who observe neither their own Sabbath nor the Christian Sunday, but do business on both days. The Messenger says: "They should be taught a sharp lesson that one Sabbath must be strictly observed, and that lawlessness and impiety must not be encouraged in this great city."

After years of controversy the English Methodists seem disposed to favor lay representation in the General Conference. The representative committee have voted that the Conference consist in future of 220 ministers and 220 laymen, and there is no question but that the Conference will ratify their action.

This is the season of the year when the Indians in the vicinity of Spotted Tail and Red Cloud agencies have their annual festivity of worshiping the sun. The ceremonies are performed in a round enclosure of high poles, covered with buffalo skins, to shield the Indians from the gaze of outsiders. There are equestrian exercises, varied with self inflicted tortures, in which the Indians show their power of enduring suffering The ceremonies last for three or four days, and close with a grand carouse, in which much "firewater" is consumed This stimulates them to deeds of daring, and then they are ready to go on the war-path in good earnest.—Sun.

The Asheville Expositor says, it is indeed distressing to hear of so much sickness and so many deaths in and around Asheville at this particular time. There seems to be an epidemic of some kind among the childen, and there has been an average of one death to the day for the last eight days within the corporation.

Mr John Butler, living near this place, has a child two years old, who had been sickly and feverish for some time, which the parents attributed to worms. Having no medicine in the house, Mr. Butler concluded to give the child some lime water which was prepared; but, proving unpalatable, the child would not take much of it. He then put some lime in a glass of sweet milk, which the child readily drank, and soon after the little fellow passed a tapeworm fifteen feet long.—Morganton Blade.

THE WAR IN THE EAST.

WASHINGTON July 18 —The report of Gen'l. Ohmpieff concerning the Turkish cruelties says the Turks have killed several hundred women and children. In Bosnia they are cutting women and children to pieces and throwing them in the air and catching them upon bayonets. They cut off the heads or noses of the dead and wounded, as was the wounded Turkish prisoners are cut like Servians, Selim Pacha, who was reported killed at Salem has escaped to Scutari, leaving his guns, baggage and ammunition. Mukhtar Pacha is actively pushing his advance south of Shumla, and is concentrating troops from Bosnia and Servia, for battle. The cowardice of the Montenegrins permits the invasion of the defences. The powers consider Roumania's demand inopportune. Greece has bought 14,000 rifles in Germany. Trustworthy intelligence from Constantinople say the Sultan is greatly depressed mentally, and secluded from his courtiers. The last time he received him his manner was strange, he displayed alternate signs of depression and violent disturbance. The investiture ceremony was delayed because of the Sultana's illness.

THE INDIAN WAR.

NEW YORK, July 18.—A Bismarck Dakota dispatch of July 17th says. Sherman and Sheridan certainly under estimate the strength of the hostilities. Sitting Bull's Band before it was joined by Crazy Horse, numbered 1,800 lodges and over 6,000 effective fighting force, and Crazy Horse has proven himself strong enough to defeat Crook in every engagement without the aid of Sitting Bull. Col. Burke, the agent at Standing Rock, who is certainly well informed, and not disposed to exaggerate their strength, estimates the fighting force of the sioux at 10,000 and it should be remembered that the women and children are not elements of weakness, for every nine year old boy will handle a gun, stone, mallett or bow, to better advantage than a majority of the recruits handle their guns The squaws do camp drudgery and are ready for battle if their services are needed. Sitting Bull's Sioux are lost 150, and the other band nearly as many, in Custer's fight.

The Rees at For Lincoln mourned several days over Custer's death cutting themselves with knives, and exhibiting genuine sorrow in other ways peculiar to Indians On request to mourn, and in the widest manner called on General Custer's spirit to drive the white's from the land and insisted that his brave band would do it. On Thursday next six companies of the twenty second regiments two companies of the 6th Infantry and one hundred recruits for the seventh cavalry, will leave here under the command of Col. Otis of the twenty second to reinforce General Terry. So far no troops have gone to his assistance, four companies which were under his immediate command were ordered to Chicago, and have been encamped promptly in its fields, and have been encamped there for several days. Under marshy Col. Smith, General Terry's Adjutant General, left for Lincoln to return to the scene of operations the day before Col. Otis arrived As a result the Colonel's command which is largely composed of old Indian fighters is pushing under the delay. However everything is being put in order, and as soon as the balance of the force arrives Col. Otis will advance The steamer Carroll arrived today and will return immediately with reinforcement and supplies The condition of General Custers widow continues to be alarming, during the funeral service at her house yesterday she fainted and remained in a swoon nearly an hour.

Dr. William Harvey.

Spent not less than eight long years of investigation and research before he published his views of the circulation of the blood to him the medical world is indebted for much of its knowledge of our bodies "so fearfully and wonderfully made."

To the study of the liver which holds so important a relation to the digestive organs that there's scarcely a malady that affects the organism but that it participates in it, Dr. PIERCE, of New York, has devoted twenty-five years. The fruits of his labors have been to furnish to the world a medicine which has produced an entire revolution in the mode of treating the diseases that result from a derangement of that important organ. PIERCE'S GOLDEN PELLETS are now regarded as the safest remedy for diseases of the liver, and have proven a great blessing to the invalid. Their virtues are recognized by the medical profession and physicians in all parts of the country have adopted them in their practice.

Resolutions of respect are subject to the same rule.

Died at her aunt's residence in Carteret co. on the 5th inst. Miss Nannie Rumley, in her 19th year, only daughter of Washington and Caroline Rumley.

"In the midst of life we are in death."

How forcibly are we reminded of these admonitory words, by the death of her whose name and virtues we now commemorate. In the bloom and vigor of youth, with promise of long life and all that is innocently attractive, blooming joyously before her, she was cut down and consigned to an early grave.

From childhood Nannie was beloved for her sweetness of disposition, evenness of temper, rectitude of conduct and exemplary life.

In her deportment she was retiring and unassuming, possessing great simplicity of manners, at the same time marked decision of character, moved by tender sympathy and generous impulses. She was ready at all times to espouse the cause of the absent, the injured or the distressed; as a daughter she was dutiful and affectionate, as a friend true and devoted

During her connection with the schools of Mrs. Norman and H. S. Lee, she secured by her amiable disposition, and attention to duty the confidence and love of both teachers and pupils. She studied much to repay the solicitude of her teachers and the kindness and care of her fond and doating mother, by faithfully improving the means given her for mental culture, by setting an example worthy of imitation, and by diffusing in every circle of her association, the cheerfulness for which she was remarkable.

Long will her virtues be cherished by her friends, and her memory embalmed in the best affections of the heart.

"The gentle, lofty, and delicate,
We love to have them so;
And yet for that we love them most,
They are the first to go!
Excess of tenderness
They seek their native heaven;
To ripen for a nobler bud,
A earth for them has spread."

RICHARD LEFFERS.

Died in Cary, N. C., on the 29th, of June 1876, Mrs Margaret E., wife of Mr James B. Page, in the 36th year of her age.

The death of sister Page has cast a dark shadow over the entire community.

Sad and many devoted friends and a large circle of relatives, all of whom have been called upon, unexpectedly, to give up and mourn the departure of a loved one. But they weep not as those who have no hope, for the smiles of heaven shining upon the dying, have paints in beautiful colors the bow of promise upon the dark cloud that death hath projected, and by its light they read: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live and whoso ever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. "Sister Page embraced religion in the summer of 1873, under the ministry of Rev A R. Raven, she and her husband bowed together at the altar, together they consecrated themselves to the service of God, together they walked in sweet peace for a few short years, but the time of separation came. She has been called away and he with four little motherless children are left to walk alone. May God bless the bereaved husband the motherless children and all the family "to whom all at last must share the inevitable lot," where in all the bright forever sorrow never shall press the soul.

SOMETHING NEW!

AN IMPROVED REMEDY.—CANNABIS INDICA.

This wonderful preparation, known by the above title, which has at last attained such celebrity during the last few years in all parts of the United States as a positive CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA, can now be obtained at all first-class druggists. We have made permanent arrangents in Calcutta, India, for obtaining "PURE HEMP," and having it extracted upon its own soil (the climate in America being so changeable) to extract large quantities free from mildew. These remedies are now prepared from the best Hemp, gathered at the right season, and extracted during midsummer in Calcutta. There is not a single symptom of Consumption that it does not dissipate, and it will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical.

$2.50 per bottle or 3 bottles for $6.50.

As this is an imported article, we do not commission our remedies, but will be pleased to make Cash Agents every where. Address

THE BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS

AS A MEDICINAL AGENT.

Testimony of Distinguished Persons:

LETTER OF THE HON M. W. RANSOM, UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COL. THOS. F. GOODE. WELDON, N. C., September 27, 1875.

Dear Sir—It gives me great pleasure to state that I regard the Buffalo Lithia Waters as second to none in the United States.

Mrs. Ransom has been greatly benefited from their use. My health has been decidedly improved by them, and my observation of their effects upon invalids and diseased persons generally is, that at least nine-tenths of all the sick who resort to them are manifestly and permanently relieved.

Yours, with high regard,

M. W. RANSOM.

Letter of the Rev. Thos. Wharey, now of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina, one of the most distinguished divines of the South:

KENSVILLE, Jan. 1, 1876.

COL. GOODE:

Dear Sir—It affords me great pleasure to give you my opinion of the Buffalo Springs, formed from what I heard and saw while there last summer, and also from what I have learned both before and since from conversations with intelligent physicians and sufferers who had been relieved (some of them brought from the borders of the grave) by the use of the water. I hope you will be successful in bringing these waters into general notice, and sending them to the afflicted all over the land, for I regard you in so doing as a great public benefactor.

The buffalo waters are certainly among the most remarkable in the world. They are exceedingly exhilarating in their effects, enlivening the spirits, giving appetite and tone to the system, and promoting digestion in a marvelous way. The cases are too numerous to mention of wretched dyspeptics who have been perfectly cured by this water in a few weeks. Its effect also upon constitutional maladies which have been shattered by chills and fever is simply marvelous. Lean, sallow, ague shaken, hollow-eyed sufferers have visited Buffalo, and in a few days their eyes have brightened, and their pale cheeks have flushed again with the line of health. The effect of these waters too in some cases of paralysis, gout, rheumatism and affections of the kidneys has appeared magical, and female constitutions seem to be benefited by their use in a remarkable degree and female diseases relieved in a way that is wonderful. Two of the best testimonials to the real value of these waters are, first, that intelligent physicians in the whole surrounding country, who have seen them tried, recommend their use in certain cases in the most unqualified terms; and second, that the people generally living in the neighborhood of these Springs have such implicit faith in their virtues—during the summer, and I suppose during nearly the whole year, they come every day with their bottles, jugs, demijohns and barrels to obtain a fresh supply of what they seem to regard as the elixir vitæ. There can be no doubt that, for nearly all diseases, except those affecting the throat and lungs, these are among the most valuable waters in the world.

Yours very truly,

THOS WHAREY.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.

Will begin its twenty-seventh Annual Session, September 21st, 1876. Rev W. A. HARRIS, D. D., President, will call the attention of twenty-three Teachers and Officers

Modern Languages taught and spoken in the College by a native French Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among whom are some of the most talented teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union as marked effects the rapid promotion of the health and vigor of our pupils Those who come here from the south will find the constitutions, and climate unknown, are generally restored.

Buildings the best—furnished by purest breeze, commanding the most magnificent scenery, and combining such rare attractions as to make it one of the most delightful Colleges for girls in the Union

This School has been attended by pupils from fifteen to seventeen different States

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A simple uniform is worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practiced to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop D. S. Doggett, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., recently re-organized by Rev. W. A. Harris, is, my judgment, one of the best institutions for female education in the South I have occasion to know and appreciate fully the advantages enjoyed by one of its daughters there, its course of study is ample its faculty accomplished, and its instruction both solid and ornamental. Its second recommendation are all that can be desired for health and comfort, or taste. No better could be more eligibly surrounded, nor one more favorable to the atmosphere more salubrious. Not the least of its claims, is that sacred regard for religious training, without which no Female College especially, would be a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT.

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Church, their course is thorough, in music, advantages are offered of very high order. The most talented Professors are employed, at a better price for experience and regard to health than at pettiest colleges.

E. M. MARVIN.

From Prof P H Smith, M A L L D., University of Virginia.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys. Having had a daughter at one of its sessions, my observation leads me to believe the school to be one of the best of Female Seminaries within whose walls our State's Daughters of the Wesleyan Female Institute should be gathered overflowing with pupils from all our South ern States.

Saying "Please"

Who could help loving fair-haired, bright eyed little Bonnell? He is one of those mischievous eight-year olds that one must pet in spite of one's self. And yet he is not all mischief, either. Now and then he makes one's eyes open with astonishment, and one's hands go up with the exclamation: 'What a child!'

Bonnell's pa is rather careless about religious matters, and sits down often at the table without thinking of the blessing.

'Pa,' said the little fellow, 'ma says God made you. Did he, pa?

'Yes, he made me.'

'Well, pa, are you glad he made you?'

'Why, Bonnell, of course I am; what questions you do ask.'

The child's mind was evidently working out a problem, but he did not exactly know what it was.

After a pause: 'Pa, what does Uncle Charles ask a blessing for at the table?'

'I suppose because he wants to.'

'He says he wants to thank God for his dinner, but I told him that you worked for your dinner and made it. God does not give it to you, does he, pa?'

'Well, yes; I suppose he gives me mine, too.'

Bonnell looked up with astonishment, and then fell to vigorously with his knife and fork. Suddenly he asked again:

'Pa, does God want Uncle Charles to thank him?'

'Yes, child; I suppose so.'

More silence.

'Pa, I'm very glad God is not like you, for if he was, we would never get anything more to eat, and then we'd starve."

'Why, Bonnell, what do you mean!'

'I was just thinking. You would not give sister that apple 'cos she would not say 'please;' and if God is that sort of way, he never would give us anything more, because we do not thank him, like Uncle Charles.'

'Be quiet, Bonnell, you do not know what you are talking about.'

The rest of the meal was eaten in silence, but that very night at tea, Bonnell's father astonished his family by saying, 'please' to God.—Selected.

Rural and Domestic.

A SPECIFIC AGAINST HYDROPHOBIA.

The British Medical Journal says: "Dr. Grzyvala, of Krivoe Ozero, Podolia, for whose trustworthiness Prof. Gubler, of Paris, vouches, declares, that, after a series of crucial trials, which he describes at length, he has found that, after having had opportunities of treating at least one hundred cases of men bitten by rabid dogs with the Xanthium spinosum, he has never in any one of these cases failed to ward off hydrophobin. He gives some startling examples. During the Crimean war a family of twelve persons had been bitten by a hydrophobic wolf. Six of them entered his wards in the hospital of Olschanka, government of Podolia, district of Balta. They were treated with infusion of the leaves of the Xanthium, and all recovered. The six others, who were treated by the actual cautery and the daily use of Genista tinctoria and other drugs, died with hydrophobia in the course of twelve to sixty days. He recounts many other facts not less striking. For an adult the dose is sixty centigrammes of the dry powder, repeated three times a day, and continued during six weeks. Children under twelve take half that quantity. The dose for animals is much larger. A herd of thirty oxen had been bitten by a mad wolf. Eight had succumbed, with symptoms of hydrophobia. The commissary of police came to Dr. Grzyvala for his 'antirabic powder.' He gave three ounces of the powder, with bran, daily to each of the animals. None of them suffered from the disease. These are examples of which Dr. Grzyvala says he has a hundred others. Fiat experimentum. We have heard too often of specifics for hydrophobia not to regard this last claimant with sorrowful suspicion. But the herb is, at least, a harmless one. Its ordinary properties seem to be mainly sudorific: and since animals suffering from rabies are only too frequently at hand, and the remedy is one which grows plentifully in the middle regions of France, as well as Podolia, let us hope that our French colleagues will lose no time in putting this prophylactic to the test.

WATERING HORSES AFTER FEEDING

Probably one-half of our farmers practice watering their teams immediately after eating. There is nothing about the stable economy worse than this, except, perhaps, allowing the animals to go altogether uncleansed or half cleansed from day to day. A large portion of the water drank by horses, especially where large quantities are given, goes directly to the intestines, and, if given, immediately after eating, carries a considerable portion of undigested food with it, to be voided whole or nearly so. Thus the contents of the stomach are washed out of it before digestion takes place, and the food is entirely lost.

Some years ago experiments were made in Edinburg with the following results. Old horses were fed with split peas, and then supplied with water immediately before being killed. It was found that the water had carried the peas from fifty to sixty feet into the intestines, where no digestion took place at all.

Therefore the animals should be offered water before eating, and in no case should they be given it immediately after eating, except enough to just moisten the food swallowed. We have for years practiced the plan of never allowing a horse to drink more than a bucket of water at a time. In nine cases in ten the animal will refuse more if offered after the lapse of five or ten minutes. The same rule will apply to other stock, especially to fattening stock. They should have sufficient fluid only to answer the purposes of digestion

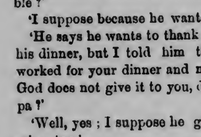
LIQUID EXCREMENT.

How strangely we overlook the vaule of the liquid excrement of our animals! A cow, under ordinary feeding, furnishes in a year twenty thousand pounds of solid excrement, and about eight thousand pounds of liquid. The comparative money value of the two is but slightly in favor of the solid. This statement has been verified as truth, over and over again. The urine of herbiverous animals holds nearly all the secretions of the body which are capable of producing the rich nitrogenous compounds so essential as forcing or leaf-forming agents in the growth of plants. The solid holds the phosphoric acid, the lime, and magnesia, which go to the seeds principally; but the liquid, holding nitrogen, potash and soda, is needed in forming the stalk and leaves. The two forms of plant nutriment should never be separated or allowed to be wasted by neglect. The farmer who saves all the urine of his animals doubles his mannral resources every year. Good season peat is of an immense service to farmers, when used as an absorbent, and the stalls for animals should be so constructed as to admit of a wide passage in the rear, with generous passage room for peat, to be used daily with the excrement.—Journal of Chemistry.

They were talking of a death, when one man asked: 'What were his last words?' 'He didn't say anything,' was the reply. 'That's just like him,' said the first man, with an approving nod. 'There was no gas about him. He was all business.'

A Health-Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulation is not only desirable, but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined with it, it becomes infinitely more obnoxious as a removant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have secured the emphatic sanction of medical man who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other disorders. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and its self possessing tonic properties of no mean order.



If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as

Dr Simmons' Liver Regulator,
OR MEDICINE.

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, Bilious sufferers, victims of Fever and Ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits and good appetite—they will tell you by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator, The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World.

VALUABLE
Real Estate for Sale
—AT—
PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5 000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine bottom lands, with splendid, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour, and circular saw mills are situated on the farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, lies well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills, good residence and one large brick building 36 by 50 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 331 acres, lying on Ararat and Reed Creek, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a lot of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill Known as the Havstack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 70 miles

The New Church in Wilmington

Messrs Editors: I have perused the communications of Bro. Hudson in regard to the introduction of Methodism in the "Old North State," with much interest, and trust he will not only continue them for your columns but also in book form, as we need a history of that character, and with his view and with the idea of assisting him in his noble work, (and with no intention of interfering with his editorial right in this respect), I send a publication a clipping on the above subject from the pages of a little work styled Methodism, or Christian Harmest, written by Mrs. M. Mar[illegible] the wife of a former pastor of our church) edited by Rev. Thos. O. [illegible] and published by our publishing house

Yes, thanks be to God, there is once more a Methodist Church erected in Wilmington. That it may be rightly understood what peculiar reason there is for devout gratitude and thanksgiving on this occasion, it will be necessary to go back, by way of reminiscence, and gather up a few items of the past, in connection with the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this place.

Although some mention is made of Wilmington in the minutes as early as 1784, Methodism, by name at least, was almost utterly unknown here until about the year 1791, when three faithful disciples of the Lord Jesus, William Meredith and Jesse Jennett, were moved of God to come and take up their abode in Wilmington. It was, indeed, a marvelous and blessed coincidence, and as subsequent events proved, of God, in bringing these two men, strangers to each other as to very name and character, yet of one heart and purpose, about the very same time, determine, with the help of God, to unfurl the gospel banner in Wilmington. True yoke fellows were they, and working with one heart and mind, together, accomplished a work, which singly and alone might have been well given up as hopeless. One, long since, has been called to his exceeding great reward—the other still lives as a venerable connecting link between those times and the present, the patriarch of the place, the revered and beloved of all, for who does not, in Wilmington, even the saint or sinner, honor dear, good old father Jennett?

Last Sunday was a great day for this dear old saint of the Lord, as in truth it was for the most of us in Wilmington. Most of us knew, (for who of us had not, at least heard all about it from father Jennett,) how that one William Meredith, at that time a follower of Hammett, came, led by the spirit of the Lord, as a missionary of the gospel, to Wilmington.

He gathered at first, a few colored people around him, but the public authorities, jealous of his ministry, thought effectually to put a stop to it by a law prohibiting the holding meetings with colored people after sunset. Meredith arose before sunrise, and collected at that early hour, his little band of worshippers: the public authorities, however, for this imprisoned him in the common jail: but like Garrettson, Lee, and others of sainted memory, he held forth the word, long and loud, from his prison windows all day, and nearly all night, assembling such crowds of people round the jail, and causing thereby so much commotion and excitement in the whole community, that they were soon fain to get rid of their troublesome lodger.

On his liberation, what think ye, says father Jennett, was the first thing he did? Why assemble the colored people for worship that very evening! But no man, any more laid hands upon him, for open his mouth he would, and they prudently considered he had better be allowed the freedom of speech anywhere than at the jail windows, for no where else did they apprehend he would gather such attentive and crowded congregations. Straightway then, he proceeded to the erection of a house of worship on what he considered a more eligible site than even where the jail stood: It was built on what he called, and what still goes by the name of "Zion's Hill."

But the malice of his persecutors still pursued him. His little meeting house, that had gone up in the midst of prayers and tears, was very soon after its completion, the mark for the deep-toned vengence of the incendiary. But on its smoking ruins he took his stand, and there preached the gospel of the grace of God to the greatly astonished, and at length, sympathizing multitude. A kind hearted gentleman stepping up to him from the excited crowd, said, "friend, you had better spare your feelings: your house is not in a proper state to preach at this time." "Sir," said he, "I carry not my sermons in my pocket. I keep them in my heart, and the fire has not reached there." Soon a temporary tabernacle and then another place of worship were erected by the undaunted Meredith. A few white members now began to unite themselves with the little, despised band of colored people But the days of the devoted Meredith were now drawing to a close" And what will become of my people, my poor people!" said he to his fellow laborer, Jennett "Will you consent to go in and out before them, as I have endeavored to do, my brother." But the discreet advice of Jennett was, that they should be attached, as a church, to some established body of christians.

"Then," said Meredith. "I do solemnly bequeath this little church to Bishop Asbury, in trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Methodists are the people most after my own heart, and I believe they are they, under God, who are to be most effectual in carrying on the great work of evangelizing the world. A work has begun here," said Meredith, "which shall go on when I have passed into eternity: and a church is established here, which I expect to look down upon with joy, from the shining courts of glory." Meredith died, and the waning of his poor colored flock was oftentimes loud and long and glorious for him. The seed sown had not fallen by the wayside, but on good ground, and sprang up soon in abundant increase. The word of God grew mightily and prevailed. The little church built by Meredith might soon no longer contain the people for multitude. Another house, larger and more commodious was then erected on the same sacred site. This was the church so recently destroyed by fire: and now, on this "Zion's Hill" this present place of worship, just completed, is the fourth (as is the Tabernacle of Meredith) that has been erected to the name and for the worship of Almighty God.

A great day it was for the Methodist people in Wilmington, and a glad day when the scattered flock, after two years of inconvenience and discomfort, once more assembled together in a better and more commodious place of worship than they ever had before This fine new church, besides being very commodious in its substantial basement, with Sunday-school and class rooms, and preacher's office and library, is built in very beautiful and accurate taste—a model, in this respect, for our Methodist churches generally: constructed after the order of the noble Doric, plain, but massive and dignified in its appearance: its stately colonnade in front, of grave sandstone, striking the beholder as an elegant specimen of architectural skill. Immediately on entering, the eye is once riveted on the motto above, and encircling the altar, in large golden characters in basso relievo, "For mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people." It formed the text for the dedication sermon, preached in the forenoon by the Rev. Whiteford Smith, Presiding Elder of the District. In the course of his remarks he touchingly alluded (and there were few dry eyes while he did so) to the last sermon he had preached about two years ago, as near so as possible to where he then stood, when the cry of fire was given, and soon their beautiful house, where their fathers had worshipped, was destroyed by fire, and all their pleasant things had waste;" but how that God had given them even a better house, and kept them from harm while they had worshipped in the tabernacle, and now by his love had brought them safely to his fold again. The pastor of the church, the Rev. William Martin, in the afternoon took his text from Solomon's dedicatory prayer for the temple.

He remarked the striking though undesigned coincidence of the dedication of this temple, with that of Solomon's, both taking place on the 16th day of the month, —and "the feast" (ours a protracted meeting) continuing until the 23rd, on which day the people in Solomon's time "went away into their tents glad and merry in heart for the goodness that God had showed unto David, to Solomon, and to Israel his people," Brethren, pray for us, that we, in Wilmington, may go from our "feast" on next Sabbath, "the twenty-third," "glad and merry of heart for the goodness God hath showed unto Israel his people." The Rev Dr. McCabe, of Richmond, at night, preached from these solemn words, "For the redemption of the soul is precious, and it ceaseth forever: and we trust, not without great and powerful effect on the immense audience before him The congregations, all day, were overflowing. The people seemed to be flocking as doves to their windows The first time in the morning was "Old Hundred." We have a delightful choir in Wilmington, one of the finest I know anywhere, and generally it swells in its full tide of song even above the music of the congregation; but at intervals as one single note of silvery sweetness. Much as I love fine music, I confess there and then I did not regret that old Harry Merrick's dear old cracked voice, from the gallery, was heard above all the rest. Nobody listened to it but felt there were notes there that had gone right up to make up the heavenly dimpason. To the Christian's heart, at least, it was "harmony, it was heavenly harmony." But ere we close this, we hope not too tedious detail, it must not be forgotten to be made mention of, that very early in the morning, ere it was yet day, father Jennett met the colored people in the basement for the purpose (as has been his wont these many years) of expounding to them the Scriptures. "O," said he, the tears of joy streaming from his eyes, "how Meredith" is looking down. sure enough, from the courts of glory this day."

Wilmington, N. C. February 18th 1845.

"The remains of MEREDITH beloved, and FATHER DOUGHERTY of precious memory, are entombed under the front corners of the colonade of the new Church.—FATHER JENNETT has died since the foregoing was written."

Old Harry Merrick, the colored class leader alluded to above, went to his reward many years ago.

In our 1st number, an effort was made to present the importance of the moral element in the education of the young. We desire still to pursue the same line of thought in the present article.

Nothing is more fully established than the philosophical fact, that man is a trinne being, composed of three distinct natures, each under the control of laws peculiar to itself, and all so beautifully and harmoniously blended as to become a unit being, controlled by general laws Each of these natures, too, has its own proper functions to perform in the normal development of the complex unit we call man. His physical structure is the germ and root of this unit, by which he is attached to the material non ego of existence, and in which, as an instrumentality, the two higher natures are developed and matured. This lowest strata of his being has the earth for its sphere, and in its materials of existence, claims kinship with the bat, the fowl and the animal. Its halls of education are the fields, the workshop and all places of manual and gymnastic or calisthenic exercises. If this department is educated at the expense of the others, men, like the old Macedonians, become strong, stalwart animals, with small intellectuality.

Man's mental nature allies him to the gods. It is the intermediate and uniting link between the physical and moral The former inclines him to the earth and makes him earthly: the latter points him upward to God and heaven. Upon this department, our schools and colleges expend most of their forces. Here, too, they make a sad mistake. It is true that this department needs peculiar and special development and training, far above that of the physical. But in its importance, it bears but little comparison to the necessity of educating the moral.

This is only the knowing nature of man; a power or ability possessed by the human soul to cognize, in the light of consciousness, the me and the not me of this world; and which, in connection with sensibility, understanding, judgment and reason, (the last three of which belong to man's moral nature,) takes cognizance of the moral relations of ideas and draws conclusions from logical premises.

This department being only a power to know, is not a subject of depravity. It has been much impaired by the fall; but it has not been made sinful. It needs the potent hand of education to strengthen its powers for the great duties of life. It is the bloom of this incomprehensible physio—mental—moral plant: the physical being the body, and the moral being the fruit. Now, as the fruit is greater and of more importance than the tree or its bloom, so the moral portion of man is greater than either the physical or mental.

The moral nature of man is the crowning element of his being. It is the power and ability to cognize the moral relations among our ideas; to discriminate the right in moral actions from the wrong. It has for its basis the reason, self consciousness, understanding, judgment, imagination and free will. These are parts and parcels of his complex being as capable of education as any other powers of his nature. They need specific objects for contemplation in order to their development in a moral sense.—Left without inspiration and culture, like all other neglected possibilities, they soon wither and die.

The supreme importance of moral education is seen in the fact that, the moral character of us as we in our present state are capable of judging, shall remain forever unchanged. Our physical, we know, shall be changed into the immortal condition; hence, will not be just what it is here. The mind for aught we know may not be needed in eternity. But man's moral character shall remain unchanged in the cycles of endless duration, only to be come more fixed and intensified as we move down the endless line of God's eternity How important, then, is moral education!

Morning in Summer.

It is a fact not to be concealed that too many persons in our country fail to behold the most beautiful portions of the day in consequence of a habit of sleeping late in the morning. Some may, though rising early, not perceive with any great degree of pleasure the works of nature as we see them beautified at early morn. To effect a reformation with some, anything that I may say would be a hopeless task, but with such as have not become confirmed in their customs, I may advance some attractive ideas that may compensate me for the effort.

Take the first glimmerings of day. before night has fully retired from office, and when the inaugural ceremonies of day, of beast and fowl and bird have just commenced. What a joyful strain salutes the ear. And what a mellow flood of light fills the scene of vision! How gently the first rays of light break the intelligence to darkness and assure it that in its turn light must rule. There is no parleying. No more surely does light advance than does darkness retire. Gorgeous clouds may gather in the east but no postponement of matters and things in the west. From the mountain top that first received the rays of the sun to the grassy lawn in some deep secluded dell there is no show of partiality From the long day of ancient Gideon till the present the world has been treated about the same in respect to light.

How suggestive is this early hour! Another miracle is being wrought.—A few minutes ago and a vast pall of gloom was settled over nature's most exquisite works. Now light grapples with darkness as intelligence with ignorance. One must yield for a time—the other hold sway. Ignorance winds up with joy. Light enters upon its work with gestures of delight and all nature shouts it welcome. See at this hour, that beautiful star as it modestly disappears without pomp or ceremony. Behold the silvery moon as she closes her business for the day and yields a gentle acquiescence to her liege lord! No jar. No discord.—No hesitancy on their part. Submissive, quiet, complacent, waiting in modest expectancy to fulfill their respective duties when time has made it necessary. We should hail the morning in manner as a dear friend. If we do not catch the healthful breeze it is soon gone. If we catch not the aroma of flowers their fragrance will soon waste While the dew glistens upon the tender grass—while the soft notes of airy songsters are touched—and while the lulling sound of the water fall is not entirely lost in the day's ceaseless din, stand out, O man, and breathe, and look, and listen, and in thy heart thank and praise and pray—worship Him, the Author of morning, for every blessing it affords.

Religion Enough

"I think I've religion enough," was the reply of a man of about eighty years of age, on our calling attention to the subject of religion. 'O, I have religion enough,' is the feeling of every unregenerate and unawakened soul. And did such only know the secret truth of the case, such claim, and such state of feeling, are a betrayal of a total want of that saving grace indispensable to every man. When a man feels no want of any more religion than he already possesses, it is only saying that he has none at all: and, worse still, it is a woeful betrayal of the fact that he is quite ignorant of the nature of Christ's religion. Such a one neither knows himself nor his real wants. And when he finds himself feeling so secure, so self satisfied, let him take the alarm, and institute the inquiry if all is really well.

It is no sign of knowledge when a man fancies himself very wise; and so it is no good proof that a man is wise in the sight of God when he says within himself, 'I have need of nothing.' They who hunger and thirst after righteousness are blessed in the sight of God. They who cry, 'God be merciful to me a sinner, are justified and saved, while those who boast of their righteousness and who glory in their works must remember that Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance, and that while he fills the poor with good things, the rich he sends empty away. —Christian.

Letter From Japan.

REV D C. KELLEY, D D.—My Dear Brother: You will see by my address that I am in Japan I arrived here last Thursday, the 1st of this month, and expect to return on my way to Shanghai to morrow, the 7th. Before leaving Shangai, on the 24th of May, I had been improving each day, and was advised by our physician and others to come to Japan for a few weeks. Taking advantage of the exceeding low prices from Shanghai to Yokohama, I left home on the 24th of May, and reached this place on the 1st of June, and have been kindly entertained by our kind friends, Dr. Maclay and his excellent wife and family, and also by other members of the Mission at this place and in the great city of Tokio. At first I felt some regret at leaving Shanghai for any length of time; but since reaching this place, and seeing something of the workings of the Spirit of God up on the hearts of these people, who seem ready with something more than willing hearts to receive the glad news of salvation through Christ, I have been glad indeed that the Lord has directed my steps here to witness these wonderful movements; and now I return to China with a heart full of thankfulness to God, and with a more earnest desire to press on in the good work of grace which has been commenced there. For three days I have been attending the quarterly-meeting of our Methodist brethren here, and my heart has been filled with joy at what I have witnessed. They have now in Yokohama twenty-one communicants, and seven in Tokio, and a number on probation. Their prayer-meetings and love feasts have been characterized by devotion and earnestness, and I have been surprised to see how punctual they have been in attending the services. North and South, all over the Empire of Japan, they are embracing Christianity as soon as they understand fully the message of salvation through Christ. At Nagasaki the Rev. Mr. Davison, of the Methodist Mission, told me there was a wonderful work of grace going on about forty miles from that city in the school taught by Captain Jayne. No missionary has any thing to do with this work. Captain Jayne had been sent for from America to teach the Japanese the art of war. When he arrived in Japan there was nothing for him to do in the army, and he determined to teach school. The result of this teaching has been that about forty young men have professed themselves soldiers of the cross of Christ. One young man has gone to Yeddo, entered the College there, and has been baptized. It is hoped others will come to Nagasaki and unite with the Church. In this school there was a young man whose father was wealthy and a man of influence. He laughed to scorn the faith of the Christian, and advised his son to have nothing to do with those who professed faith in Christ. The son, partaking of the spirit of his father, withdrew from the school, and commenced violent opposition This continued for some time. The father, observing the forbearance and meekness of those who professed faith in Christ, and the overbearing, haughty disposition of their persecutors, said to his son, "There must be some reality, some power in Christianity, with which they were not acquainted, and he had better return to school and examine into it." He did so, and both his father and himself are warm advocates of Christianity. They have prayer-meetings among themselves, and good is expected to result from the truth thus sown in their hearts.

At Kobe, in the inland sea, I met a custom house officer, who was on duty on board of our steamer. Seeing a Japanese book near him I took it up, and on reading the Chinese part of it I found it was a Christian book. I commenced a conversation with him in English and found he was a Christian, and said he attended Sabbath school in Kobe. I asked him if his father knew he was a Christian. He replied, "Yes, my father also is a Christian, and all the family." I told him I was so glad to know he was a Christian. He said, "I like Christianity very much. Christian people are all good people, and I hope all the Japanese will soon become Christians." Dr. Berry told me the number taken into the Church at Kobe this year and during the past winter was fifty four, and about the same number in Osaka and Kioto. They have thirty two missionaries including the ladies, and their Board had [illegible] would send all the men [illegible] spare. Japan is destined to be a second Madagascar before many years. Why cannot our Church come forward and help in the evangelization of these people? In many parts of the country they are imbuing false principles from ungodly men. German infidelity and skepticism is entering into the country, and, like a flood, will overspread the country, unless Christian people come forward, and with a holy zeal for the cause of God defend the faith of the religion they profess Now is the time when action should be taken. The people are in a transitory state, and ready everywhere to accept of Christianity when presented to them. Instead of the fifty missionaries in Japan there should be one thousand scattered all over the country. There are not Christian men and women sufficient to occupy all the places which are being opened by a wise Providence, and unless Christian men come and accept of these openings they will be filled by ungodly men. All Christian missionaries with whom I have conversed wished me to urge our Board to send men at once to this field and establish a Mission here in some part of Japan. I trust they will not delay taking action in reference to this field. We trust in time Japan will send missionaries to China I think there is no doubt about this. I am sorry our Church has not before this established a Mission in Japan among this interesting people. I hope it will be soon, that we, too, may take part in giving Christianity to this people. I feel sure that in six months I could speak this language, and be able to work among them. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain yours in the bonds of Christian fellowship.

The Influence of Books.

A little incident in the life of the poet Coleridge shows of how much importance in shaping his future destiny are the acts of even a boy. The poet in after years said of himself: "From eight to fourteen I was a day-dreamer and gluttonous devourer of books."

He was at that period an attendant at the 'Blue-Coat School,' and one day while walking along the street his mind was busy, as usual, in visionary, dreams of his favorite hero, and he imagined himself swimming across the classical Hellespont. In this fancied voyage he was throwing out his arm as if in the act of swimming, and ran one hand against the breast pocket of a gentleman who was approaching from the opposite direction

"What!" said the gentleman, "so young and yet so wicked. You tried to pick my pocket."

"I did not, sir," sobbed the frightened boy. "indeed, sir, I did not mean any such thing."

"Well, what were you doing with your hand so near my coat?' inquired the gentleman, now evidently softened by the boy's truthful face.

"I thought I was Leander, and that I was swimming across the Hellespont," was the ready response, "and I did not think of my hands coming in contact with any one in the water."

The gentleman laughed heartily at the novelty of the incident, and was so favorably impressed by the boy's simple-hearted frankness that he gave him a ticket of admission to a circulating library in Cheapside. He rightly judged that this readiness of access to books would be the highest possible gratification to such a youth, and herein was probably laid the foundation for the subsequent career of the poet Coleridge.

His wonderful metaphysical and philosophical talents were thus developed, and his rare colloquial powers cultivated by converse with books, till in "linked sweetness" he poured forth the melody of his cultivated genius to the delight of all about him.

His mind was fed, but the soul was starved; and when near the close of his life he frequently lamented that with an intellect such as few men of his aged had been blessed with, his career, in all the best purposes of life, had been a failure. Had the religious element mingled more largely in the books of which the circulating library was composed, how different might have been the career of this gifted man!

Books, even more than other surroundings, carve their own features upon the minds and hearts of the young and impressible; and too much care and judgment cannot be exercised in the selection of the literature of the school and family. All about us, sown broadcast over the whole land, is a literature reeking with infidelity, pollution and extravagance. Let us see to it that such books are crowded out of our houses by the introduction of those worthy to be read; and the false principles they inculcate out of the hearts and minds of our children, by laying the foundations of that true wisdom which cometh down from above, by a knowledge of God's holy word, a reverence for his Sabbaths, and a spirit of obedience to his laws.—American Messenger.

Mr. George Williams, of London, was the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association thirty-five years go. He still lives, and will be at the international convention which meets at Toronto, Canada, July 12th.

Dining with the Bedouins.

Before we began to eat, there was the hand wash enjoined by the Koran. The water was poured on our hands out of a jug, outside the tent, about half a pint being allotted to each.—The process was brief. The Arabs swung their hands, flapped them on their garments, and it was done—and they were no cleaner than before. This clearly was not the hygienic operation which Mahomet intended it to be, but, as may be inferred from this description, people here as elsewhere are prone to obey the letter of the law rather than its spirit I observed subsequently that when they desired to cleanse themselves more thoroughly they rubbed their hands with sand and, on rare occasions, with soap.

Semi-purified, we returned to our places in the tent, and the repast was served without a woman in sight. It consisted of a huge wooden bowl, about three feet in diameter, lined with thin batter cakes and overhanging the sides, the bowl being filled with boiled rice saturated with grease, probably butter made from goats' or camels' milk; in the centre of the rice was piled up a quantity of boiled mutton. The chief setting the example, we fell to on this mess, while the retainers and our dragoman, off the carpets, eyed us with envy and watered months.

For a man accustomed to a knife and fork, the eating presented difficulties, which, however, were partially overcome by closely observing the men who have never known any other aid in this way than what nature has given them. Yet they have an etiquette which governs them as tyrannically as our own. Only the right hand may be thrust into the bowl.—He who eats with the left is ill bred, and he who employs both is a glutton. We imitated our hosts as well as we could; thrust the right hand into the rice, made a ball of it the size of a hen's egg, squeezed the superfluous water and grease out of it, and twitched it into the mouth by a dexterous movement of the thumb, after the Bedouin manner, pronouncing occasionally the indispensable 'taib' in compliment to the Amphitryon.

Another feature of Arab etiquette was to confine one's self to the same place in taking from the bowl, each one making his own hole and remaining therein. In the beginning of the repast there is not much trouble in observing the rule; but when the general level of the rice and mutton lowered it required care to remain on the pre-empted domain, and not to invade that of the neighbor. The rule was hardly observed by my neighbor on the left, who was a voracious eator, with an indifferently clean hand; he at length ate away the barrier, entered my territory and pushed me to the right, where I fed on a narrow ledge until my appetite was satisfied; when this gave way, and the two holes merged into one, I stopped.—ALBERT RHODES, in July Galaxy.

Of What Church.

The New York Christian Advocate says:

A friend has just shown us a private letter received last week from Gov. Hayes' pastor (one of our preachers of the Central Ohio Conference,) from which we quote the following:

'The Governor is not a member of the church, though he hardly lacks anything more than having his name on the church record. He is a regular member of my congregation, and chairman of my board of trustees; and privately, I may tell you that he comes so near being a christian that he conducts worship in his family. Mrs Hayes is an earnest member of the church.'

As to Mr. Wheeler, the nominee for Vice President, one of different statements have appeared as to his church relationship, one stating that he is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, the other that he is a deacon in the Congregational Church. Both describe him as a man of firm religious convictions and habits—a fact of no small moment to all the Christian people of this great country. Now let us hear from St. Louis!"

President Grant is so near the kingdom that he has a Methodist wife, and this is about all that can be said for him religiously. Gov. Hayes has a wife who is an earnest member of the Methodist Church, and, although not a member himself, he is so nearly a Christian that he holds family prayer. Mr Wheeler is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, or a deacon in the Congregational Church. Our Northern Methodist brethren never forgot that Grant was a brother in-law, though somewhat loose in some of his ways, but they have a still better thing in Hayes, who has a pious Methodist wife, and is himself almost a Christian.

Gov. Tilden is so unfortunate as to have no wife, but is said to be piously disposed notwithstanding. Is a Presbyterian in faith, and owns and regularly occupies a pew in that church. Gov. Hendricks is reported to be a member of the Episcopal Church. We should judge the tickets to be about evenly balanced, religiously, and our votes must be determined by other considerations. Knowing, however, what the Methodist administration has been for the past eight years, we are willing to try a Presbyterian for awhile.—New Orleans Advocate.

Origin of Names of States.

Alabama comes from a Creek word, signifying 'The Land of Rest.'

Arkansas is derived from the Indian word, 'kansas,' 'smoky waters,' with the French prefix of 'ark'—a bow.

Connecticut was Mohegan, spelled originally Quon-eh ta-cent, signifying 'A Long River.'

Delaware derives its name from Thomas West, Lord De la Ware, Governor of Virginia.

Florida gets its name from 'Kasquas do Flores,' or 'Feast of the Flowers.'

Georgia was named in honor of George II.

Illinois' name is derived from the Indian word 'Illini,' 'men,' and the French affix 'ois' making 'Tribe of Men.'

Indiana's name came from that of the Indians.

Iowa signifies in the Indian language 'The Drowsy Ones.'

Kansas is an Indian word for smoky water.

Kentucky is an Indian name, 'Kain-tuk-ae,' signifying 'At the Head of the River.'

Louisiana was so named in honor of Louis XIV.

Maine takes its name from the Province of Main, in France, and was so called in compliment to the Queen of Charles I., Henrietta, its owner.

Massachusetts, from the Indian language, 'signifying 'The Country about the Great Hills.'

Maryland receives its names from the Queen of Charles I., Henrietta Maria.

Michigan's name was derived from the lake, the Indian name for fish weir, or trap, which the shape of the lake suggested.

Minnesota signifies, in the Indian language, 'A Cloudy Water.'

Mississippi derives its name from that of the great river, which is, in the Natchez tongue, 'The Father of Waters.'

Missouri is also an Indian name for 'muddy,' having reference to the muddiness of the Missouri river.

New Hampshire—first called Laconia—from Hampshire, England.

New Jersey was named by one of its original proprietors, Sir George Carteret, after the island of Jersey, in the British Channel, of which he was Governor.

New York was so named as a compliment to the Duke of York, whose brother, Charles II., granted him that territory.

North and South Carolina were named in honor of Charles I.

Ohio is the Shawnee name for 'The Beautiful River.'

Pennsylvania, as is generally known, takes its name from William Penn, and the word 'sylvania,' meaning woods.

Rhode Island gets its name from the fancied resemblance to the island of Rhodes, in the ancient Levant.

Tennessee is an Indian name, meaning 'The River with a Big Bend.'

Vermont from the Green Mountains (French, verd mont).

Virginia got its name from Queen Elizabeth, unmarried, or Virgin Queen.

Wheels of the Invisible.

Instruments and wheels of the Invisible Governor of the Universe!—This is indeed all which the greatest of men ever have been, or ever can be. No flatteries of courtiers, no adulations of the multitude, no audacity of self-reliance, no intoxications of success, no evolutions or developments of science—can make more or other of them. This is "the seamark of their utmost sail"—the goal of their farthest run—the very round and top of their highest soaring.

Oh, if there could be, to-day, a deeper and more pervading impression of this great truth throughout our land, and a more prevailing conformity of our thoughts and words and acts to the lessons which it involves; if we could lift ourselves to a loftier sense of our relations to the Invisible; if, in surveying our past history, we could catch larger and more exalted views of our destinies and our responsibilities; if we could realize that the want of good men may be a heavier woe to a land than any want of what the world calls great men; our Centennial year would not only be signalized by splendid ceremonials and magnificent commemorations and gorgeous expositions, but it would go far toward fulfilling something of the grandeur of that "Acceptable Year" which was announced by higher than human lips, and would be the auspicious promise and pledge of a glorious second century of Independence and Freedom for our country!—Robert C. Winthrop.

Raleigh District Conference

The Secretary of the Raleigh District Conference sends us the following account of the first and second day's proceedings. The Senior, who is in attendance upon the Conference, will write up a full account of its deliberations upon his return.

The Raleigh District Conference convened in the Methodist Church, in the town of Louisburg, on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock A. M. Rev. J. P. Moore, Presiding Elder in the chair. The Conference was opened with religious exercises, conducted by Rev Dr. Burkhead, assisted by Dr. Jerman, a lay delegate from Henderson circuit. The chair requested D W. Bain, the assistant Secretary of last year, to call the role of the Conference. Twenty ministers and delegates answered to their names in the following order:

Edenton Street Station—Raleigh: Rev L S Burkhead, D. D. Pastor. S C White, J A Jones, and Lewis W Peck

Person Street Station—Raleigh: Rev W C Norman, Pastor. R W Belo, S M Parish, and S L Riddle.

Editor Raleigh Christian Advocate, Rev J B Bobbitt, D. D.

Rolesville Circuit—Rev L J Holden, Pastor. W C Bledsoe.

Tar River Circuit—Rev R S Webb, Pastor. D S Allen, T L D Smith, L P.

Louisburg Station—Rev F L Reid, Pastor. M S Davis, W H Pleasants, Geo S Baker, F N Egerton, W H Hester, L P.

Youngville Circuit - W C Lynum.

Henderson Circuit—Rev A A Boshamer. Pastor. T P Jerman.

Granville Circuit—Rev S V Hoyle, Pastor. F J Tilley, S S Haithcock.

S C White, of Raleigh was elected Secretary, and S L Riddle Assistant Secretary.

The Presiding Elder addressed the Conference, extending to all, in behalf of the citizens of Louisburg, a christian welcome; and indicating the order of exercises of the Conference embracing the several subjects of the reports of pastors of the charges in the District.

He expressed the hope that the deliberations of the Conference would be characterized by that harmony and christian spirit for which this body was proverbial.

Rev F L Reid, Geo S Baker, W H Pleasants and M S Davis, were appointed the committee on public worship.

The hours of the sessions were fixed as follows:

Meet at 8½ o'clock A. M. adjourn at 10½ o'clock. Meet at 4 o'clock and adjourn at 6 P. M.

The Conference then adjourned for divine service. Rev S V Hoyle preached the opening sermon from Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians 3d chapter, 8, 9, 10 verses inclusive. It was an earnest, practical discourse, impressively delivered and cannot fail to accomplish good.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Conference was opened at 4 P M with religious exercises conducted by Rev W C Norman.

On motion of Rev R S Webb, the order for the afternoon sessions was changed and the Conference agreed to meet at 3 P M and adjourn at pleasure. It was decided to dispense with committees.

Rev E A Yates, P E of the Newbern District, and Rev B B Culbreth, of Washington Station, were introduced to the Conference.

A resolution offered by R W Best was adopted, pledging the Conference to assiduous labor and earnest prayer that a gracious revival of religion might accompany and follow the session of Conference.

Rev F L Reid read a communication from the Elders of the colored Presbyterian Church requesting that their pulpit should be supplied Sabbath morning and evening by some members of the Conference.

The Presiding Elder called the attention of the Conference to the enterprise of Bro. Baker in publishing a daily paper during the session of the Conference and expressed the hope that it would receive the support of the Conference and people. The arrival of the following additional delegates was announced: Rev. J. B. Floyd, W. N. Harris, J. D. N. Young and R. C. Redford.

The regular business of the Conference was then taken up.

Rev. Dr Burkhead reported the condition of Edenton Street Church, Raleigh, to be good and encouraging. Several valuable members of the Church had died during the year. The attendance upon preaching and the ordinances, good.

Rev. W. C. Norman, pastor of Person Street Church, reported that the attendance upon preaching and prayer meeting was good: class-meetings and Church Conferences not as well attended as is desirable: but little disposition to engage in frivolous and sinful amusements.

Smithfield Circuit was next called and in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Wheeler, Bro. Smith, a layman, reported the spiritual condition of the Church in the circuit to be good: obedience to the Discipline generally good.

In the absence of Rev J. E. Thompson, pastor of Cary Circuit, Bro. Whitaker, layman, was called upon for a report of the spiritual condition of the Church. The Presiding Elder stated that he had recently attended the Quarterly-meeting on the circuit and found it in good condition.

Rev. L. J Holden pastor of Rolesville circuit reported a good spiritual condition of the Church, good attendance upon communion, some opposition to infant baptism: one infant baptized recently and others to be baptized soon. But little indulgence in sinful amusements. As the fruit of a revival at Rolesville, eleven persons had joined the Church. Bro. W. C. Bledsoe, layman, reported the interest in prayer-meetings to be on the increase.

Rev. M. J. Hunt reported the condition of Youngville Circuit to be good, attendance on communion good: no class meetings, but hoped to revive them during the year: some disposition to indulge in amusements forbidden by the Discipline.

Rev. R. S. Webb, from Tar River Circuit, reported the membership on the Circuit to be large, congregations large. Many members do not attend Church Conference. A very interesting meeting had been held at Franklinton, at which the Church was greatly revived Had held an experience meeting at one of his appointments which resulted in much good. Some disposition to engage in worldly amusements. Some deaths in his charge during the year. Some of his members indulged in the use of spirituous liquors; one member sold liquors. A committee appointed to investigate the case reported adversely, but he was determined to commence again and apply the remedy.

Rev J B Floyd, local preacher, stated the great difficulty to be in not having more working men in the church. Little attention paid to family prayer, and class meetings were greatly neglected. Dr Burkhead asked if class meetings had gone into disuse in the last ten years: Bro F. thought that there had not been 25 class meetings held there in the last 25 years.—They were unpopular on the circuit. Only 3 members, out of 160, that prayed in public.

Rev T B Reeks, preacher in charge of Rocky Mount and Nash circuit, reported 10 appointments on the circuit, congregations good. Some improvement in the spiritual condition of the church. But few heads of families hold family prayer. At one appointment had formed a Young Men's Prayer Meeting. Class meetings not well attended Little indulgence in worldly amusements and none in ardent spirits.

On motion, Conference adjourned.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Conference opened at 8½ o'clock, with religious services conducted by Rev B B Hester, local minister.

After the adoption of the minutes of the preceding session, Dr Burkhead desired to have the report of his charge corrected by inserting that there had been during the year a number of conversions.

Rev W C Norman also reported 15 accessions to Person Street Church during the year.

The following new arrivals were noted: Rev Wm Dove, Rolesville circuit, J H Mitchell and E Robbins from Youngville circuit.

Rev J R Griffith, of Warren circuit, was introduced and invited to a seat in the Conference.

The Presiding Elder appointed Dr Burkhead to report on the spiritual condition of the church in the District and to make suggestions to the Conference.

Toisnot circuit was called. Rev N M Jurney reported that the spiritual condition of the charge was not very good. But few members prayed in public; at some of the appointments he had to do all the preaching, singing and praying. At Toisnot he had expelled 6 members, some on account of drunkenness, and others for good cause. But little interest is taken in Sabbath schools. But few engage in worldly amusements, and only one or two who indulge in dram drinking and dancing.

Rev A A Boshamer, from Henderson circuit, reported congregations good: some prayer meetings, one at Ridgeway in successful operation; attendance on the communion good. Last Sabbath he administered the Sacrament to a large number, among them Baptists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians Had a revival at Henderson early in the year, with about 15 conversions. Had baptized some adults and one or two infants, others waiting to receive the ordinance. The Church Conference at Ridgeway well attended: but little disposition to attend dancing parties.

Dr. Jerman, lay delegate, corroborated the statements of Bro. Boshamer.

Granville circuit; Rev S V Hoyle, pastor, reported 11 appointments, nearly 1000 members, preaching at all the appointments, except 3, on Sunday. Sunday congregations large; at week-day appointments, attendance good. Communion administered at all the appointments: a few members, for particular reasons, neglect the ordinance. Prayer-meetings not very well attended, except at Oxford where the regular attendance is good. No class-meetings. Has to preach in some instances twice on the Sabbath: Church Conferences have been well attended. No infants baptized on account of the industry of his predecessor, Rev J R Griffith, who reported a large number of infant baptisms. Houses of worship large, comfortable and well finished. Many of the young people are disposed to indulge in worldly amusements: some engage in dancing Family prayer well observed: some families use the forms of prayer published by Dr Deems, others those of Dr Summers. Some members of the church have been expelled for using ardent spirits Rev B B Hester endorsed the statements of Bro Hoyle.

Rev. F L Reid, pastor of the Church in Louisburg, reported a few violations of the rule against dancing: the offenders were admonished and have promised to desist in the future. The congregations are large and very attentive: prayer-meetings well attended. In place of class-meeting, love-feasts have been held. The Church has suffered a severe affliction in the death of Edwin W. Fuller, of whose high character, usefulness and zeal Bro. Reid spoke feelingly. Bro. Baker corroborated the report of Bro. Reid.

On motion Conference adjourned.

At eleven o'clock Rev. A. A. Boshamer preached an eloquent and edifying sermon from the 133rd Psalm.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at 3 o'clock. A touching letter was read from Rev. B. T. Blake, the oldest member of the N. C. Conference, regretting that his infirmity prevented his attendance.

Rev. A. E. Bobbitt and S. Williams from Rocky Mount and Nash Circuit and G. M. Richardson, from Rolesville Circuit, were enrolled as members of the Conference.

Dr. Burkhead reported the following resolutions, which after discussion by the Presiding Elder, Rev. S. V. Hoyle and others, were adopted:

WHEREAS, The reports from the various pastoral charges of the District, while they show much prosperity in the cause of Christ, also exhibit a want of proper attention to family religion, Class Meeting, and Church Conferences,

WHEREAS, Some of our people drink drams and engage in worldly amusements, such as dancing, going to circuses, card playing etc.; therefore.

RESOLVED, That we are grateful to Almighty God for the general prosperity of the cause of Christ in the District, manifested in the uniform piety and devotion of a large proportion of our membership; and that we will put forth greater efforts to extend vital godliness among all our people.

RESOLVED, 2. That the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, the practices of the modern dance, attending circuses, theatre, card playing and such like, are contrary to the word of God, the discipline of the church and detrimental to christian character and influence.

THE HAMBURG MASSACRE.

Our news columns, in a former issue, contained a mention of the unfortunate occurrence on the 5th ult., at Hamburg, South Carolina, where several negroes were killed and others wounded. Conflicting accounts have been given of the causes producing and the circumstances attending the massacre, political bias no doubt causing the difference in the statements.

Gov. Chamberlain, of South Carolina, in a letter to a Northern Senator, gave a version which, if true, puts the conduct of the whites in a very bad light and shows that the slaying of the negroes was unprovoked and barbarous; while the statement made by Gen M. C. Butler tends to prove that the whites were provoked to the deed by a show of insurrection and lawless conduct on the part of an unlawfully organized body of negroes who assembled in large force at an armory in Hamburg to resist the enforcement of civil process against parties charged with violating the laws—Which of the statements is true, we are as yet at a loss to determine satisfactorily; though considering it in whatever light we may, the killing of the negroes seems to have been needless, if not criminal and outrageous.—The provocation must have been extreme, and the necessity to uphold and preserve law must have been very urgent to justify the sacrifice of so many lives.

A company of armed colored militia was parading the streets and was met by two young men in a buggy who demanded that the company should give place to them. Parleying ensued and finally they were allowed to pass through the opening ranks of the militia. A warrant was issued at the instance of the young men against several of the negroes for obstructing the streets, and the trial fixed for the day following. The negroes assembled with their arms at the armory and refused to surrender the accused parties. The white men gathered in force from the town and country, a cannon was brought over from Augusta and an attack was made upon the negroes in the armory. Some of them attempting to escape were shot down, while others were captured and, one statement says, five of the captives were shot without mercy, and others wounded. Governor Chamberlain says that the company was a regularly organized body, and received their arms from the government on the faith of their regular organization. Gen Butler says that it was not a lawfully organized company; that the arms were placed in their hands without the authority of law, and that the negroes were disorderly and disposed to insult and provoke the whites. One statement is that the negroes assembled in the armory to protect themselves against the whites who were coming in from the country armed and enraged; an other version is that they gathered together to defy the civil authorties and to shield from arrest and punishment those who were charged with lawlessness.

Whatever may be the true facts in the case, the occurrence is greatly to be deplored, not only because it resulted in the loss of several lives, but because it indicates the existence of bad feeling between the races in the section where it happened. It has already been employed by partisan papers to point their arguments as to the wide spread feeling of antagonism and hatred on the part of the white people of the South towards the colored race, and the existence of a revolutionary spirit towards the government. And now that a political campaign, which promises to be more bitter than any previous contest, has opened, the outrages whether committed by negroes or whites will be seized with avidity by the partisan press of both sides, exaggerated and used to inflame the prejudices and fire the hearts of people of both sections. It seems that the era of good feeling, so earnestly desired, will never be reached, so intent are parties to make capital out of offences that have no political bearing and are not encouraged or countenanced by parties or sections.

Davenport Female College.

DEAR ADVOCATE: The signs of the times are favorable to Davenport — Applications for catalogues, and letters of inquiry are more numerous this season than usual. Most of our former pupils expect to return. All these are favorable omens notwithstanding the hard times.

Our new professor of music has arrived and is spending the vacation with us. We like him very much, and enrol him among our faculty with pride and confidence.

Davenport has a brilliant history, especially in her music department. Her advantages here never have been inferior, and she has made a record of which she will never be ashamed But never has she offered such advantages in this divine accomplishment as she offers now.

Prof. Joseph Ebert is a master in his profession. He is a graduate of Leipsic Conservatory of Music in Germany, and late Director of the Michigan Conservatory at Olivet, Michigan. We have been in correspondence with him about six months with a view to securing his services. He comes to us with the highest recommendations both as a gentleman and an artist, besides being a teacher of large experience and a well known musical composer.

His intimate acquaintance with the great masters of national celebrity, and with the most celebrated schools and conservatories—their methods and styles; his fine natural talents, his long assiduous study, his enthusiasm in his profession, his fine cultivated taste, his perfect acquaintance with the whole scope of musical science and art, make it a privilege for a young lady of even tolerable musical talents to be under his tuition. It is precisely on account of these high qualities that his services have been secured.—We desired to give our own daughters the benefit of the very best instruction that could be secured This we were determined to do at any cost. We have sought for a teacher of the highest qualities and have obtained him. It is better to bring the talent of Germany here than to go to Germany after it.

Prof Ebert, though a German, has been many years a citizen of the United States, is conservative in politics, Protestant in religion, and speaks faultless English.

He is not a rambler but has been attracted to this section by our delightful climate, our clear skies, and our magnificent landscapes. He locates here with a view to permanency, and like every other stranger who visits Lenoir he is delighted with the situation.

We trust that a generous and enlightened public will appreciate our enterprise and sacrifice for this noble institution. We spare no expense in the employment of teachers. We employ none but the best. We are not after money but success. We teach not for gain but because we love it.—We study and labor to place the best advantages within the reach of all our patrons. We work for the Church, for God, and for our country.

Letter From Kernersville.

The weather has been extremely warm for sometime, and in our section, is becoming very dry. The pastors of the several charges, around us, and the preachers and people generally, are arranging for a series of protracted meetings during the summer and fall campaign. It was my good fortune on my way to one of my appointments this on Friday evening Mrs. Francis Cogdell, wife of Jno. Cogdell, had been instantly killed by lightning. I at once repaired to the house, where I found a large number of people who had assembled to witness what God had wrought. The facts were as follows: On Friday evening sister Cogdell and her little boy and girl were sitting in her house (a small log building;) the little girl says that her mother and the little boy were seated on a trunk near the window. The lightning struck the top of the window, knocked off the iron guard from the breech of a gun hanging near the window, and she saw her mother fall back and drop the paper she had been reading. There were two beds on the right and left of the trunk; a mattrass on one of these beds was torn, a box under the bed was torn to pieces, some cotton under the bed was fired, and the floor torn up. The glass at the opposite end of the room was broken. Bro. Cogdell, who was just returning home felt the shock, and heard the children crying; he ran in and gathered up the body of his wife and laid her upon a bed; her clothes about her breast were burning Having extinguished the fire, he was compelled to leave his wife with the children and go to his neighbors for assistance.

Sister Cogdell was a good woman, and was doubtless ready for this sudden summons into eternity. On Sabbath morning at 8 o'clock her funeral sermon was preached to a large audience at the residence of her father, Calvin McCullins. May God bless her dear husband and friends and sanctify this stroke of his providence to the good of their souls!

Dr Craven on Moody.

Dr. C uses strong language. As to Moody's labors he says:—"Did nothing—failure"

Dr. Craven may be misunderstood. He does not oppose revivals and revival efforts.

His labors have been blessed in saving souls. He would not willingly undervalue the labors of others

The only argument he gives to prove Moody's work a failure is this: Less than 150 members have been received by all the churches in New York and Brooklyn from the labors of Mr. Moody.

The people converted under Mr. Moody may have been church members already.

When Dr. B was Pastor in Charlotte, he spoke of several church members converted in a revival under his ministry.

If I should write to my ADVOCATE that 30 souls had been converted on my circuit during 1876, and then report no accessions at next Conference, would you and the Bishop say my work was a failure? Hold on!

I might explain: there were 38 persons in the church on my circuit, who never had been converted. Thirty of these professed to be converted in 1876.

Again, perhaps the pastors in Brooklyn and New York have not done their duty.

Surely they might have gathered many souls into the churches just after Moody's meetings.

Yours in Charity,

A. D. BETTS.

Church Support.

MESSRS EDITORS: In noticing reports made frequently at our Conference, I am struck with such as this: "assessed one thousand dollars paid three hundred and fifty." Does not this indicate that there is a screw loose somewhere? Does it not plainly show that our people require some instruction upon Church liberality? Might not suitable discourses be delivered at all our Conferences both annual and district, and all our appointments, stations as well as circuits on this subject? Surely the laborer is worthy of his hire and we have no right to starve those sent to proclaim God's precious truth to us and it is not fair or honest to agree to pay them one thousand dollars at the commencement of the year and send them away at its close with three hundred and fifty No other profession would submit to it and we have no right to expect or demand it of our preachers.

Yours,

WILL.

Religious Brevities.

There are fifty-eight Baptist Associations in Kentucky. In New York there are only forty-five.

Mrs. Van Cott is going to Texas to labor. She will open a campaign in Dallas City, October 7.

Within the last ten years, fourteen thousand Sunday-schools have been supplied with Bibles by the American Bible Society.

Mr. Moody's new tabernacle in Chicago was dedicated free from debt July 16 The building cost sixty-seven thousand dollars.

The French Assembly last week rejected a resolution favoring the abolition of capital punishment.

Killed by Lightning.

BROS. BOBBITT & GRAY: We are seldom called to witness a sadder scene than I beheld in Grantham's Township, Wayne co. on last Saturday morning. Intelligence reached me on my way to one of my appointments this on Friday evening Mrs. Francis Cogdell, wife of Jno. Cogdell, had been instantly killed by lightning. I at once repaired to the house, where I found a large number of people who had assembled to witness what God had wrought. The facts were as follows: On Friday evening sister Cogdell and her little boy and girl were sitting in her house (a small log building;) the little girl says that her mother and the little boy were seated on a trunk near the window. Revivals.

MESSRS EDITORS: In your last issue Bro. Rhodes asks for information in regard to the success or failure of revivals and in your present number I wish to occupy a middle ground and ask why successful revivals are often failures and in doing so I mean no reflection or hit on any particular pastor or church; but to explain I will say Brother X, pastor of Tar Heel Station, is blessed with a revival, and immediately it is heralded to the public 'Tar Heel has had a glorious revival, fifty conversions, Bros A. B. C. & D., each helped. And right here I will add that I am fearful we often ascribe too much of the honor and glory to pulpit efforts and too little to God.

Now, this from the notices of newspapers (too often made into puffs for the preachers) would indicate a successful revival; but visit Tar Heel a few months later, attend one of their cold lifeless meetings, and you immediately ask, 'where are all the converts taken in by Bro. X in his revival where are the fruits of his meeting?' Echo answers, where? Now you find that while in some respects the revival was a success, because one or two faithful converts are still holding out, yet it is comparatively a failure because the Church has not derived any spiritual or financial benefit from the accession of the converts, while many of them at the same time have returned to the beggarly elements of the world.

Now this indicates to me that either the young converts, since their entry into the christian life, have either been not properly nourished or else there was something defective about their conversions; and causes me to suggest that in these latter days I fear friends, and in many instances ministers, are too anxious to see mourners profess, and too often make them believe they have experienced a change of heart when they have not; and hence in a few months they fall away. My idea is, there is no use for a preacher or any one else to tell a sinner when he is born of God, for when that work takes place or is accomplished he will know it for himself and not from another.

Recent Publications.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia $4 a year.

The August number is well filled with interesting and instructive articles. The Magazine grows better as its years increase and it is now one of our most highly prized periodicals

The eighth illustrated article on "The Century: its Fruits and its Festival," embraces the concluding chapters on the Exhibits in the Main Building, and is marked by the same ability as was displayed in its predecessors. Mr. Edward King's illustrated account of Montenegro is especially interesting and timely in connection with the war which is now going on there. As a sketch of the life and habits of the people of the Black Mountain, this paper will be read with pleasure and interest. Col. Robert Lewis Kimberly's "Raising the Siege at Chattanooga," is a spirited narrative. The second chapter of Robert Wilson's papers, "On the Eastern Shore of Maryland," is less interesting Besides the continuation of Lady Barker's enjoyable letters from South Africa, there is an essay on the "Age of Knick Knacks," by Lady Blanche Murphy; "Cross Purposes," a pleasantly told tale, by Margaret Vandegrift; and the first of R Davey's papers on George Sand, which is a pleasing tribute to the character and memory of the great authoress. "Phantasmagoria," by Emma Lazarus, and "By the Water's Edge," by W. S. Phillips, are the poems of the month, and are of marked merit. The new serial tale, by Ellen W Olney, "Love in Idleness," commenced in this number, gives promise of a literary treat. The usual editorial gossip and book reviews complete this number of the popular "Lippincott."

Border Life, Present and Past.

OUR WESTERN BORDER 100 Years Ago. A new and rere Historical volume of Border Life, Struggle and Adventure, by CHARLES MCKNIGHT, Esq, 800 pages, Price $3 00. Published by J. C. McCURDY & CO., Philadelphia, Pa., Cincinnati, O., Chicago, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo., and sold by Agents. For terms and Illustrated Circular address the Publishers.

The terrible fate of Custer and his gallant three hundred adds another tragic chapter to the great book of Border events, whose beginning dates from the earliest settlements of our country, whose end will be only when the Indians as a race shall have become extinct.

The horrors of the Modoc campaign are yet fresh in our memories The historic Lava Beds. Indian cunning baffling the skill of our soldiery for so long a time, savage malignity and treachery culminating in the death of the brave Canby and others whose mission was honorable treaty and peace—all these are still remembered with a shudder. Their parallels in device and atrocity are only found in the deeds that compose the history of the "Dark and Bloody Ground," or among those which mark the bloody tracks of the treacherous Mingoes, descending from their Great Lake fastnesses upon the unsuspecting tribes and settlements of the Susquehanna and Allegheny.

So with this heart-rending story of Custer and his men, which has been sprung upon the country so suddenly, and which is being read amid tears of sorrow and calls for vengeance, from one end of the land to the other. Some may find its parallel in the history of Leonidas and his three hundred; some may seek for like sacrifices amid the annals of the Scottish Chiefs or Polish Patriots. But it is only when we turn to the thrilling chapters of our old Border history that we read and re read, in intensified form, the bloody story of Rose Bud and Big Horn Rivers. Custer and his three hundred, ambushed by a wily foe and melting away in death before odds rendered doubly and terribly formidable by bewildering shricks and stealthy mode of fighting, recall with vivid effect the tragedy of Braddock's Field, whose details are so graphically and fully narrated in that wonderful book, "Our Western Border One Hundred Years Ago."

Or if other parallels be sought, they abound in the same brilliant, stirring and faithful volume; for, Custer and Big Horn, Canby and the Lava Beds, Modoc and Sioux, are but repetitions now fainter, now fiercer, of Dade and Bloody Run, Crawford and Battle Island, Harmer and the Miami Towns.

The new story, whether of victory or defeat, massacre or escape, cunning or adventure, treachery or dash, hardship or retreat, is but an epitome of the old field with its quaint and picturesque portraitures, haloed about by thrilling traditions, and sanctified to us by the fact that our fathers were part of it and these our dwelling places were scenes in the midst of WIDE AWAKE. AN ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, $2 a year.

This is an excellent publication for the Angus: number sets forth a rich repast for little folks and for [illegible] too. The opening serial story, Jessie Lark, is by Nora Perry, How Lizzie Got her Picture Taken is well told by the pen and pencil. In the serials, in Toby for Nothing Polly, Polly is a young boy, while in the New-Fashioned Girl, Nan is a good type of thousands of modern girls, her dreams and her [illegible] pulling at her with contrary hands. The etiquette paper, Manners at Home, ought to be printed as a tract for general distribution. Among the poems, that Classic of Baby-land, Jack and the Beanstalk by Clara Doty Bates, illustrated by Charlotte Doty Fuller, and The Fairy Tooth, by Edgar Fawcett, will be widely read.

Only $2 per annum. D. Lothrop & Co. Boston.

The North Carolina Banner.

Extract from a letter from Prof. W. C. Kerr, to Hon. S. F. Bailey:

PHILADELPHIA, July 22nd, 1876.

The banner is at last in p' ce and you will be gratified to hear, in the place of honor. It hangs in front of the main entrance, alone; which shows that your judgment of it is confirmed by that of the ladies of the commission. In fact they were all very sympathetic in their expression of approval, and some of them called it the "banner."

And in this connection, I will add, that they at once inquired, what will be done with it after the exhibition, and strongly insisted that it might to go into Memorial Hall (the Art Gallery) or, if to the ladies of North Carolina preferred, in Independence Hall: a distinction which they said could not be accorded to the New York banners. I told them I would report the suggestion to your commission.

I think the ladies of the North Carolina Committee are fairly entitled to be congratulated, and also to have a vote of thanks from the legislature for having done so proper a thing, and done it so well."

The Raleigh News learns that the most distressing drought prevails from Apex to Lockville—particul rly at Lashley's Cross Roads and Merry Oaks. There has been no rain in that section sufficient to lay the dust for nearly two months; and, as a consequence, the cotton is grossly damaged, and the corn almost totally ruined, and will be entirely destroyed unless there is rain within a week's time. Mr. Betts, of Apex, and others, are now cutting their corn to try and save it for forage. This corn was most promising a few weks ago. Mr. Lillington had a field of corn highly fertilized, from which he expected to gather a hundred and fifty barrels: but now he cannot realize more than fifty, and if it does not rain within ten days, he gets none from the field, at all. The greatest alarm and distress prevails among the people.

The existence of a regularly organized band of thieves and receivers of stolen goods has been discovered in Fayetteville. One of the robbers turned State's witness and disclosed the fact that goods have been taken time and again, for the last few years, from the store of Mr. E. J. Lilly and others, entrance having been effected through an upper window.—Mack Hybart, leader of Hybart's Brass Band, Phil Pickit and other negroes, together with two or three white men, were arrested recently and the testimony being strong against them, they were bound over to go urt for trial. A considerable quantity of stolen goods was found in the store of D. J. Underwood, who had received them from the robbers.

Mr. Airy Watchman: James F. Harrison, of this place, lost two children the same day, by diptheria. They were both buried in one coffin. This is truly a sad affliction, and when we remember that this makes five children Mr. Harrison has lost by this terrible disease within the last five months, it seems almost impossible for human nature to bear.

The Raleigh Sentinel says: Alamance county has to foot a bill of costs in the recent suspension trial which amounts to $3,331 20. This includes all the costs from the magistrates' trial at Graham to the close of the case here. This is probably the largest bill of costs that ever accrued in one case in any court of this State. The fees of the lawyers on both sides must have aggregated at least $8,000.

Mt. Airy Watchman We learn that Wm. Williams, of this county, eloped with a married woman named Crouse, a few days ago. Williams leaves a wife and 3 children, and Mrs. Crouse a husband and one child. They have probably gone into Virginia.

Elizabeth City Carolinian: The Consul General of Italy has sent the Treasury Department $495 in gold, to be distributed to the families of the Life Saving crew on Currituck beach, N. C., who lost their lives while attempting to rescue the crew of the Italian Bark that was wrecked on the night of March 1st.

The Raleigh and Augusta Railroad has advanced ten miles beyond Cameron.—There is a distance of 31 miles yet to pass before the Carolina Central is reached. All but 3 miles is graded, the iron purchased, and it is expected that the trains will run through by September 1st.

Died in Black Creek Wilson co. N. C. on 17th June, 1876, Mr. Delana Meacham, wife of T. J. Meacham.

Sister Meacham had few enemies, but hosts of friends, who deeply deplore her loss. She was a faithful wife and a "keeper at home" one of those women who was more precious to her husband than jewels. She was a teacher, considerate, and loving mother. She was a faithful friend and obliging neighbor, as those who knew her well bear testimony. Her suffering was sharp and excruciating she left to bewail her untimely departure, an affectionate husband and four precious children one of whom the babe, tarried behind but a few days, ere it had known the blighting touch of sin.

How sad must it be to have one's peaceful home invaded by the "king of terrors," and lose from our fond embrace the wife of our youth. But then, how our tears crystallize into pearls of immortal joy, when we know that they will all wash us a little while inside the "beautiful gate."

Thank God, that wone darkness thus fills our homes, the kindles afresh in our hearts, the fires of immortality

May the hand that has made sore the husband's heart, pour in the oil of grace, and bind up the wound

May the dear children whose fond mother has been so soon called home by our heavenly Father, find more than a mother in Him

FRANK H. WOOD
Pastor.

The undersigned committee having been appointed at the Second Quarterly Conference at Deep River circuit, to draft resolutions of respect in the memory of Jas. C. Guthrie, respectfully submit the following.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in his allwise Providence, to remove from this body our aged and beloved brother, Jas. C Guthrie Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, 1st That while we submissively bow to the will of him who doeth all things well, we sadly miss the presence and council of our much esteemed brother.

RESOLVED 2nd, That while we know we shall see his genial countenance, and receive the warm grasp of his hand no more in the conference room we feel that our loss is his eternal gain, and that he has only passed from the church militant to join the church triumphant.

RESOLVED 3rd. That we will spread a copy of these resolutions upon the minutes of this Conf. and send a copy to the family of the deceased and one also to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

J. J. GUILSTON,
M. JOHNSON.
B. C. ALLRED, } Com.

Died at his residence, in Chatham, co., N. C. April 7th 1876, Jas. C. Guthrie in the 75th year of his age. He was a member of the M. E. Church (South) between 45 and 50 years, and most of that time he served the church as steward, and trustee to his death. He was a strong friend to all the institutions of the church, firm in the faith of Gospel, serving the Lord, always, with deep piety, and strong devotion. He was a kind husband, a good father, and a good neighbor. Too much could not be said of his good qualities. His house was a home for the preachers. He had two sons in the N. C. Conference, T. W. Guthrie, and B. F. Guthrie, but Rev. B F died during the war. Jas. C. Guthrie died a peaceful and triumphant death, and thus passed away to his reward in heaven, leaving an aged, wife and 6 children, neighbors and many friends to mourn their loss, but their loss is his eternal gain

T. C. M.

Mrs Martha B. Farrow, wife of Rev. Hezekiah Farrow, died near Statesville, Iredell Co., N. C., on the 30th of April 1876, aged 31 years and one day. She was converted and joined the church, whom 19 years of age, at a camp meeting held by Rev. Henry Gray at Kennedsett, N. C. She lived a quiet christian life and died in triumph.

THE BUFFALO

LITHIA WATERS

— IN —

Protracted Intermittent and Remittent Fevers.

Extract from Letter of Dr. O. F. Manson, Professor of General Pathology and Physiology to the Medical College, Richmond, Va., July 5th, 1875.

"These waters have been found especially curative in cases of chronic intermittent fever, many intractable cases having been thereby restored to perfect health in a brief space of time."

Extract from Pamphlet of Dr. S. Harris on these Waters, published in 1850.

PROTRACTED INTERMITTENT AND REMITTENT FEVERS.—"In the chronic forms of these troublesome epidemics, the Buffalo water acts most happily, and, if persevered in, often effects a permanent cure. Those enlargements of the liver and spleen, concomitants of these affections, are simultaneously relieved with the chills and fever."

Case of E. K. Harris, Esq., at the Virginia Bar, now Elector for the State upon the Democratic Presidential ticket:

Extract from Letter, dated Buffalo Springs, August 29th, 1873.

"Some years ago my system was completely worn down and prostrated by a protracted case of chills and fever. After using all the remedies indicated in such cases in vain, I visited the most noted watering places of the mountains of Virginia, without deriving any benefit: almost in despair of obtaining relief from any source, I left the mountains and came to these Springs, where in a few weeks I was entirely restored to health."

Evidences of the great powers of these Waters in Chronic Intermittent and Remittent Fever might be multiplied to almost any extent, both from professional and unprofessional sources.

THE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS

AS A MEDICINAL AGENT.

Testimony of Distinguished Persons:

LETTER OF THE HON. M. W. RANSOM, UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

WARSON, N. C., September 27, 1875.

Col. Thos. F. Goode:

Dear Sir—It gives me great pleasure to state that I regard the Buffalo Lithia Waters as second to none in the United States.

Mrs. Ransom has derived great benefit from the use of them. My health has been decidedly improved by them, and my observations of their effects upon invalids and diseased persons generally is, that at least nine-tenths of all the sick who resort to them are manifestly and permanently relieved.

Yours, with high regard,

M. W. RANSOM.

Letter of the Rev. Thos. Wharey, now of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina, one of the most distinguished divines of the South:

KEYSVILLE, Jan. . . 1875

Col. Goode:

Dear Sir—It affords me great pleasure to give you my opinion of the Buffalo Springs, formed from what I heard and saw while there last summer, and also from what I have learned both before and since from conversations with intelligent physicians and sufferers who had been relieved (some of them brought from the borders of the grave) by the use of the water. I hope you will be successful in bringing these waters into general notice, and sending them to the afflicted all over the land, for I regard you in so doing as a great public benefactor.

The Buffalo waters are certainly among the most remarkable in the world. They are exceedingly exhilarating in their effects, enlivening the spirits, giving appetite and tone to the system, and promoting digestion in a manner I can say. The cases are too numerous to mention of wretched dyspeptics who have been perfectly cured by this water in a few weeks. Its effect also upon constitutions which have been shattered by chills and fever is simply marvelous. Lean, sallow, ague-shaken, hollow-eyed sufferers have visited Buffalo, and in a few days their eyes have brightened, and their pale cheeks have flushed again with the glow of health. The effect of these waters to in some cases of paralysis, gout, rheumatism and affections of the kidneys has appeared magical, an incurable constitution seem to be benefited by their use in a remarkable degree and female diseases relieved in a way that is wonderful. Two of the best testimonials to the real value of these waters are, first, that intelligent physicians in the whole surrounding country, who have seen them tried, recommend their use in certain cases in the most unqualified terms; and second, that the people generally living in the neighborhood of these Springs, have such implicit faith in their virtue.—During the summer, and I suppose during nearly the whole year, they come every day with their bottles, jugs, demijohns and barrels to obtain a fresh supply of what they seem to regard as the elixir vitæ. There can be no doubt that, for nearly all diseases, except those affecting the throat and lungs, these are among the most valuable waters in the world.

Yours very truly,

THOS. WHAREY.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.,

Will begin its twenty-seventh Annual Session, Sept. other 21st, 1876. Rev W. A. Harris, D. D., President, with an able corps of twenty-three Teachers and Officers.

Modern Languages taught and spoken in the College by a German Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among whom are some of the most cultivated teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union. Its marked effects is the rapid promotion of the health and vigor of our pupils. Those who come here from the south with feeble constitutions, and climatic diseases, are generally restored.

Buildings elegant—famed by purest breezes, commanding one of the most magnificent scenery, and combining such varied attractions as to make it one of the most delightful college homes in the Union.

This school is usually attended by pupils from all parts of seventeen different States

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A simple uniform is worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practiced to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop H. N. McTyeire, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., under the Presidency of Rev. W. A. Harris, is, to my judgment, one of the best institutions, for young ladies, in the South. I have recently had a very appreciable review by the advantages enjoyed by my two daughters there. Its course of study is ample and thoroughly accomplished, and its methods both solid and elegant. Its person I accommodations are all that can be desired for health and comfort, of taste. No position could be more eligible; no country more magnificent; no atmosphere more salubrious. Not the least of its merits, in that sacred regard, is its religious training, without which no Female College especially, would be a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Church. Instruction is thorough. Its music advantages are offered of very high order. The accomplished Professors are multiplied, and its patronage is expensive as regard to make this a popular institution.

From Prof. F. H. Smith, M. A., L. L. D., University of Virginia.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys. Having had a daughter under Mr. Harris' care, my observations leads me to believe this school to be one of the best Female Seminaries anywhere in our State. The Hall of the Wesleyan Female Institute could be filled to overflowing with pupils from all our Southern States

THE BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS

FOR SALE.

The claim is made with entire confidence for these waters that as a curative agent of many forms of CHRONIC DISEASE they have no superior among the medicinal waters of the WORLD. Especially and emphatically is this claim made for them in the peculiar DISEASES OF WOMEN, in AFFECTIONS of the KIDNEYS and BLADDER, and in derangements of the DIGESTIVE and BILIARY ORGANS. In GOUT and RHEUMATISM dependent on URIC ACID in the blood, they have given the most marked and decided relief. In CHRONIC INTERMITTENT, and REMITTENT FEVERS they have given a degree of relief which might well induce sufferers from that disease to give it a trial. They are used with advantage as in warm weather.

The claim thus made for these waters is vouched for by some of the MOST DISTINGUISHED MEDICAL MEN OF THE COUNTRY, both North and South, as well as by numerous reported case from the most unquestionable sources.

Testimonials sent to any address enquiring. These waters are put up in case of one dozen half-gallon bottles at $6 per case.

GENERAL DEPOT:

Children's Column.

THE FIVE LOAVES.

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

What if the little Jewish lad,
That summer day, had failed to go
Down to the lake, because he had
So small a store of loaves to show?

"The press is great," he might have said:
"For food the thronging people call:
I only have five loaves of bread,
And what were they among them all?"

And back the mother's word might come,
Her coaxing hand upon his hair:
"Yet go; for they may comfort some Among the hungry children there."

So to the lake-side forth he went,
Bearing the scant supply he had;
And Jesus, with an eye intent,
Through all the crowds beheld the lad:

And saw the loaves, and blessed them: Then
Beneath His hand the marvel grew;
He brake and blessed, and brake again—
The loaves were neither small nor few

For, as we know, it came to pass,
That hungry thousands there were fed,
While sitting on the fresh, green grass,
From that one basketful of bread!

If from his home the lad, that day,
His five small loaves had failed to take,
Would Christ have wrought—can any say?—
This miracle beside the lake?

A Struggle for Appearances.

At a St. Louis school, the pupils were in the habit of bringing a luncheon Among those who did not go home for dinner, the teacher noticed a little girl who always sat looking wistfully at her playmates when they went out with their luncheons, but who never brought any herself. The child was always neatly but very poorly clad, and one of the closest students in school hours. One day the teacher noticed that the little thing had apparently brought her dinner with her. The noon hour came, and the children took their lunch as usual and went out to eat it, this little girl alone ramaining in the room, with her dinner wrapped up in paper on the desk before her. The teacher went to the child, and asked why she didn't go with the rest, at the same time putting out her hand toward the package. Quick as thought, the little girl clasped her hands over it and exclaimed, sobbing, "Don't touch it, teacher, and don't tell, please. It's only blocks." And that was the fact. Having no dinner to bring, and too proud to reveal the poverty of her family, the child had carefully wrapped up a number of blocks in paper, and brought the package to present the appearance of a lunch. It was a mere incident in school life; but it was enough to make wiser and older hearts than hers sad.

Something for Jesus.

A lady passing along a Brooklyn street the other day, had the misfortune to catch her dress on a railing, and tear it. She stopped to see what could be done about it, and was looking rather ruefully for a pin, when a little voice said:

'Here, lady, take this!'

The speaker was a little beggar girl, barefooted, a basket on her arm, an old, torn hat on her head. She held out a red rose and a bit of a yellow flowering weed, and with pleading eyes, on the lady's face, and insisting words, urged her to take them.

'Keep them yourself, dear,' said the lady.

'I would rather you took them,' answered the child.

So the lady took them to please her, and they walked on together. Presently the little one said:

'Was that doing something for Jesus?'

'Why do you ask that, little one?'

'Because my teacher told us last Sunday that we must all try this week to do something for Jesus, and I told her Jesus was so far away, and so great, I couldn't do anything for Him, I was sure. She said if we did something for others, it would be for Him.'

'So that's why you gave me the flowers! Why did you give them to me, instead of to somebody else?'

'O, because you looked so sorry when you teared your dress.'

Teacher, do you think the lessons are forgotten, and the good seed lost? Think not so. God takes care of the seed you sow. It is springing, up in many a fair harvest that you never see, though the angels smile as they behold it.

What Ailed a Pillow.

While Annie was saying her prayers, Nell trifled with a shadow-picture on the wall. Not satisfied with playing alone, she would talk to Annie, that mite of a figure in gold and white, golden curls and snowy gown, by the bed's side.

'Now, Annie, watch!' "Annie, just see!' 'Oh, Annie, do look!' she said, over and over again.

Annie, who was not to be persuaded, finished her prayer; and crept into bed, whither her thoughtless sister followed, as the light must be out in just so many minutes. Presently Nell took to flourishing, punching, and "oh dearing.' Then she lay quiet awhile, only to begin again with renewed energy.

'What's the matter?' asked Annie, at length.

'My pillow!' tossing, thumping, kneading 'It's as flat as a board, and hard as a stone; I can't think what ails it.'

'I know,' answered Annie, in her sweet serious way.

'What!'

'There's no prayer in it.'

For a second or two Nell was as still as a mouse, than she scrambled out on the floor, with a shiver, it's true but she was determined never afterwards to try to sleep on a prayerless pillow.

'That must have been what ailed it,' she whispered, soon after getting into bed again 'It's all right now.'

I think that is what ails a great many pillows on which restless heads, both little and big, nightly toss and turn; there are no prayers in them Nell's remedy was the best, the only one. Prayer made the pillow soft, and she sank to rest as under a sheltering wind.—Selected.

"What am I made of?' asked a little girl, fresh from her Sunday school lesson, as she essayed to show off her knowledge to a younger sister. "I don't know,' was the honest answer. "What does mamma sweep up from the floor?' was the first speaker's next trial in the Socratic method. "Pins, needles and hair pins' was the prompt but unexpected response.

Rural and Domestic.

Plant out a few trees every year, either for fruit or ornament. They add to the value of homesteads and pay continually in the comfort which they afford to all who live in and around them.

An English writer says that in the case of fire in buildings containing horses, if the harness be merely put on, however loosely, the horses will quit the place without difficulty. A knowledge of this may be the means of saving many a valuable animal.

Custard.—Beat three eggs; add one cup of sugar; beat with the eggs; stir in one quart of milk till the sugar is dissolved; pour in cups; set the cups in a baking-tin of cold water, and bake slowly; when done, grate nutmeg over the custards.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer states that he kept a plum-tree from curculios by sprinkling the ground under the tree with corn meal. This induced the chickens to scratch and search. The meal was strewn every morning from the time the trees blossomed, until the fruit was large enough to be out of danger. The consequence was that the fowls picked up curculios with the meal, and the tree being saved from the presence of the insects was wonderfully fruitful.

Plant Potatoes.—A year ago we published an article on the subject of raising sweet potatoes, showing that crop to be the most remunerative in this immediate vicinity. As the rain fall this season seems to be all that can be wanted, we again urge the same matter. No danger of raising too many Should the market be glutted, remember they are an easy commodity to turn into bacon. Then utilize every spare foot of ground; plant every nook and corner during the next three weeks. A prosperous country is one that raises a plenty to eat. This is true; act upon it.—Brunswick Advertiser.

Nails in Fruit Trees.—Nails driven into fruit trees, as near the ground as possible, are said to have the effect of making such trees more healthy, vigorous and excellent than those into which no nails have been driven. The reason why nails are so beneficial is thus explained: The reason why the worm will not attack the tree is because the oxidation or rusting of the iron by the sap evolves ammonia, which, as the sap rises, will of course impregnate every part of the foliage, and prove too drastic a dose for the delicate palates of intruding insects. The salt of iron afforded by nails is extremely offensive to the worms, while it is not only harmless but beneficial to the foliage and fruit of the tree.

Baker's Cod Liver Oil and Phosphate of Lime.—A leading physician writes: "You have conferred a great boon upon the sick and those with delicate stomachs, by making so pleasant one of our most valuable medicines." It is the only reliable remedy for Consumption, Throat and Lung diseases.—Sold by druggists. J. C. Baker & Co., Philadelphia.

A Health-Promoting Stimulant.

Physicians, who certainly ought to be the best judges of such matters, declare that wholesome stimulation is not only desirable, but essential in many instances. When the temporary good effect of a sound stimulant is confirmed and rendered permanent, as in the case of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters by the action of tonic and alterative principles combined with it, it becomes infinitely more efficacious as a removant of physical energy and a corrective of those conditions of the body which invite disease. The Bitters have acutely defined the emphatic sanction of medical men who have observed the effect of that popular stimulative cordial as a remedy for weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia, constipation, inactivity of the liver, malarious fevers, and many other disorders. Its basis is sound old rye, the purest liquor known to commerce, and its self possessing tonic properties of no main order.

VALUABLE
Real Estate for Sale
— AT —
PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5 000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in Northwestern N. C., under a high state of cultivation; fine cotton lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs, in fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, lies well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and has a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 300 acres, lying on Rutledge and Seed Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Haystack, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

THE KINGDOM COMING.

This kingdom was organized eighteen hundred and forty-three years ago with one hundred and twenty subjects None can come under its government but by their own free choice: and all, no matter what their sex or age, must be soldiers in the King's army Such was and is the case, and such it will be until the Kingdom shall have reached the eternal zenith of its power. Its constitution and early history can be found in the Bible.

Upon its organization, very few joined themselves to its standard.—But on one occasion, filled with love to their King, and desire for the extension of this kingdom, they, in a body, besought Him to give them victory over a multitude of His foes then assembled near their camp. He assented to their request, and in a pitched battle that ensued, three thousand of the King's enemies threw down their arms and gave their willing allegiance to Him. The generals of the kingdom of Satan tried various means to destroy the adherents of the new kingdom, but with little success; so gave over their attempts for a time. True, they killed the bodies of some but the King took them to dwell in His palace.

After peace was restored, internal dissensions threatened the existence of the kingdom, but those were checked, and harmony was restored by the wise counsels of the governors, instructed by the King.

As time passed on, the kingdom increased in numbers and power — But its enemies grew wiser, and, taught by the wisdom of the serpent, took a nominal position under the blood stained banner of the Cross, and endeavored to sow enmity among the true soldiers. So skillful were they in their machinations, that the effect has not totally subsided, even at this day. But still the army of the King pressed on, for though shorn of much of their strength by treachery in the camp, a few remained faithful to the orders of the King.

After many long years had passed, a soldier, whom by some oversight the corrupt generals had allowed to receive a commission, saw with horror the pollution existing in the army of his loved and venerated King. Filled with indignation, he clearly pointed out the abuses in existence. For this the generals expelled him, but he was followed by a large number of the rank and file. Other officers caught the watchword, until finally a number boldly declared themselves to be the true Army of the Kingdom, and that from which they had seceded to be arrayed against the king. For a time, they continued on their victorious way, but at last, even they, as a body, ceased their aggressive warfare for the King, and though not actually turning their arms against Him, yet allowed His enemies to take possession of their citadels. Many yet remained His faithful followers, but the great mass had turned their faces far from Him. The kingdom of Satan appeared about to triumph.

Just at this critical juncture, an officer, sustained by a few friends, itinerated through the army, declaring the sad state of affairs among the King's professed followers, and calling on them to give a true allegiance to Him. Multitudes saw their error, and hastened to enlist under his banner. Filled with love to him, they plead with their friends to join the army, and great success followed their efforts. The kingdom received many accessions, and fresh vigor was in every department. From that day to this, it has been steadily growing, and now its glory is brighter than ever before. Not content with a merely defensive warfare, it is continually making aggressions upon the enemies who press around it. Not only that but it carries its constitution and the knowledge of its king to distant nations who have never heard his name For long years its embassadors have been rebuffed, but now they receive a welcome admittance, and multitudes of those who but a short time ago were under the dominion of Satan, now sit at the feet of the King, and wait and watch for his bidding.

And more are coming, and more will come, until the whole world shall own allegiance to the King. Nation shall join with nation in one common loyalty. Every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall acknowledge the universal king. Justice and truth shall extend to all men, for the laws shall be subservient and agreeable to the constitution. War and strife shall cease, for no contending power will exist. A general millenium, and then for a short time the Great Ruler will, in his wise providence, allow his arch-enemy to try the souls of men. But when the time of trial is past, He will come in visible form. Then shall His people come together with shouting, and ascend to dwell in his palace forever But his enemies shall be bound hand and foot and cast into eternal punishment.

Then shall His kingdom be infinitely and eternally glorious. In garments washed whiter than driven snow by the blood of the Lamb, his rejoicing followers will cast down their glittering crown before Him, crying, "Holy, holy, holy, oh Lord of hosts! The heavens declare thy glory! The Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Let His people rejoice!" In that glad eternity, the glorified saints will declare to each other the wonders their King has wrought in and for them, and stirred to new ecstacy by the wondrous tale, will join in louder hallelujahs before the throne, to Him who ever reigneth. No more then will the things of this life appear sad or inscrutable, for He shall wipe away all tears, and reveal all things. Bowing before Him, with inexpressible fullness of joy, His redeemed children will ascribe to Him all honor and praise, and power, and shout, "Hosannah to the Lamb that once was slain That washed us in His own blood. That clothed us with His own robe To Him be glory now and forever And the angels, catching the rapture and ecstacy of their hallelujahs, will join in their shout, "Glory to God in the highest! For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!"

From the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"The Little Church Around the Corner."

BY BISHOP E. M. MARVIN, D. D.

I HAVE just received the Baltimore Advocate of February 11th, and can not refrain from expressing thanks to Dr. Boud for his article on, "The Little Church around the Corner."

A Christian minister is called upon to open his church to the funeral of an actor. This he declines to do, but is willing to officiate at a private house. Funeral ceremonies in the church are granted "only to ministers or other persons particularly esteemed by the Church." This actor, engaged in a calling acknowledged on all sides to be demoralising, is denied such a public and emphatic endorsement by the Church. Whereupon the theatrical world is convulsed with indignation, and the piety of the secular press is dreadfully shocked. Aye, and certain ministers of the Gospel and correspondents of religious papers join the hue and cry, and come suddenly to discover wonderful good traits in actors that are commended to the imitation of Churches.

So far as I have seen, Dr. Bond is the first to give a manly utterance in behalf of this defamed minister. He stands quietly before the pack that is in full cry, and says the theatre is a bad institution. Anything good in it is exceptional. Players of good character are the exception, not the rule. A young woman that becomes an actress puts her virtue in extreme peril. The very neighborhood, of the theatre is infamous, so much so that self respecting people will not live in its vicinity. When this man was dead, a man whose life had been spent in such a calling, a Christian minister refuses him any special honors. He does not refuse sympathy. He does not refuse his official services He simply refuses any special honors of the Church. He would not give any endorsement of this wicked calling. He did right

But what an opportunity this was for newspaperdom! Who would have suspected so much piety in the newspapers! They are fall and running over with it. What preachers of charity they become all at once! Charity! To what vile uses is this holy word betrayed! It is made to serve in the cause of an institution that is constantly decoying the youth of both sexes into the ways of infamy and death. And Christian ministers must be browbeaten for their refusal to swell the popular current that sets so strongly toward destruction. If they refuse the sanction of religion upon this vile business they are uncharitable.

The time is long past when I felt any special concern about attacks upon the Church in the news papers It is the function of the pulpit to condemn and oppose all sin. It is in its very nature a sort of public censor. I suppose it is in human nature to be jealous of all censors. The pulpit cannot escape this result. It is to be expected that a restive criticism should assail it. And the secular press has never been slow to avail itself of every occasion of attack. Any clerical scandal is at once seized upon and published in most elaborate detail, with such remark as evinces a keen relish of the gossip. In this manner the world takes its petty revenge upon the pulpit. It cannot be expected to let its opportunity slip.

And the press has come to think itself omnipotent. Not a few believe it to be so. Sensitive people, therefore, are apt to see ruin in the philippic of the newspapers. They fall into spasms when the press turns its formidable batteries upon any point in which they are interested. They crouch and shiver and seek to propitiate this mighty agency, the press. Even ministers have been known to be frightened out of all propriety. My dear, fidgety friend, don't shake so. Things have not gone to pieces yet. Newspaper scandalmongers are not omnipotent They are, in fact, unimportant folk when they undertake to assail things which God has settled in the deep foundations of truth and nature. Let them go their way. Don't bow down to them, and begin to apologise before them, and half side with them Stand in your lot. Keep your poise, and let the little tempest blow

I wonder if this great press imagines that it can dictate to the Church how it shall deport itself with respect to the theatre, and what it shall do in any case when it has to deal with the solemn facts that belong to death and eternity! It is not mere questions of decency and good manners that the minister of Christ has before him. If he is not a hypocrite he looks upon men not simply nor chiefly in the light of social claims, but in the light of judgment and eternity. He can never, without trifling with the holy office, do an act that may take off the edge of rebuke upon a wicked calling, or counteract the force of just denunciation of the men engaged in it. He cannot classify the actor with the saint at the grave's mouth, nor dismiss him to eternity with solemn, sanctimonious eclat.

Now, if the secular papers become lugubriously solemn all at once, and set themselves to forging thunder bolts, don't lose your self respect at all. These papers are a queer compound Here you see in one column a notice of a Church-meeting and a horse race, a long account of a prize-fight giving every disgusting detail, and a report of the proceedings of a Bible Anniversary. One paragraph eulogises the actors who performed almost nude the night before, and the next compliments the very eloquent discourse of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Blandmanner. Just think of what stuff the piety of the newspapers is made! A moment's reflection will show you how reasonable it is that they should fall, every now and then, into a paroxysm of holy horror at what the preachers do. The religious sentiment that results from such a select mixture must be exquisitely sensitive. It will be thrown into an agony if some preacher is a more simple compound Truth and duty are chief ingredients No wonder if there should be a directness in it which the sensibilities of the other cannot tolerate.

But, after all, the press can not greatly damage the Church, for several reasons. Many editors of secular papers are conscientious Christian men, who, if they do anything against religion do it inadvertently. Nor is the press a unit. What one portion pulls down, another builds up. Nor yet, were it a unit, could it do all things according to its own will. After all the disgusting relish with which it parades every case of clerical delinquency, the public heart still confides in ministers, whom as a class it has always found trustworthy. Men know that instances of hypocrisy among preachers of the Gospel are even more rare than might be expected, considering that human nature is what it is.

The course pursued by the newspapers in this case is not surprising, nor should I think or care anything about it particularly but for the fact that some preachers seem to have struck their colors and gone over to the enemy. There never was a time that called more loudly for an independent pulpit than this very time. Wealth and worldliness intrude upon the Church in many forms. Our Savior said: "It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven." The worldly spirit intensifies under the pursuit and accumulation of riches. The very prosperity of the country environs the Church with dangers. As riches increase in the Church we may look to see many members more or less affected by the temptations that accompany wealth The rich are brought immediately into fashionable circles where the theatre and the dance reign supreme, and where they lose caste unless they worship the goddess of pleasure. Fashionable people many of them, are almost destitute of all true politeness. They are forever saying and doing things which put the earnest and conscientious Christian into awkward situations. The social pressure is almost irresistible, and compliance with the spirit and the ways of the God forgetting throng is certain to come in unless there is great self command and great courage. Discipline is in great danger of being relaxed. If ever the ministry begins to lower its front before this presuming and despotic demigod—society—the Church will be swept at once into a degraded and corrupt condition that will defeat all the ends of its organization.

Mark what I say! God holds preachers whom he calls to this sacred office responsible for the purity of the Church. If they, through cowardice or self seeking, begin to wink at worldly abominations in the Church, all is lost, and they will answer for it at the last day.

Tell me—are there not pastors among us who tolerate drunkards in the Church because they are men too important to be dealt with? Are theatre-going, the dance and the circus winked at? If so, then God will soon raise up another Wesley, and our organization will become effete—our [illegible] will be rendered as it [illegible] place. Another will take our crown. God will have no use for Methodism when it ceases to be an embodiment of vital piety. In that case we will be thrice dead—plucked up by the roots No man is of any real importance to the Church who ceases at least to be an earnest seeker after God: and that the fashionable, worldly professor is not.

I have reason to believe that in some places infamous lottery speculations have been engaged in by members of the Church, and winked at by pastors. Is this undisguised gambling to be tolerated? No wonder that many are weak and sickly among us, and many dying the death. As the country advances in prosperity and the Church increases in numbers, the encroachment of worldliness will be more and more obtrusive, and an intelligent and fearless pastorate will become more and more essential The tendency will be to sacrifice earnestness to elegance in public worship, and to sacrifice discipline to pew rent in the pastoral administration.

May the Lord Jesus Christ, that great Shepherd of the sheep, preserve to us a spiritual and independent pastorate!

Galveston, Texas, Feb. 18, 1871.

SINK YOUR WELL.—The easiest time to sink your well is in wet weather but the best time to dig one is in a time of drouth. Many wells sunk in times of spring freshets or autumn rains, in a little while are dry, and then the well has to be taken up and sunk deeper. The best time to sink a well, and the only time when a perpetual supply of water can be obtained, is in a time of drouth; then, as the well goes deeper and deeper, it passes beyond the surface water, and strikes those hidden currents which feed it from unfailing fountains.

There are many souls whose only knowledge of the water of life is gained in times of freshets, in revivals, when everything seems afloat; when the windows of heaven seem opened, and the earth beneath is saturated with the abundant showers. Then they know the blessedness of living water; but in the time of drouth, when comforts wither and joys depart, when all tokens of reviving have vanished, and when everything seems like barrenness and desolation, they too feel the blight of prevailing influences, and become like fountains that fail. Then is the time to sink such wells. Go deeper—learn something of the depths of the love of God. Go down through all this surface water, until you strike the divine reservoir, which cannot fail. Then as from an Artesian fountain there gushes up a stream which cannot fail, so in your heart the word that Christ has given shall be unto you a well of water springing up into everlasting life. Sink your well. Do not wait for a freshet, do not wait for a revival; now in your time of drouth and desolation, go to your Bible, go to your closet, go to your Savior, go to your God. Do not forsake the living waters; do not hew out broken cisterns that hold no water. Dig deep. Taste the divine fullness. Dwell in God, and God shall dwell in you.—The Christian.

A poor, simple hearted African once went to Mr. Moffatt, the missionary, and told him, with a lugubrious face, that his dog had torn his copy of the Testament, and swallowed some leaves of it; and that he was grieved about it, for the dog was very valuable.

"But," said the missionary, "why do you grieve so? You can get another Testament, and the leaves will not hurt the dog."

"Ah!" said the savage, "that's what I fear. He is a good hunter and a good watch dog, and the New Testament is so full of gentleness and love that I am afraid he will never be of service again."

The Queen of Madagascar is a temperance society, a woman's crusade, and how many good things we do not know—all within herself She knocks in the heads of whisky and brandy barrels, and pours their contents into the ocean. What a grand example is the sovereign of a far off isle, not long ago filled with a barbarous people, for imitation by the rulers of "enlightened" Christian countries. Would that they might follow it. "Long live the Queen!"

Among the Alleghanies.

Mr J H. Myrover, the accomplished Editor of the Fayetteville Gazette, was one of the delegates to the St. Louis Convention, and wrote some highly interesting letters to his paper while on his trip. The following extract which we cull from one of his letters, describing his route to St. Louis, is a beautiful and well drawn picture of a scene in the Alleghany Mountains:

"Sitting quietly in the smoking car digesting a hearty dinner, and persuading myself that I was enjoying a very poor cigar, when about [illegible] hour from Altoona, some one passed through and advised me to be on the look out, as we were nearing the "Horse Shoe." I walked out on the platform, to be greeted by the most magnificent and exciting scene which my eyes had ever rested on—railroad travel at 40 miles an hour over the top of the Alleghanies! Just before us, as I could see by clutching the iron rail and leaning away down, was a marvelous piece of engineering: a curve of at least a semi circle, with a radius of only about 300 yards, which had been made to avoid a precipitous gorge, and which carried us to the top of the mountain. Three powerful engines were put in requisition to convey us over this wonderful grade, and as they swept around the bend the passengers in the rear cars looked across the ravine and saw the straining locomotives puffing and blowing directly opposite them. And then there came to the eyes of the wayfarer from the sandy plains and level bottoms of North Carolina a landscape combining all that could be majestic, pleasing and picturesque in the phenomena and manifestations of nature. From the summit of the mountain we looked out upon the grandeur of rugged peaks on either side, gray rocks piled in reckless ruin below us, yawning precipices at our feet, immense forests in one wild stretch of russet and green rolling away for miles underneath us—a waving carpet of vivid brilliant color in the furnishing of this grand panorama of nature; and away beyond, to the south and east, an immense extent of fertile field and cultivated plain, watered by glistening streams, and dotted here and there with quiet villages and bustling towns—while upon all the bright sun of heaven beamed down, searching into the recesses of wood and dale, silvering the mountain brook and swift rolling stream, and flooding in mellow light the lofty spires and stately structures of the habitations of men.

By the way, we who stood that bright afternoon looking down, with bated breath and quickening pulse, from the highest point of our Western route, came near having a sensation in our midst, which would have rivaled the most dramatic of all tragedies: a beautiful young girl, apparently about seventeen, under the escort of her father, evidently—a splendid specimen of cultivated manhood, bearing about him all the evidences of refinement and wealth—came on upon the platform I was struck with her pure ethereal beauty, and, too, with the emotion and feeling with which she feasted her lovely eyes upon the wonder and beauty of the scene before her. She stood for a moment motionless and then, as all its glory and grandeur burst upon her, her nostrils dilated, her breath came quick and short, her eyes sparkled, she clasped her hands together, her yellow hair flattered in the wind, and with a smothered cry she leaped forward as if she would plunge headlong from the train. Her father's strong arm seized her, and it is needless to say that her too intense enjoyment was immediately interrupted, as he clasped her in his arms and hurried back into the car I passed her on my way to my seat, her head hidden on his shoulder, and her slight frame shaken with sobs."

What the Microscope Reveals.

A learned man tells us of an insect, seen with the microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite.

Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand.

Mould is a forest of beautiful trees with the branches, leaves, and fruit.

Butterflies are fully feathered.

Hairs are hollow tubes.

The surface of our bodies is covered with scales like fish: a single grain of sand would cover one hundred and fifty of these scales, and yet a scale covers five hundred pores. Through these narrow openings the perspiration forces itself like water through a sieve.

Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of living creatures swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea.

Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing upon it like cows on a meadow.

Yes, even the ugliest plant that grows shows some remarkable property when closely examined.

Safe With God.

In our religious life temptation is a fearful fact; an equally remarkable fact, on the other side, is the exercise of Divine protecting power, the casting about us of an invisible shield. The existence of such facts convince us that God designs to try His people; and they also convince us that in the hour of peril He will allow only the dross to be burned away in the furnace. The enemy is allowed to be at large to approach, sometimes even to touch and chasten the saints, as he did Job and Christ: but he has no power to destroy or to, or reprove. [illegible] invisible hand is extended to us, a mysterious protection is cast about us.

An incident related by Mrs. Pearsall Smith beautifully illustrates this phase of Christian experience. During her residence in London, she saw one day a gaudy butterfly sporting in the sunbeams at her window, when a sparrow darted up on the outside to capture the little insect: but he was hindered by the interposed pane of glass. For a long time the sparrow could not understand the cause of his failure. The prey was in full view and close at hand; the protection was invisible. He tried again and again, but in vain. The butterfly was in a flutter, but he was all the time safely within his protecting enclosure.

This is emblematic of the saint's security. The enemy presses upon him, but the mountain is full of the horses and chariots of God. They that are for Him are mightier than they that are against Him. He is compassed about with an invisible shield, which no attacks of the enemy will be able to penetrate. He only needs to remain trustfully within his enclosure, and all is secure. No man shall be able to pluck him from the Saviour's hand.—Zion's Herald.

Unintentional Beneficence.

Selfish men are largely benefactors without intending to be. They build splendid mansions, lay out magnificent grounds, collect expensive libraries which they never consume. They do all this from the impulses of vanity, pride, rivalry, and self indulgence. When called upon to do an unostentatious act of genuine kindness they beg to be excused: they cannot afford it Yet God is using their selfishness to create industry, to afford pleasure to multitudes who, though poor, love the beautiful. Many a rich man is simply God's superintendent of the sources of pleasure and profit which He intends the poor of this world shall be able to enjoy without having the trouble of taking care of them

But such men have their reward. Their reward is in the gratification of their selfishness, and they have it; and that is all they have. Dives was not a harsh man. He was simply a rich gentleman, willing that Lazarus should sit at his gate and eat the crumbs from off his table, but not interested enough about him to sympathize with his helplessness or to care for his wants.—Baptist Union.

A Common Mistake.

It is a great mistake to suppose that little can be accomplished if a man has reached the age of thirty or forty years. Nine tenths of our clever men have actually exhibited more vigor of intellect at fifty years of age, than at forty. Franklin was forty before he began, in real earnest, the study of natural philosophy. The principal of one of the most flourishing colleges in America, was a farm servant until he was past the age when most students have completed their collegiate education. Sir Henry Spelman did not begin the study of science until he was between fifty and sixty years of age Greek was the first foreign language which Cato, the celebrated Roman censor, acquired, and he did so in his old age. Alfieri, whose writings have caused a revolution in the dramatic literature of Italy, was left without a father in his infancy, and wasted his early years.—John Ogilby, the author of poetical translations from Virgil and Homer, began the study of Latin when about forty years of age, and Greek in his forty fourth. Boccaccio, one of the most illustrious writers that ever appeared in Italy, suffered nearly half of his life to pass without improvement. Handel was forty eight before he published any of his great works. Dr. Thomas Arnold, of Rugby, learned German at forty, in order that he might read Niebuhr in the original.—Anon.

O blessed prayer, thou art the unwearied conqueror of human woes. Thy voice of comfort is as a moist whistling wind in the midst of the furnace, tempering the heat of the flames.—St. Chrysostom.

All is lost when the people fear death less than poverty.

Stop and Shake Hands.

Why is it men dart out of prayer-meeting as soon as the benediction is given? The true idea of the Church is, that it is a family—God's family. Its members are children of one Father; and brothers and sisters one of another. A prayer-meeting, therefore, is a family meeting. It is a reunion of brothers and sisters. The service is of the character of a feast; and we all know that after feasting comes talking and exhibition of good nature. After the formal portion of the service is over, brethren, why not [illegible] what the Spirit suggests; tell your joys and your sorrows, your hopes and your fears, one to another. "Laugh with those who laugh, and weep with those who weep." Don't file out of the room, solemn as crows fly to the groves at night, passing through gloom into deeper gloom; but go forth happy, as children pour out of the door when father and mother start out with them for a ramble in the bright sunshine across the green fields. At least stay long enough, after the formal service, to shake hands with the pastor and with each other, and greet any stranger that may chance to have dropped in among you of an evening. Lubricate the wheels of your Church machinery with the "oil of gladness," and you will be astonished at the ease with which all its parts will soon be working together. "Salute every saint in Christ Jesus."—Golden Rule.

THE VATICAN.—This word is often used, but there are many who do not understand its import. The term refers to a collection of buildings on one of the hills of Rome, which cover a space of twelve hundred feet in length and eleven hundred in breadth. It is built on the spot once occupied by the garden of cruel Nero It owes its origin to the Bishop of Rome, who in the early part of the sixth century erected an humble residence on its site. About the year 1160 Pope Eugenius rebuilt it on a magnificent scale.

The library of the Vatican was commenced fourteen hundred years ago. It contains forty thousand manuscripts, among which are some by Pliny, St. Thomas, St. Charles Borromeo, and many Hebrew, Syriac, Arabian and American Bibles.

The whole of the immense buildings composing the Vatican are filled with statues found beneath the ruins of ancient Rome; with paintings by the masters, and with curious medals and antiquities of almost every description.

When it is known that there have been exhumed more than seventy thousand statues from the ruined temples and palaces of Rome, the reader can form an idea of the richness of the Vatican. It will ever be held in veneration by the student, the artist and the scholar. Raphael and Michael Angelo are enthroned there, and their throne will be as durable as the love of beauty and genius in the hearts of their worshippers.

A SPANISH TRADITION.—There is a tradition among the Spanish peasants that contains a beautiful lesson for all young people. Their favorite saint, Isidore, as a boy seemed hopelessly dull and ignorant. No one could teach him anything. He was so scolded and grumbled at that he one day determined to run away from his teacher, and give up all attemps at becoming what his parents wished—a good scholar. He wandered from school in a very sad and disheartened mood, until at last he sat down on the steps of an old roadside well. There his eyes happened to fall on its worn marble sides. He saw that the continual friction of ropes had worn quite a hollow groove in the hard, white stone. A bright thought struck the boy's mind. "If a cord by constant rubbing can thus indent marble, mere perseverance and study would make even me remember and profit by what I learn. I will try what I can do." So saying, Isidore went back cheerfully to his school, determined to study with all his strength. He would be the rope and make his mark. And he did so well that he afterward became celebrated all over Spain for his wisdom and learning.

A native church at Peshawur, India, is under the charge of Rev. Inam Shah, a converted Mohammedan. About 80 Mohammedans have been baptized as members, and, it is thought, constitute the largest body of direct converts from Islam to be found anywhere

The bishops of the M. E. Church are to send one of their number, twice before the next General Conference, from San Francisco to China and Japan; twice to Italy and India conjointly, and once to Africa.

The pleasure of doing good is the only one that never wears out.

"The Secret Chambers of the Heart."

There are wide halls, long corridors and grand old reception-rooms in the heart, where friendships meet and mingle. There are well arrayed drawing-rooms and beautiful courts, where the world's people gather, and enjoy the ordinary music of life, and feast upon the substantial food of reason, where all things are ordered according to rule. 'Tis common ground, and our common humanity stands upon it, and sing the syren song of equality. But away up the winding stairs of experience are the we conduct the hearts idols, gathered from the masses below, and lifted gently in love's strong arms. No loud-sounding foot-fall is heard upon the floor: no rude hand is laid upon the door-knob; no harsh voice rings through the courts, or echoes from the walls. But peace and quiet hold their pleasant seances, and the gentle hummings soothe the soul to rest. Tis within these secret chambers we speak the names we dare not breathe without. Here we look in eyes where love's fountains swell up pure and sparkling as the mountain spring. Here we abandon ourselves to the delicious dreams of love, and no alarms are sounded: while often times the tears of past regrets may secretly fall, "for the heart knoweth its own bitterness," yet "with its joys, a stranger may not meddle."

Rev. John Stewart, who died recently in Chicago, left to the Methodist Episcopal Church Extension Board ten thousand dollars in bonds bearing ten per cent, interest. The conditions of the gift are as follows: It is provided that no church is to be aided from this fund if it cost when completed more than three thousand dollars. Five thousand are to be loaned in aid of churches erected for the freedmen in the South; Mrs. Stewart is to have an annuity of six per cent, during the rest of her life. To make the matter of immediate service to the Church, the bonds are to be sold, and the proceeds applied right away to realize the aims of the liberal donor.

A FALSE IDEA.—It is a mistaken idea, entertained by many, that riches are necessary to perfect happiness.—It is scarcely necessary to state a fact so well understood, that many men and women possessed of great wealth are exceedingly unhappy. A thousand things occur, in the fluctuations and busy scenes of life to bring sorrow and discontent to the homes of the rich as well as to those of the poor.—It is in the homes of people of moderate means, as a rule, that happiness is found. The highest riches do not consist in a princely income; there is greater wealth than this. It consists in a good constitution, good digestion, a good heart, stout limbs, a sound mind, and a clear conscience. Some one says that good bones are better than gold, tough muscles than silver, and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function are better than houses and lands.

The Bible has been largely distributed throughout the regions of the River Platte. Every city in the Argentine and Uraguay Republics have been visited, and some of them repeatedly. Over 5,000 copies of the Scriptures have been circulated in this field by the American Bible Society alone. At first, the Bible was prohibited and denounced from the pulpit and frequently burnt. Public opinion is more liberal, and Romanism has lost its hold.

The peace of God is well grounded. It is based on a recognition of a preceding state of enmity, confusion and war against what is good. It is based on a later repentance and reconciliation through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Among the Creek Indians the Baptists have thirty-two churches, besides an association among the Choctaws, Chickasaws, and Cherokees; and also a Church organized among the Seminoles.

PUFFS OR POP OVERS.—Take one pint of sweet milk, two eggs, three and one-half cups (ordinary size) of flour, and one and one-half a teaspoonful of salt. The eggs should be beaten very light before adding the milk and flour, and the whole well beaten and perfectly free from lumps before placing in the cups, which should be heated and very thoroughly buttered (not greased,) and about one-third filled with the batter. It is better to turn the milk and eggs upon the already sifted flour, adding it by degrees, as with care there will be no lumps if mixed this way, instead of putting the flour gradually into the liquid. Bake in a quick oven about twenty minutes. Our range will bake them in fifteen minutes. It saves trouble and annoyance, as well as some burning of fingers, if the pans or cups are placed in a large dripping-pan before placing in the oven.

RALEIGH, N. C., AUGUST 9, 1876.

All letters on business with this office should be addressed to the Christian Advocate, Raleigh, N. C.

The Cross (X) Mark is to remind you that your subscription has expired. Let all renew promptly.

The Raleigh District Conference adopted a resolution recommending to all our people Dr. Haygood's New Book, "Our Children."

Rev. F. M. Kennedy, D. D., of the Southern Christian Advocate, preached at Front Street Church, Wilmington, on the last Sabbath to...ious friends in that city.

The Senior Editor attended the Charlotte District Conference last week and will, upon his return, give an account of his visit. If practicable, he will visit the Salisbury District Conference which meets at Mocksville this week.

We hope to receive early reports of the proceedings of the Hillsboro and Fayetteville District Conferences which were in session last week. We regret that the ADVOCATE could not be represented at these Conferences, but as they conflicted with the Charlotte District Conference, which the Senior attended, it was impracticable.

The following resolution was introduced and unanimously adopted at the District Conference in Louisburg:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the Raleigh CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and earnestly recommend it to the patronage of our people as necessary in order to keep them instructed in regard to their duty and work as a church.

Mr. Thomas Hazlehurst, who, from his unbounded munificence to the church of his faith, was known as the Prince of Methodism, died recently in England at the age of 61 years. It is thought that during his life he gave $250,000 for the building of chapels, and that he laid the foundation stones of 100 chapels in Great Britain and on the Continent. He spent the latter part of his life in writing and printing sermons, of which it is estimated that he gave away more than a million of copies.

We have discontinued and shall discontinue sending the Advocate to a good many subscribers whose terms of subscription have expired. It is with great regret that we do this. We would be glad to furnish the paper free of cost, but are not able to do so. Our expenses are large and must be met regularly and promptly. If every one who is in arrears will promptly renew his subscription and forward the money, it would help us greatly. It may seem to some that we can do without the small sums they owe us, and hence they wait until a more convenient season to send us our dues. But we trust they will reflect that "many a mickle makes a muckle," and if all will pay up their small sums, we shall have an aggregate that will relieve us greatly and enable us to keep off the phantom of unpaid bills.

Renew promptly your subscriptions. If your paper has been stopped and you will order the renewal at once, back numbers can be supplied. If you do not intend to renew, please remit for the time the paper was received after the expiration of your subscription. We do not wish, however, to lose any subscribers. Our relations with our readers have been too pleasant to...o render us willing to sunder t...em so suddenly. Before the d..., on which you read this, expires, we trust that each one of you will have enclosed to us your order for the renewal of subscription accompanied by the price of the paper. If you cannot do this, instruct your preacher to order the renewal of your paper to be paid at Conference and we will continue it.

Randolph Macon College.

The Board of Trustees of Randolph Macon College met in Richmond week before last and elected its President and two Professors to fill respectively the chairs of Ancient and Modern Languages, made vacant by the resignation of Professors Price and Harrison. Rev J D Blackwell, D. D., was unanimously elected President; Professor R. E. Blackwell was chosen to fill the chair of Modern Languages; Professor Chas. Morris that of Latin and Greek and Dr. R. E. Bagwell, College Physician.

Professor Morris, a native of Hanover, is an A. M. graduate of the University of Virginia, and is now filling the chair of Greek and Belles Lettres in the University of Georgia. Professor Blackwell is an A. M. of Randolph Macon, and is now pursuing his studies in Germany. He filled the place of Assistant Professor of Greek and English prior to his graduation, and was pronounced by Professor Price an accurate and critical scholar, and a man of great promise.

Raleigh District Conference.

The Raleigh District Conference, of which some account was given in our last, was a decided success. All the preachers were present except Rev. J. H. Wheeler of the Smithfield circuit, and Rev. J. E Thompson of the Cary circuit, who were prevented from attending for satisfactory reasons—Their charges were well represented, however, by lay delegates.

The Presiding Elder, Rev. J. P. Moore, conducted the business of the Conference with dispatch and to the satisfaction of all present. The various interests of the church passed in review before the Conference, and important resolutions were presented, ably discussed and adopted. Should they be faithfully carried out, much good must be the result. The report of the spiritual condition of all the charges was very encouraging, and considering the great monetary depression throughout the country, the report of the entire District was all that we could reasonably expect.—Some portions of the District have been greatly blessed with revivals, and many have been added to the church. The duty of family religion was brought prominently before Conference. A resolution was introduced by a layman, and discussed at length, calling upon all heads of families to "take up the cross" of family prayer. This was truly a move in the right direction. God speed the day when the altar of prayer shall be erected in every Christian family!

The preaching of the word during the entire Conference was uniformly good, "not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Under its divine influence God's people were made to rejoice, and sinners to tremble and cry for mercy. The interest of the occasion was heightened by the presence and labors of Revs. Yates of the Newbern District, B. B. Culbreth from the Washington Station, V. A. Sharpe, Agent of our Conference Colleges, and J. R. Griffith of the Warren circuit. The address of Bro. Yates on the relation of Methodism to the Sunday school work, on Sabbath afternoon, was a grand success. For more than an hour he enchained the attention of the vast audience with his thrilling eloquence. The address of Dr. Burkhead on Methodism and the grounds of its success was a masterly production. We heard a gentleman of marked intelligence say that he had never heard it surpassed by any one, and in this opinion all who heard it, so far as we heard an expression at all, most heartily concur. The address of Bro. Boshamer we were unavoidably prevented from hearing, but we heard of it in words of high ...mend. He...to make a capital address Saturday morning on Education, in the interest of our Conference institutions.

To sum up the whole matter, in few words, we have seldom attended a District Conference of such interest from its beginning to its close. The pleasure of the occasion, as well as its success, is due in large measure to Bro. Reid, the pastor of the church in Louisburg, and the committee, who made such ample arrangements in advance for the accommodation of ministers, delegates and visitors. Every body who attended the Conference has a word of praise for Louisburg and her intelligent and generous hearted people. Our host, Bro. W. H. Pleasants and his interesting family, were so kind, attentive and hospitable that we shall ever cherish grateful recollections of him and his. In behalf of the Conference we return our sincere thanks to Geo. S. Baker, Esq., for publishing the Daily Courier during our session and for the interest thus shown in giving the public the benefit of its deliberations.

We cannot close our brief notice without calling special attention to Louisburg Female College. It will be remembered that at our District Conference held at Oxford a year ago, it was resolved to establish a District School at Louisburg. Accordingly a board of directors was appointed to make all necessary arrangements to carry out the resolutions, which was done and well done. Rev. F. L. Reid was selected to preside over the institution, assisted by Mrs. C. D. Lawrence in the literary department, and Miss Annie R. Fuller was chosen to take charge of the department of music. There is much to commend this school to the patronage of our people. In addition to the educational facilities offered, there is a pecuniary consideration rarely to be found in any of our schools and colleges at the present day. Board per month is only $10, while tuition is at the low figures of $15 per session. To our people, in this District especially, who have daughters to educate, we take pleasure in commending this school as in every way worthy of their patronage.

Rev. C. H. Phillips, writing from Lexington under date of July 28th, says:

"Please say through the ADVOCATE, the Lord is reviving his work on Davidson circuit. The 3d Qr. Meeting commenced the 22d instant at Midway, which was protracted to 26th. 18 souls professed religion, the membership was much revived.

I hope to make a good report for Davidson at Conference, spiritually and financially. The Lord's name be praised!"

A Catholic college and church are to be erected at De Graff, Minn, for which forty acres of land have been purchased as a site.

President Grant's Letter.

Our province is not politics; and we would not, if we could, influence through our paper the political sentiments or vote of any reader of the Advocate. We have our party preferences, it is true; but as far as we are able to prevent it, they are not allowed to "crop out," even, in our columns. And we do not think we violate our rule in that regard, when we condemn and rebuke the intemperate and heated letter of President Grant to Governor Chamberlain, of South Carolina, concerning the recent unfortunate occurrence at Hamburg of which we gave an account last week. The affair was lamentable and disgraceful, and the guilty parties deserve the condemnation of all people from the President down, as well as the severe punishment of the law. But when the President of the United States perverts an official letter to the purposes of a political harangue, and taking the Hamburg riot as his text, makes a general onslaught upon the South, he deserves the censure of the public press and the people whose rule he is.

The President says: "The scene at Hamburg as read bloodthirsty wantonness, unprovoked and unabated for as it was, is only a repetition of the course which has been pursued in other Southern States within the last few years, notably in Mississippi and Louisiana. Mississippi is governed to day by officials chosen through fraud and violence, such as would scarcely be accredited to savages, much less to a civilized and christian people." "Nothing is claimed for one State that is not freely accorded to all others, unless it be the right to kill negroes and republicans without fear of punishment and without loss of caste or reputation. This has seemed to be a privilege claimed by a few States."

Aside from the fact that the letter was written before a full investigation and statement of the facts connected with the Hamburg affair had been made, and was therefore based on assumptions or ex parte statements which might or might not be true, there is a severity of tone and an intemperance of feeling manifested which does not comport well with the dignity of an official document. He goes "dehors the record," too, to reflect severely upon the other Southern States, in such a way that a foreigner upon reading it would believe that throughout the South a general state of affairs has existed similar to the one at Hamburg. His attack upon the people and rulers of Mississippi was uncalled for by the purposes of his communication to Gov. Chamberlain. And when it is remembered that the committee of Congress, appointed to investigate the alleged Mississippi election frauds and riots, has not yet reported the intemperance and recklessness of Mr. Grant's language will more clearly appear.

Life, liberty and property are as safe in the South as in the North.—Hamburg affairs may occur occasionally, just as outrages may occur in the North; but they are sporadic and not symptomatic of the general condition of Southern society or evidence of a wide spread feeling of enmity between the races.

The authority of the law is respected and courts are able to enforce obedience to its mandates; and while some outrages have occurred, shocking to humanity and disgraceful to civilization, still the Southern people are to be commended, generally, for their forbearance under unusual provocations to wrong doing. They will not therefore feel grateful to President Grant for the unjust light in which his letter places them before the world, and for the bad feeling which it will serve to keep alive on the part of the Northern people toward the South.

Mr. Gladstone.

An incident is related of Mr. Gladstone, the English Statesman, which shows that he is great of soul as well as of intellect. Amid all the burdens which his position as the virtual ruler of England imposes, he does not forget the demands which religion and humanity make upon his heart and hand, and never loses an opportunity for acts of thoughtful kindness and Christian faithfulness. An old man had been accustomed to sweep the side walk in front of his house in London, and had often received gratuities from him. At length Mr. Gladstone missed him from his work. He instituted inquiries about him and learned that he was sick. Mr. Gladstone found out his very humble quarters, visited him, attended to his comforts, and then, before leaving, kneeled down by his bedside and offered a fervent prayer. This fact the old man gratefully told his parish rector when he visited him, and from this source the incident was obtained. It was only his "bounden duty," to be sure, but how blessed a fact it would be, and how much would come of it, if more of our statesmen exhibited practically such "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father!"

The foreign missionary work of the Presbyterian Church May 1, 1876, had:—American missionaries, 134, and communicants, 8,577. The increase of communicants was 1,676, the largest ever reported. The most remarkable success has been in Japan and Mexico. In the former the members have increased during the year from 46 to 118, and in the latter from 1,000 to 2,300.

Notes and Comments.

There are a great many people in the world who are well enough to go to a circus, ball or club-meeting, but always too sick to attend prayer-meeting.

— The General Lutheran Council of the United States have passed a resolution, that the ministers of that Church shall not exchange pulpits with those of other denominations. This has just been endorsed by the New York Lutheran Ministerium, but there are decided protests against this narrowness, and the result will, doubtless, be a division.

— The English Bishop of Lincoln wants to bring all the Methodists back into the Church of England. He says that John Wesley never intended to leave the Church of England and he hopes to see the day when Methodism will take its old place in the Church. Whereupon the New York Herald pointedly asks "when that consummation shall be reached, will the Episcopalians do Methodist work, or will Methodists robe themselves in conservative lawn? It were easier to make gunpowder lio quietly in the bosom of a flame than to make Methodism and the most aggressive Church in christendom, with the exception of Catholicism—assume the grave demeanor and slow dignity of Episcopalians."

— We nod our approval to the Zion's Herald, of Boston, when it comments on the folly of trying to be witty. A wit, like a poet, nascitur non fit. The Herald says: At the celebration of the Fourth in London, our new minister, Mr. Pierrepont, unfortunately undertook to be witty. His success was not remarkable. Mr. Schenck's poker and Mr. Pierrepont's jokes are not so desirable as a little dignified statesmanship. We have known clerical ministers, and otherwise sensible men, to come very near making fools of themselves on public occasions and at social gatherings, by unseemly jocularity. A born wit is a natural spring, bubbling up because it cannot help it. Let it have its way, it flows by divine right. But your force-pump joker is simply despicable.

— The Methodist, of London, says that Methodism in Ireland has been almost stationary for the last hundred years; and even where there is the largest and most rapidly growing Protestant population, as in Belfast, it hardly holds its own. This state of things is attributed largely to the almost perfect organization of the Romish Church, and especially to the influence of the "Holy Family," a new association, rapidly spreading, which has an overseer male or female, to every street and district, to watch the flock and guard against Protestant proselytism. Also an increased activity among the Episcopal Church ministers has lessened the contrast to earnest Methodism which formerly gave to the latter a peculiar power.

— The better class of the English people have always protested against the action of the English government in forcing the opium trade upon China—a trade attended with the most fearful physical and moral results to the Chinese, and most disgraceful to the party which profits by the ruin of their fellow-men. There exists a society, the Anglo Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, which lately held a meeting in London, at which the traffic was denounced. The subject has also been brought before the House of Commons. It appears that the government is beginning to feel the force of public sentiment, and is considering the propriety of revising the treaties with China in connection with France, Germany, and the United States

Wait Not for Me.

I am grateful to the North Carolina Conference for its hearty endorsement of the Orphan work, and to the ministers who have so kindly received me wherever I have gone. Some have even suspended their meetings to give the Orphans a hearing. They are always ready to pray for the children. It was in another Conference that I found a preacher who, when invited to offer special prayer for the young, declared that he had "nothing collected on that subject." But I have one request to make of the preachers: Do not wait for me to come. Just tell the people of the Orphan work; tell them how hard the times are upon poor Orphans; how we are struggling to lift them out of ignorance and vice, and ask them if they desire to help carry on the work. If they do not, no complaint can be made. But if any wish to help us, in our present pressing need, just let them have the opportunity.

J. H. MILLS, Supt.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The following note has been received by the Editor:

"We, the Elders of the Presbyterian Church, (colored) wish you to express through the ADVOCATE our gratitude to the District Conference for supplying us with able and efficient ministers on Sunday of said Conference.

May the Lord be with and bless his ministering servants!"

District Conference Proceedings.

We are indebted to the efficient Secretary, S. C. White, Esq., and his assistant, S. L. Riddle, Esq., for the following synopsis of the proceedings of the Raleigh District Conference on the third and fourth days. The proceedings of the first and second days appeared last week.

THIRD DAY.

Conference opened by religious services conducted by Rev B B Culbroth.

Bro W C Lynam, lay delegate from Youngsville circuit, offered resolutions relative to the importance of public, private and family prayer and pledging the Conference to renewed interest in that direction. After, interesting discussion by various brethren, the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Rev F L Reid read a communication from G W Blount, G M G L of N C, asking for the cooperation of the members of this Conference in aid of the Orphan Asylum at Oxford.

Rev Dr Bobbitt, senior editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate, represented the interests of the paper before the Conference.

The hour for electing delegates to the Annual Conference having arrived, the following were duly elected: Dr P T Jerman, D W Bain, M S Davis, Rev J B Floyd.

The hour for divine services having arrived, the election of alternates was postponed until the afternoon session.

THIRD DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at the usual hour and was opened with religious exercises conducted by Rev J B Floyd

Rev J H Riddick, of the Virginia Conference, was introduced and invited to a seat within the bar

The election of alternates being in order, the following were elected: R W Best and J W Hays.

The Presiding Elder then called for reports on Missions, Sabbath Schools, Finance and Education.

Reports were made from the various charges, by pastors or lay delegates, showing a fair amount raised for Missions, and Sunday Schools tolerably well attended and in a flourishing condition. The finances appeared to be generally behind at present, but strong hopes were entertained that assessments would be fully met by the end of the Conference year. Very few schools in the District are connected with or under the control of the church.

On motion of Bro Boshamer, Henderson was selected as the place for holding the next session of the District Conference.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the book recently published by Dr A G Haygood, entitled "Our Children."

A resolution of thanks to the other churches of Louisburg for the use of their houses of worship, was adopted.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted endorsing the Raleigh Christian Advocate and pledging the hearty efforts of the Conference to increase its circulation.

Rev E A Yates, Dr L S Burkhead, Rev B B Culbroth, Rev J P Moore, Presiding Elder, and others spoke in high terms of praise of the paper and desired its extended circulation. It makes better Methodists of those who read it.

Resolutions were adopted thanking the good people of Louisburg for their refined and liberal hospitality to the members of the Conference and visitors.

A resolution was also adopted thanking the Presiding Elder and the Secretaries, S C White and S L Riddle, Esqs., for the able and efficient manner in which they discharged the duties of their positions.

FOURTH DAY—MORNING SESSION.

Conference opened with religious exercises by Rev R S Webb.

Preamble and resolutions offered by Bro S S Haithcock in regard to the failure of church members to pay their assessments for the support of the church, were discussed by many of the brethren

The hour having arrived for the address of Rev V A Sharpe agent for Greenboro, Trinity and Davenport Colleges, the regular business of Conference was suspended to hear the address, which was an earnest appeal to the Conference to aid in the liquidation of the debts of the Colleges.

The Conference was then addressed by Rev L S Burkhead, on "Methodism; the Grounds of its Success." It was an excellent address, replete with much and valuable information concerning our church and its history, and made a decided impression upon the congregation.

On motion the Conference adjourned.

FOURTH DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference opened with prayer by Rev M J Hunt.

The preamble and resolutions offered by Bro Haithcock in the morning session, came up as unfinished business and, after much discussion, were laid on the table.

The report of the committee on the District Conference Female School was called for. The committee submitted the following report of the Directors of the Louisburg Female College.

To the President and Members of the Raleigh District Conference.

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned, board of directors, appointed by your body at its last session, to carry out the resolution then adopted for establishing a Female school in the Louisburg, Female College building, beg leave to make the following report.

We have after much delay, succeeded in organizing and commencing the work. Rev F L Reid is Principal of the school. He is assisted by Mrs C. D. Lawrence; and Miss A. R. Fuller has charge of the department of Music. We think we have been fortunate to secure these ladies as they are well fitted for their respective places. Mrs. A. I. Harris has charge of the Boarding department, and is in every respect, qualified for the position. The directors assume no liability. The teachers and the head of the Boarding department depend entirely upon the patronage for their compensation.

The school opened on the 12th inst. and considering the scarcity of money, we should say, opened well—20 scholars have matriculated up to this date.

As will be seen by reference to the circular of the school, a copy of which is hereto appended, and which we desire shall be considered as part of this report, the prices for board and tuition are much lower than those charged by other schools offering equal advantages. The idea was to cheapen education. We believed this to be important. Our people can not pay high prices. When a man looks at your terms, and sees that he can not pay them, he dismisses the subject from his mind, and it is of no use to talk to that man about the importance of education. But let him see that he is able to pay the prices charged, and he at once becomes interested in the subject, as one about which he has some concern.

Since your last meeting, Mr. E. W. Fuller, a member of the board has died. We can not communicate this fact to you without expressing the sense of the remaining members of the Board at the great loss we have sustained, as well as his Church and indeed the whole community. And especially shall we miss him in this special enterprise, for his hand was ever ready for every good word and work.

We have the honor to be gentlemen.

Very respectfully,
Your ob't servt's.
J. J. DAVIS,
C. M. COOK,
R. F. YARBROUGH,
W. H. PLEASANTS.

Louisburg, N. C. July 27, 1876.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we as a Conference hail with pleasure the establishment of this School and do most heartily commend it to the patronage of our people within the bounds of the Raleigh District.

Bro Hoyle offered a resolution urging the church to come up to the full measure of their ability in the support of Foreign and Domestic Missions. Adopted.

Bro Bobbitt offered a resolution pledging the support of the District Conference to the Conference Colleges Adopted.

Bro Reid offered a resolution touching the importance of the Sunday School interests, and urging the Conference to renewed interest in building up this department of the church. Adopted.

Bro Webb offered a resolution looking to the observance of the week of prayer appointed by our Bishops, beginning with Friday, the 4th of August, as a day of fasting.

On motion of Bro Norman the Secretary was requested to furnish a synopsis of the proceedings of this Conference to the Raleigh Advocate for publication.

The Presiding Elder thanked the Conference for the kindness and courtesy with which he had been treated during the session.

On motion the Conference adjourned sine die.

Revivals.

MESSRS EDITORS: I notice in a late issue of the ADVOCATE an article headed revivals. Our Brother asked some experienced brethren to give their views on "what is the cause of success or failure in revival work." Now, I do not take the position that I am one of the experienced brethren, but in my short experience in the work of God I have found in many instances a natural tendency in both ministers and laymen to attribute the success of revivals to the good sermons, powerful prayers or peculiar plan of conducting the service.

The true cause of success, however, in revival work is produced by the Holy Spirit, which is in the midst of every congregation of warm-hearted, zealous christians who go to the sanctuary believing that God will meet them there, because Jesus said where two or three meet together in His name there He would be in the midst. Now, my Brother, when we take the promises by the hand of faith and go to the Father in the name of the Son, that in answer to the prayers of His children God will revive His work, then sinners will be convicted and converted, for we are taught that the effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much.

A LOCAL PREACHER.

The Catholic Review reports that the Xavier Union of New York has taken the initial steps toward celebrating the episcopal jubilee of the pope next year by a pilgrimage of American Catholics to Rome. A committee has been appointed to confer with other Catholic organizations through out the country.

Mt. Zion Pic-Nic

MESSRS EDITORS: Through the kindness of some of the managers, I received an invitation to attend a Basket Pic-Nic in upper Johnston. My anxiety to be present caused me to begin the journey in good time. On the morning of the 21st, the pic-nic day, instead of being kissed by the rays of a bright sun, my brow was shaded, because of the clouds that intervened. The extreme heat of the earth had been scattered by a refreshing shower of rain. The dark horizon and the running racks only caused people to hasten to the place of pleasure, where fortunately sufficient shelter might be found. I have heard of this community often; but I confess one is better able to judge after he has seen. Special blessings seem to have been poured upon this people. While other sections of the country have almost been parched to death by the hot rays of the sun, here the crops seem to wave in bright anticipations of a bountiful harvest. The people seem to recognize such favors as from Heaven. Harmony, peace and love are continually in their three fold form casting their sweet influences.—These are the pillars upon which the pic nic rested. The hearts of the people in this community had kindled into a flame, supported by these inestimable qualities, till they devised a plan by which to make it public, not only to neighbors and friends, but to strangers.

Their light shone. It was on a candle stick and gave light to all. I am now many miles away, but its rays shed around me a bright influence. Whether my life is overcast with dark clouds, or sweet flowers are plucked by my wayside, I will ever look back to this occasion with fond recollections.

The table, thirty yards in length, seemed to groan under its burden—a plenty and to share; everything was acting as a strain of pleasure. The stream of life seemed to be flowing near each one.

When we had consumed all the chicken, barbecue and pound cake, that seemed best for us, we were invited to a seat in the church, where we were entertained by a speech from Gen. McLean, of Harnett, who proved his eloquence and great ability. After which the name of Mr. B. W. Young, was called, whose appearance seemed to fill every heart with gladness, and cause every eye to shine brighter—in a word the man seemed to be the speech. I listened to him with much pleasure, and hope again to have such a privilege. May the blessings of heaven continue to come upon these people. May the star of fortune continue to guide them through the world and the star of Bethlehem conduct them across the cold Jordan of death, through the Pearly Gates and into the City above!

Religious Brevities.

The Order of the Sisters of Charity now numbers over 50,000 members throughout the world.

Dr. Rosser, the evangelist, attended the Farmville (Va) District Conference and a revival followed.

The Wesleyan connection in England report an increase during the past year of 11,359 members.

Eleven hundred dollars in scholarship certificates have been surrendered to Randolph Macon College, thus reducing its debt to that extent.

The Baptists of England have raised for all purposes an approximate sum of £700.000 or $3,500,000 of this amount $1.450,000 has been contributed for strictly denominational objects of benevolence.

The New York Herald says that there are several bodies of liberal Baptists in North Carolina. One of them, the General Conference of Original Free Will Baptists, reports 5,400 members. They are discussing the necessity of having a College.

Public services of prayer on preaching are announced for nearly every evening in the various churches at Saratoga Springs. The largest and most imposing church edifice there is the Methodist.

The Rev. William Alvin Bartlett (Congregational) and Bishop Foley (Roman Catholic) recently officiated in harmonious concert at the funeral of a lady who was a member of Mr. Bartlett's church, while her husband was a Catholic.

Since Dr. McCosh became President of Princeton College that institution has received $1,500,000, $300,000 of which, including buildings, &c., were given last year. This is a noble endowment within a few years.

A Roman Catholic priest in Louisiana has been deposed by the authorities of the Church for taking to himself a wife. It is said that his course is defended by over 500 people of his parish, many of whom are leading planters of West Baton Rouge.

The Baptists and Congregationalists of England are engaged in a petty controversy, the pith of which is that the former, being open communionists, admit the validity of all other denominations as churches of Christ, and especially the latter, with whom they exchange. The Congregationalists, therefore, argue that there is no necessity for the existence of the former, and they should consent to be swallowed up.

Three separate missions have been, or are about to be, established in Central Africa. One is by the Free Church of Scotland, and is called the Livingstonia Mission. This is situated on Lake Nyassa. The Church Missionary Society is to occupy a district upon Lake Victoria. The London Missionary Society is invited to take in hand Lake Tanganyika. To commence this mission, R. Arthington, esq., offered $20,000, saying, "It is much in my heart to take with you (the society) a courageous and faithful step in the moral conquest of Africa."

The estimation in which Caldwell, late of the Charlotte Observer, now of the Raleigh News, is held by the people of Charlotte, was shown by a serenade which the brass band tendered him at that place last week.

Col. M. Fain, president of the Marietta, Georgia and North Carolina Railroad, was in Raleigh last week to procure 50 penitentiary convicts for labor on the road. Georgia has 250 convicts at work on the same road.

Mr. W. C. Parish, of Flat River, Orange county, some time ago lost a considerable amount of money and recently made discoveries which led to the arrest of a negro named Sim White as the thief. A part of the money was recovered.

Many persons at Ringwood who contemplated making brandy this Fall are deterred by "high taxes and the trouble," says a correspondent of the Roanoke News. Good for high taxes and trouble!

Raleigh Sentinel: A remarkable snake was killed not long since by Jas. Howell, near Hobgood's mills, Granville county. It was of the moccasin species. It measured twenty seven inches and contained twenty one letters of the alphabet on its back and side.

The Democratic party in North Carolina cannot boast of a better campaign paper than the Statesville Landmark.—Bro. Hussey, the editor, is industrious in selecting the most effective stones for his sling, and lets them fly boldly and fearlessly. Sometimes they hit men of his own party—but he can't help that and doesn't care much. He is a little too independent to work in party harness and run a strictly partisan paper; but what we need everywhere is independent and unshackled speech from men who will denounce meanness and littleness wherever found, in friend or foe.

ASTHMA AND CATARRH.—See Dr. Langell's adv't.

Raleigh Sentinel: Sam'l Stewart, col., a workman engaged in renovating the store of Tom, Harrison & Co., Wilson street, was badly hurt Monday afternoon by the falling of a stone sill of a window.

Dayton ROANOKE VALLEY: Col. Henry D. Coleman, of the Twelfth N. C. (Confederate) regiment, was in town Tuesday, riding the same old bay he rode in the charge at Gettysburg. Both horse and rider were looking well, though either travels as well as he did before the memorable charge.

THE FARMER'S JOURNAL.—We have received the first number of the Farmer's Journal, an agricultural paper just started in Raleigh under the editorial management of Johnstone Jones, Esq. It is a eight-page paper, neatly printed and is filled with interesting news and valuable information to farmers. Mr. Jones is an accomplished writer, and if the agricultural class shall support his enterprise as they ought, he will make a first-class excellent paper. Rev. T. W. Walker is agricultural editor. Address "The Farmer's Journal," Raleigh, N. C., $2 a year in advance.

THE BOYS' COURIER.—We have received the first number of "The Boys' Courier," an amateur paper edited and published at Newbern by Jos. M. Avera, R. A. Richardson and C. R. Foss. Mr. Foss has a neat little paper and credit to the enterprise and taste of the boys who have undertaken the publication. It is published semi-monthly, 50 cents for the first 6 months,—advertising rates will be published when it is fully in the patronage is sufficient to warrant its continuance.—We wish it success. The editors are mistaken in saying that "it is the first paper in an amateur paper in North Carolina." The Torchlight, one of the leading and best edited papers in the State, was at first an amateur paper, started by young W. A. Dukes three years ago. By using the same energy and "posh" that Bro. Dukes used the Newbern boys can perhaps be as successful as he has been.

THE GRADED SCHOOL.—The Graded school, long talked of, has opened in Raleigh with about 250 pupils and a corps of competent teachers, under the supervision of Capt. Dugger, late of Warrenton. It promises to be a success and will be of great benefit to the children of the city. Tuition is free. The school will be supported by private contributions, State aid and good help from the Peabody Fund. The Executive Mansion, at the foot of Fayetteville Street, is said for the purposes of the school, and is an excellent site for the same.

The News says: "the sessions will last six months, and the course of ins ruction will embrace four grades—or schools—Primary, Intermediate, Grammar, and higher branches, consisting in part of algebra, geometry, trigonometry, philosophy, chemistry, physiology, and book keeping, each grade to be subdivided into two or more classes, with a view to placing all pupils of the same intellectual attainments in the same class. Ten years attendance will, as a rule, be required to qualify for college, but the Principal says that at the end of six months in some classes however; and an attendance of six years will be sufficient to fit a pupil for the practical duties of life.

The boys and girls will have separate rooms for study, and will be together only during recitation, and all the little ones, Captain Dugger says, will be allowed a few minutes recreation every hour during study.

Accommodations have been provided for two hundred pupils; if the attendance proves to be larger than is anticipated the facilities will be increased.

A beautiful feature of this school is a system of teaching peculiar to itself, and which is termed "objective teaching," which consists in delineating to the eye on the black-board by the teachers, what the lessons are intended to touch the mind."

JOSEPH P. CALDWELL, ESQ.—The Daily News of this city is, fortunate in having secured the services of Mr Caldwell, late of the Charlotte Observer, as its local editor. We regard Mr. Caldwell as one of the best and most vivacious writers in the State, and to his diligence in hunting news and his facility in reproducing it for the public, the columns of the Charlotte Observer for the past three or four years have borne ample testimony. He is a courteous and pleasant gentleman, of high character and first rate attainments, and is a valuable acquisition to the press in Raleigh. The Charlotte Democrat, Mr. Yates editor, says of him.

"Mr. Joseph P. Caldwell, who has been the able and efficient Local Editor of the Daily Observer for several years past, leaves this week for the purpose of having charge of the local columns of the Raleigh Daily News. In common with the thousands friends of Mr. Caldwell in this city, we regret to lose him from the Press and this community. It is our sincere opinion that he has no superior (if an equal) in the State as a newspaper writer and getter up of news items. Because, we can cordially commend him to the people of Raleigh and the State as a young gentleman of decided, unyielding moral principles where right and wrong is involved. We heard one of the best lawyers in the State remark the other day that Caldwell was a man of much more than average genius—add to that the fact that he is a practical printer, and his friends may well cherish the idea that he is a "rising man" in the State.—In going to Raleigh he will, for some time, labor under the difficulty of being a stranger to men and things about there, but wait till he gets "acclimated" and we are sure no one will have good cause to complain of his management. We consider Mr. Caldwell a decided acquisition to any public journal."

Grant After the Fourth of March.

From the Boston Traveller.

WASHINGTON, July 23—Gen. Stewart L. Woodford was today by the President yesterday informed that he is to be tendered a public testimonial, and intends to go to England as a visit to his daughter Mrs. Sartoris. Mr. Woodford very likely travel in Europe for a year or two and perhaps return home by way of China and California.

Runaway Accidents in Washington City.

Correspondence of the Hartford Times.

WASHINGTON July 28—The records of the Police Court of this District show that U. S. Grant, President of the United States, has been fined four times for fast driving in the streets of this city. In each case he forfeited the collateral that he had deposited as security that he would appear in court—a very usual thing to be done in this section. He has had about twenty-five runaways, and he has collided many times. Some years ago he ran over and crippled a little girl who resided in the northern section of the city. He was drove over a boy in the same section. In both of these cases, as well as in another, he settled the difficulty by paying the doctors' bills and otherwise making everything right.

Gold from the Black Hills Gulches.

From the Nebraska City Press.

Capt. Morrill, of Dixon, who arrived at Bismarck, D. T. July 22, from the Black Hills, says that the Wheeler brothers have taken out $180,000 from their claim in Deadwood Gulch and that their ground would yield for several months yet. Some days ago they scooped up gold by the pound and on one day secured $2,200. In Nigger Gulch four negroes took out $1,700 in one day with a rocker, carrying the dirt several hundred yards from the mountains to water. All claims are paying big money. Miners are making from $3 to $7 per day but the majority are idle and some destitute.—Flour is $9 per hundred. The stage at Cheyenne, July 22, brought in $10,000 in dust from Deadwood.

W. D. McAdoo, proprietor of the McAdoo House in Greensboro', has agreed to pay Dr. Benbow, of the Benbow House, $1500 a year for 5 years in consideration of his quitting the hotel business for that period. Dr. B. is allowed to use the hotel building for any purpose other than for a hotel.

The Opinion of Philosophers.

There is a common philosophy pervading mankind that for each disease there is a specific remedy in the vegetable kingdom, and that it could be discovered humanity would be divested of the scourges that are decimating the race. This received adage finds confirmation to a great extent by the researches of Dr. Tutt among the mountain forests of this and foreign countries. Given complaint is the common bane of our people. From it results Constipation, Colic, Dyspepsia, Piles, Nervousness, Loss of Appetite, what of energy, with low spirits, unsociability and gloomy forebodings, palpitation of the heart, etc. From nature's laboratory Dr. Tutt has extracted a cure for this terrible malady. Ten years of daily application has demonstrated the specific character of his Liver Pills for its cure The testimony of thousands is that somehow they get well after using these Pills. It is really the only agent that will invariably control the congested and deranged liver.

THE BUFFALO

LITHIA WATERS

— IN —

Protracted Intermittent and Remittent Fevers.

—:o:—

Extract from Letter of Dr. O. F. Manson, Professor of General Pathology and Physiology to the Medical College, Richmond, Va., July 6th, 1876.

"Those waters have been found especially curative in cases of chronic intermittent fever, many intractable cases having been thereby restored to perfect health in a brief space of time."

Extract from Pamphlet of Dr. S. Harris on these Waters, published in 1859:

PROPER FOR INTERMITTENT AND REMITTENT FEVERS.

"In the chronic forms of these troublesome endemics, the Buffalo water acts most happily, and, if persevered in, often effects a permanent cure. Those enlargements of the liver and spleen, concomitants of these affections, are simultaneously relieved with the chills and fever."

Case of E. K. Harris, Esq., of the Virginia Bar, now Elector for the State upon the Democratic Presidential ticket:

Extract from Letter, dated Buffalo Springs, August 29th, 1873.

"Some years ago my system was completely worn down and prostrated by a protracted case of chills and fever. After using all the remedies indicated in such cases in vain, I visited the most noted watering places of the mountains of Virginia, without deriving any benefit; almost in despair of obtaining relief from any source, I left the mountains and came to these springs, where, in a few weeks, I was entirely restored to health."

Evidences of the great powers of these Waters in Chronic Intermittent and Remittent Fever might be multiplied almost any extent, both from professional and unprofessional sources.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.

With its two hundred and seventh Annual Session, September 21st, 1876. Rev. W. A. HARRIS, D. D., President, with an able corps of twenty-three Teachers and Officers.

Modern Languages, Ancient and Modern in the College by a European Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among whom are some of the most cultivated teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union. Its unparalleled rapid promotion of the health of pupils from the cities, from the South with feeble constitutions, and climatic diseases, are generally restored.

Buildings elegant—fanned by purest breezes, commanding the most magnificent scenery, and combining such varied attractions as to make it one of the most delightful college homes in the Union.

This School is usually attended by pupils from 25 States to seventeen different States

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A simple uniform is worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practiced to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop D. S. Doggett, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., under the Presidency of Rev. W. A. Harris, is, in my judgment, one of the best institutions, for young ladies, in the South. I have occasion to know and appreciate its value by the advantages enjoyed by one of my daughters there. Its course of study is ample; its Faculty accomplished, and its instruction both solid and elegant. Its personal accommodations are all that can be desired for health and comfort, or taste. No location could be more eligible; no scenery more magnificent; no atmosphere more salubrious. Not the least of its merits, is that sacred regard for religious training, without which no Female College especially, would be a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT.

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Church. Instruction is thorough. In music, advantages are offered of very high order. The most talented Professors are employed, and neither pains nor expenses are spared to make this department excellent.

From Prof F H Smith, M. A., L. L. D., University of Virginia.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys. Having had a daughter under Mr. Harris' care, my observation leads me to believe this school to be one of the best of Female Seminaries which adorn our State. The Halls of the Watching for the Angels.

BY MARY O. BARTLETT.

When Willie was taken ill Ruthie was sent away from home to escape contagion. When she came back again mamma told her that her little brother had gone to a bright, beautiful place, where he never would be sick or tired any more—that the angels had taken him to heaven.

"What do you cry for, mamma?" asked wondering Ruthie. "When will they bring him back?"

Mamma wiped her eyes, and tried to speak cheerfully. "We must try to be good, little daughter, so that we shall be all ready when they come for us."

'If the angels came for you I'd go too,' said Ruthie decisively.

Mamma smiled sadly.

'I would,' repeated Ruthie, with a shake of her golden curls. Then she jumped down from her mother's lap, and ran up stairs to the nursery, but the unwonted stillness of the room oppressed her. 'I didn't want him to be took,' she sobbed. 'I wish they'd bring him back. O, I wish they'd bring him back!'

But the angels didn't bring him back; and when, soon afterward, mamma was taken ill, poor Ruthie wandered listlessly about the house, her little heart heavy with a nameless dread. Papa wanted to send her away again. Poor papa! How sorry he looked. Ruthie loved him very much; she was sure of that; but, as she used sometimes to say to Willie, 'she didn't know him as she did mamma.' So, when he tried to persuade her to go home with kind Aunt Eliza, she said not a word in reply, but ran off to her own little chamber, crying bitterly.

The angels had not brought Willie back. She didn't believe they ever brought anybody back. If they came for mamma, she would go with them. She had resolved upon that.

Every day she went in to see 'dear mamma.' Every day she came out from the chamber of sickness sober, yet content. The angels had not come yet.

One night Ruthie had a strange dream. She dreamed that papa came and took her from her warm bed, and carried her in his arms to mamma's room; that a pair of wistful eyes gazed tenderly into hers; that gentle lips touched her forehead very softly, and that she was held for a moment close, close to a loving heart.

When she awoke the next morning her dream came back to her. She ran softly through the hall, her small bare feet making no noise, and reached the door of the room unseen. She opened it carefully. At first she could see no one, and she shivered, more from a vague, undefined, dread than from the chill morning air which came in through the open window. As she stood trembling, papa entered, and, started with surprise to see her there.

'Where's mamma?' asked a plaintive little voice.

Papa didn't say a word. Very gently he lifted a snowy covering, and Ruthie saw her mother lying white and still—'fast asleep.'

'It's—too—cold—papa,' said she, winking very hard, to keep back the tears.

But papa only sighed; and then, clancing down at the little feet, he bade her go and let Maggie dress her at once.

The next few days seemed to the child strange and unreal, like her dream. Aunt Eliza and Uncle Ben were there, and so many people coming and going all the time. Some of them cried as they looked at dear mamma. Some took Ruthie in their arms and kissed her, calling her 'poor, dear little girl;' then there were others who did not cry, and who took no notice of her. It was very strange.

Aunt Eliza wondered at the mysterious attraction which drew her new niece so many, many times to the chamber of death. Ah! she could not read the thought of that baby heart. She little dreamed for what the child was watching.

"They didn't come yet. The angels didn't come yet.' This was the burden of poor Ruthie's little song, and she hoped on and waited patiently. But there came a day when many people gathered, all at once, in the parlor, in the sitting room, up stairs. Ruthie was very quiet that day—everybody was quiet—mamma quietest of all; she didn't even look at the beautiful flowers which loving hands had placed around her. Ah, the strangeness of it all; but—"the angels didn't come yet.'

After the minister had 'preached' there was a long, long ride, during which papa never spoke; then the setting out at the pretty cemetery. Ruthie knew the place quite well—she had been there so many times. But to see mamma lying there, in that strange-looking box, with the flowers about her; to see the box closed so tightly that the angels couldn't find her when they came; to see it lowered in to the ground, and to hear the earth fall heavily upon it—what did it mean?

Ruthie couldn't speak at first, she was crying so; then she grasped the hand which was nearest her; it happened to be Uncle Ben's. Looking down through his tears he was startled at the expression of the childish face.

'Where are—the—angels?' sobbed Ruthie.

'The what?' he asked astonished.

'The angels. I was going—.'

Uncle Ben took her in his arms and held her there. He wanted to comfort her, but he hardly knew how.

'You cannot understand it, child. It is only with the eye of faith that we can see the angels.'

Ruthie rubbed her poor little swollen eyes. Alas, they were not 'eyes of faith.' They could not see the angels.

When papa came up stairs that evening for his good-night kiss he found his little daughter gazing thoughtfully at mamma's picture, which hung upon the wall near her bedside.

'Aunt 'Liza says she'll go to heaven. How can God find her, papa?'

'He has her now, my darling.'

'Up in heaven?'

'Yes;' and he tried to explain something of the great mystery to his wondering child, who, if she didn't understand, was somehow comforted.

'But, oh, papa,' she cried at length, 'I waited so long. I wanted to go.'

'Waited so long?' Papa was perplexed.

'Yes, for the angels;' and again the salt drops fell like rain from the blue eyes.

Papa's eyes were dim too. He held out his arms, and Ruthie crept into them, laying her tired little head upon his shoulder. For a moment both were silent, when he said softly:

'Would you go and leave me all alone, Ruthie?'

'Would you cry?'

'Of course I should. We must take care of each other now, you and I.'

'Could I take care of you, papa?'

'Why not?'

The faint glimmer of a smile shone through Ruthie's tears. 'I could get your slippers nights,' she said thoughtfully, 'and—once I made some toast.' Long after the good dream-angel had chased away the memory of Ruthie's troubles, papa sat watching his sleeping child.

Poor baby heart, so sorely stricken! Who shall say that children do not feel? Not the sorrowing father, surely, who held her to his heart with a strange, new tenderness, born of their common sorrow. Ah! the angels will be with little Ruthie, though she cannot see them—the blessed angels of love and sweet home sympathy. She will know her papa now.—Congregationalist.

Rural and Domestic.

Uses of Ammonia.

No housekeeper should be without a bottle of spirits of ammonia for besides its medical properties, it is so valuable for household purposes that it is nearly as useful as soap, and as its cheapness brings it in the reach of all. Put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a quart of warm soap suds, dip your cloth in it, and go over your solid paint, and see how rapidly the dirt will disappear; no scrubbing will be necessary. It will cleanse and brighten wonderfully. To a pint of hot suds, add a teaspoonful of the spirits, dip in your forks and spoons, or whatever you have to clean, rub with a soft brush, and then finish with a chamois skin. For washing windows and mirrors, it has no equal. It will remove grease spots from every fabric, without injuring the garment. Put on the ammonia nearly clear; lay blotting paper over, and set a hot iron on it for a moment. Also a few drops in water will cleanse and whiten laces and muslins beautifully. A few drops in a bowl of water, if the skin be oily, will remove all greasiness and disagreeable odors. Added to a foot bath, it entirely absorbs all noxious smells; and nothing is better to remove dandruff from the hair. For cleaning hair and nail brushes, it is equally good. For heart burn and dyspepsia, the aromatic spirits of ammonia is especially prepared: ten drops of which, taken in a wine glass of water, will give relief. For house plants, five or six drops to every pint of water, once a week, will make them flourish. It is also good to cleanse plant jars. So be sure and keep a bottle of it in the house, and have a glass stopper, as it eats away corks.—Selected.

New Mode of Washing.

The ill effects of soda on linen, has given rise to a new method of washing, which has been extensively adopted in Germany, and introduced into Belgium. The operation consists in dissolving two pounds of soap in about three gallons of water as hot as the hand can bear, and adding to this one tablespoonful of turpentine, and three of liquid ammonia; the mixture must then be well stirred, and the linen steeped in it for two or three hours, taking care to cover up the vessel containing them as nearly hermetically as possible. The clothes are afterward washed out and rinsed in the usual way. The soap and water may be reheated and used a second time, but in that case half a teaspoonful of turpentine and a tablespoonful of ammonia must be added. The process is said to cause a great economy of time, labor, and fuel. The linen scarcely suffers at all, and as cleanliness and color are perfect.—The ammonia and turpentine, although their detersive action is great, have no injurious effect on the linen; for while the former evaporates immediately, the smell of the latter is said to disappear entirely during the drying of the clothes.

A Double Danger Averted

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but to swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The serial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the region where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type those originated in the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys home and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the recognized specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in Northwestern North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 900 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in Northwestern N. C., under a high state of cultivation; has bottom lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, is well, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and two circular saw mills.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 450 acres lying on Lovel's Creek, for acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, planing and saw-mills; good residence and one large stock building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 300 acres, lying on Rutledge and Sand Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, a few which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered in a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State.

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Hamburg, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these premises, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri-weekly line of four-horse hacks to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

Poetry.

A LOST HOUR.

[illegible] hour on a summer morn,
[illegible] half the world was still,
[illegible] was fresh in the new mown hay,
[illegible] Bridal veil of the fair young day
[illegible] o'er the purple hill.

[illegible] bells tinkled across the slopes,
[illegible] as an echo chime,
[illegible] flitted athwart the down,
[illegible] went murmuring, busy and brown,
[illegible] fragrant thyme.

[illegible] realm and a dull content,
[illegible] instead of speech;
[illegible] sighed low, and the lark sang high,
[illegible] golden hour of our lives went by,
[illegible] dritted out of reach.

[illegible] went back to an eager life,
[illegible] its pause to lay
[illegible] dream of that golden hour returns,
[illegible] wild spirit frets and yearns
[illegible] one chance swept away.

[illegible] creeps on, and the heart grows tired
[illegible] hopes inhibited,
[illegible] turns away from the world's strong wine
[illegible] red lips, that must ever pine
[illegible] that pure draught we spilled.

[illegible], perchance, when our long day wanes
[illegible] with its joys late born,
[illegible] meet again on the green hillside,
[illegible] in the solemn eventide,
[illegible] we lost at morn.

INTRODUCTION OF METHODISM INTO WILMINGTON

Messrs Editors: For the same reason assigned in my last communication in which, by the way, I noticed some typographical errors, I send for publication more information which I gather from another book (published years ago) in regard to the introduction of Methodism in our city.—Doubtless many of your readers may have already perused the information I have. If so, it will do them no harm to read it again, while at the same time it may prove interesting to those who have never seen or heard of it.

"At what time the first Methodist preacher visited Wilmington, is difficult to ascertain. I see in the old bound minutes, that, in the year 1784, Beverly Allen and James Hinton were appointed to Wilmington—I presume a circuit including Wilmington. In 1785, John Baldwin is appointed to Wilmington circuit. In 1786 there is no mention made of Wilmington in the minutes; but in 1787 Daniel Combs is appointed to Bladen circuit, bordering on Wilmington. It embraced my first circuit, Brunswick, in 1807, as it was that year for the first time separated from Bladen circuit. In 1788 no mention is made of Wilmington, but Thomas Hardy is appointed to Baden. In 1789 no mention is made of either Wilmington or Bladen.

The following appointments to Bladen were made in the years 1790—1796:

1790. Jonathan Bird
1791. John Ahair and William Bellamy.
1792. Joshua Cannon and Samuel Ellney.
1793. Schon Smith and Benjamin Denton.
1794. William Bellamy and Robert Cox.
1795. Rufus Wiley and John Shepherd.
1796. Anthony Sale, without any assistance.
1797. Christopher Mooring and Moses Black.
1798. James Jenkins, M. Wilson, and T. Milligan.
1799. John Simmons and Moses Black.
1800. Nathan Jarrett was appointed to Wilmington. I presume he was the first stationed preacher in the town.

From 1801 to 1810, the following appointments were made to Wilmington:

1801. Bennett Kendrick.
1802. Bennet Kendrick.
1803. Joseph Pinnell and Thomas Jones.
1804. Jeremiah Russell.
1805. Zachariah Maddox.
1806. Bennett Kendrick.
1807. Joshua Wells, from the North.
1808. Samuel Dunwoody.
1809. Richmond Nolley.
1810. James Norton.

1811. 1" (supposed to be Travis) "am in Wilmington, with a strong desire to do all the good I can, and as little harm as possible. The reason why I have introduced the appointments to Bladen is, that it gives a history of the rise of Methodism in the first circuit I rode, and also that it approximated nigher to Wilmington than any other circuit, and hence, in all probability, the Bladen preachers might have frequently visited Wilmington, and have preached in the place.

A vast amount of permanent good was effected in Wilmington, previous to our regular stationed ministry, by a Mr. Meredith, who preached and labored zealously and assiduously in the place. His labors were peculiarly blessed to the colored people. He was much persecuted and threatened with imprisonment, the burning of his church, and I know not what besides. But he remained unshaken and undaunted in his work of mercy and labor of love No doubt many of the sable sons of Africa, from Wilmington will in the day of judgment, "rise up and call him blessed."

He was a good and useful man, and a sincere lover of the Methodist preachers

I soon became more fully acquainted with that good man, the Rev. Jesse Jennett. I had a partial acquaintance with him when I was on Brunswick circuit, in 1807. He was a local preacher of no inferior talents. His urbanity, benevolence, and brotherly kindness soon attached me to him. Methodism is much indebted in Wilmington to the labors and exemplary life of Bro. Jennett. His house was the home of Methodist preachers, he delighted in having them about him and participating at his well-furnished table.

He might truly be styled a pillar of the church in Wilmington. He had more than once been solicited to become the pastor of another church, with the promise of a rich salary; but Bro. Jennett was not to be caught with a silver or a golden bait. He loved Methodism: and in the bosom of the Methodist Church determined to remain, until transplanted to the triumphant church above—which in very [illegible] he did.

Two or three years ago, full of days and well merited honors, and, best of all, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, he was called home But a short time previous to his death, I received a long, well-written, and affectionate letter from him. He was at that time over eighty years of age He stated to me in his letter that he had become too aged and afflicted to preach much, but was employing his time in writing spiritual letters to his friends; thereby trying to do all the good he could with his remaining strength and days. He also gave me quite an interesting and graphic description of the changes effected in Wilmington since I had last seen the place—its great enlargement and its favorable commercial character, as also the blessed growth of Methodism in the place. The change, indeed, exceeded my most sanguine calculation; particularly as respected the increase of Methodists and Methodist Churches. Truly our church has enlarged her borders in Wilmington May she continue to "look forth as the morning fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

I found some gracious colored people belonging to my charge. I must be indulged in naming one or two; for the "righteous should be in everlasting remembrance," let them be white or colored.

William Campbell, an aged pious, and godly man, for many, many long years, led an unblemished and irreproachable life His very looks told out upon him that he was one who feared God and eschewed evil. Roger Hazel was a black man of uncommon mind, and of praying and exhorting talents that would have done credit to many a white man, though a Latin or Greek scholar; yet he was humble, teachable, and every way pleasant and agreeable. I might introduce many, many more, both among the male and female members of the church, but suffice it to say, take them all in all they were the best singers I ever heard, singing generally by note, taught by Roger Hazel, who always acted as my clerk. They were a society of colored people, of as much prudence, discretion, and Bible godliness as you would find in any place whatever. I made it a point to guard them against fanatical expressions, or wild enthusiastic gestures. On one occasion, I took a summary process with a certain black woman, who, in their love feast, with many extravagant gestures, cried out that she was "young King Jesus." I bade her take her seat, and then publicly read her out of membership, stating that we would not have such wild fanatics among us, meantime letting them all know that such expressions were even blasphemous. Poor Aunt Katy felt it deeply, repented, and in a month I took her back again. The effect was beneficial, and she became a rational and consistent member of the church."

Allusion is doubtless made here to St James (Episcopalian) Church whose pulpit was vacant at the time referred to and which was frequently supplied by Father Jennett, who refused all compensation tendered him for his services but who frequently in turning over the leaves of the pulpit bible for his lessons or text, found sums of money placed within its precious leaves that he was compelled to retain because he could not ascertain to whom it should be returned or who placed it there. It is proper to add that in those days Episcopalians did not hesitate in attending Methodist meetings, or in beseeching a throne of grace with them.

Hillsboro District Conference.

Messrs Editors: The Hillsboro District Conference, session of 1876, has just closed its formal review of another year's work, and thanking God, takes fresh courage from that review and presses on. The resting-places in the Christian warfare are few and the moments of repose are brief. A readjusting of the harness, a fresher settling of the hand to the sword-hilt, and the dauntless soldier of the cross is again in the midst of the battle ere his foes have learned his absence. God be thanked for all the self denial, the grand, heroic self consecration to the service of God and man there is in the world!

There is much of interest I might write of this Conference. But life is short; and so ought newspaper articles to be. The Conference requested me to furnish you a copy of the proceedings. But I shall not do you and your readers such an ill turn. I have just finished writing up the journal and it takes twelve pages to hold it all. Let me summarize the matters of chief interest instead of copying the journal.

The Conference opened with a very full attendance Wednesday morning, Aug. 2nd, in the Methodist Church in this place with religious services conducted by Bro. Hendren, the Presiding Elder. The undersigned was elected Secretary and Bro. James Southgate assistant. Every charge was represented and every preacher present but Bro. Jenkins of the Yanceyville circuit, whom the Conference came upon in the midst of a very gracious revival meeting.

The general spiritual condition of the church is reported as good and nearly every charge improving. Congregations on Sunday are large and, in two or three cases, equally so in the week. Sunday schools are reported as large and full of interest in some cases; but the usual report is that there is a sad want of suitable persons to teach and to superintend.—Bro. Renn has awakened interest in the work on his charge by constant talking with his people about it. Bro. Tillett says there is a mistaken idea that a superintendent must of necessity be a talking man. Not so, he says. One of the best he ever had scarcely talked at all.

Prayer meetings are not generally kept up except in the villages. At some country churches they are held after Sunday school. Class meetings are held on only a few of the charges. Bro Jenkins sends word that he believes he can revive them and thinks every preacher ought to direct special efforts to that end. In some places experience meetings have been substituted for class-meetings, with the happiest results.

Bro. Gattis finds that the people still need instruction on the subject of the baptism of children. Bro. Gibbons finds many ignorantly and superstitiously afraid of partaking of the Lord's Supper: is teaching them their duty on that subject and finds some gratifying amendment therein.

But few revivals are reported so far; but a deep religious feeling is very general. The church seems trembling on the point of a great awakening. God grant that the day may hasten!

The great working force of the local ministry is generally reported to be diligent and active in their co-operation with the itinerant ministry, abundant in labors, zealously supplementing the efforts of their pastors.—I grieve to have to say that the laity, the body and substance of the church, do not seem to be marching pari passu with their spiritual guides. Bro. Renn, however, reports that he has many lay-preachers and preaching laymen.

The material interests of the church seem to be making slight but general progress. Some money has been raised and spent in church-repair and in purchase of books. The general proportion of salaries paid up is about one third; though it varies from one sixth to one half.

Very able and interesting addresses were delivered by Revs. L. S. Burkhead, W. H. Moore, A. W. Maugum, S Pool and others. I would like to present them more at length; but my paper is already growing too long.

The Baptist and Presbyterian Churches and a colored church, of what denomination I have forgotten, were tendered to the Conference; as was also the University chapel. The authorities and literary societies of the University also kindly invited the body to visit the grounds, buildings, halls, &c., of that institution.

Resolutions were passed recommending to the Methodist public the Raleigh and Nashville Advocates and other literature of the church; ratifying the action of the Annual Conference in the plan adopted for paying off our college debts, and commending the college agents to the church within the district; asking for the early publication of the proceedings, addresses, &c, in book form, of our great centennial meeting in Raleigh in March last; requesting of Brothers Moore and Burkhead copies of their addresses on Methodism for publication in tract form; adopting the school of Bro. A. D. Brooks of Company Shops as the District school and recommending it to the patronage of the District, and appointing a committee of three ministers and two laymen to prepare a circular letter for distribution in tract form among the membership of the District on infant baptism.

The usual resolutions of thanks were passed for courtesies and hospitalities by the citizens of the village, the churches and the University.—Durham was selected as the place for the next Conference. Brethren T. N. Jordan, A Walker, I. N. Mann and A G. Headen were elected delegates to the next Annual Conference, and brethren Solomon Pool and James Southgate alternates.

The following resolution doubtless would have passed unanimously had anybody offered it and nobody voted against, to wit:

Resolved, That the officers of this Conference having faithfully and the best way they knew how devoted their time, labor and convenience to the service of the Conference for four days consecutively, are entitled to some recognition of the fact.

Messrs Editors, our work here is done. Every one ought to be willing to bear his share of the burden. But your correspondent having put his shoulder to the collar once and pulled patiently while the load was to be drawn, is of the opinion that he has enough of it. You don't catch him being Secretary any more till it is his "day-in-course."

Faithfully yours,
HENRY T. JORDAN,
Secretary.

Chapel Hill, Aug. 5th, 1876.

There are some worthy Christians who seem to consider themselves the Lord's police-officers. In our courts of law we notice certain serious looking bailiffs who work at keeping other people still, and whose official sense of decorum instigates them to cry angrily for "Order" whenever business seems to be getting earnest. What these functionaries are to the courts, some people affect to be to the Church. They do nothing but cry 'Order' to those who are busy; and as, like all volunteer constabulary, they are apt to be more pragmatical than prudent, it is not strange that their interference more commonly excites indignation than imposes obedience, and that in their zeal for decorum they are practically little better than disturbers of the peace.

The Methodists, and other earnest Christians who have never learned to walk a stately minuet to heaven, are continually annoyed by this self-appointed ecclesiastical police. If a preacher in the fervor of zeal forgets that he is a clergyman, and only remembers that he is a man; if he forgets that he is addressing a congregation, and only remembers that he is talking to dying people about their highest and most immediate interests; he breaks through miserable pulpit conventionalities, strips the starch bandages from his limbs, opens his mouth wide as men do when the heart speaketh, and lets his words come out freely and naturally instead of moving them out on rolling R's, immediately the policeman begins to cry out 'Order.' If a Christian, sitting in the house of his God, feels his heart full of grateful love and his mind elated with joyful hope, and gives audible expression to his feelings, however appropriate and modest the expression may be, immediately the policeman cries out 'Order,' as fiercely as if he feared that an ejaculation of thanksgiving might disturb the serenity of heaven. If a sinner, overwhelmed with a sense of his sin and danger, bows down before God in the great congregation, and with cries and tears confesses his transgressions and implores mercy, the inevitable policeman again bawls 'Order,' as though angels in heaven and saints on earth must feel infinite disgust at the manifestation of repentance If a penitent, mourning at the foot of the Cross, is enabled to trust in Jesus, and if in the first gush of delightful feeling in his emancipated and renewed soul he shouts for joy, again the policeman screams for 'Order' more angrily than before, as if the event which begets joy in heaven must be taken coolly on earth, and the redeemed man denied a participation in the rejoicing occasioned by his own salvation To all reasoning upon this subject the answer is uniform, God is a God of order; but the meaning of the answer seems to be very different from what the words properly imply. God is a God of order because order is the way of God. Whatever he does is order, whether he accomplishes it by processes more or less direct. Order is not uniformity; uniformity may be exceedingly out of order. Neither is 'order,' quiescence, stillness, conventional deportment. Whether these are orderly or not must depend upon circumstances. Order reigns in the planetary universe, yet the planets are ever subject to disturbance and oscillation. Order pervades the earth, yet it is broken into mountains and valleys, diversified with deserts of sand and deserts of snow, with forests and savannahs, with rivers and sea, shaken by earthquakes, scarred with volcanoes. The ocean is orderly, but it is never still; wild winds sweep over it, and its waves are thrown into monstrous forms, and dashed in foaming masses on the shore. Yet in all this God is a God of order. He has a method in it. Doubtless our inevitable policeman would alter all this if he could. 'The floods' should never 'clap their hands' to God if he could help it. If he had the ruling of the waves, like the 'sea sick writing-master,' he would rule them straighter.' The very air and sea would rot before he would endure the agitation necessary to their purification.

Now God, who has made agitation the expression of order in the natural world, has made it also the law of conscious life. We are animal, intellectual, and moral beings, and emotion is the very essence of our whole existence. Activity, restless, inappeasable activity, is our characteristic; feeling, deep, powerful feeling, is perhaps the most important element of our life. The Stoics attempted to subdue the emotional nature of man to the imperial intellect; but they could not, because God had established a contrary. Expression of feeling may be restrained, but feeling itself there will be as long as man is human; and the question how far man are to restrain the expressions of religious emotion is one not to be determined by the order of God, but by the capabilities and the reason of men themselves, who are at perfect liberty to judge with regard to it, as they are with regard to the expressions of emotions not religious.

As civilization progresses society becomes more selfish and exacting, and individuals less free. Where civilization has been carried to excess, as in the court circles of Europe, no manifestation of emotion is permitted at all. A man must neither laugh nor cry, nor exhibit any disturbance of inward calm. Good breeding requires that grief shall never exceed the limits of decent gravity, or joy manifest its self by more than a pleasant smile. Anything beyond this is vulgar. Of all things society abhors 'a scene,' and anything that savors of it is reprehensible. Men and women are taught from their childhood to stifle feeling, and the consequence most probably is that when they come to maturity they have little feeling to stifle.

Now all this refinement, as it is called, is nothing more nor less than the tyranny of social selfishness over the individual heart, exercising itself through the regency of pride People living for pleasure cannot bear to be disturbed by sympathy with others They require, therefore, that every body shall keep his emotions to himself, and that the intercourse of society shall all be carried on in the calm latitudes that lie beyond the visible phenomena of emotional life.

This is a state of things by no means 'orderly.' It is not according to the will of God that men should live so far from one another. On the contrary, he has designed us for brotherhood and warmest sympathy, and he has commanded us to love one another: 'rejoicing with those that rejoice; weeping with those that weep;' precepts hardly honored by a call after a wedding or a card after a funeral. Any civilization or refinement that works to the contrary of God's order is unnatural, disorderly, and cruel to humanity. So far from showing 'good breeding,' it gives clear evidence of a paternity and education the reverse of good.

This sort of refinement has got into the Church of Christ. People have come to think that all religious emotion savors of bad manners. Amens are only genteel when uttered according to form; and hallelujahs are absolutely indecent except when sung by a choir Decent, imperturbable gravity is considered the proper aspect of a congregation, whatever be the nature of the sermon or the manner of its delivery. The preacher looks from the pulpit upon a sea of dry, still cold faces, all turned upon him with impassable fixedness of attention. If he discourse of death and judgment, they look no graver: if he talk of redemption and heaven, they look no more joyous. They hear of Jesus respectfully, and so they do of Judas Whatever they may think or feel, a 'well behaved' congregation of the present day will carefully guard against betraying it. For to do otherwise would be vulgar. It is curious to observe how very differently these same people comport themselves when not under the chilling restraint of conventional order. Let them go to hear a popular lecture or a political speech, and their countenances respond as naturally to their feelings as the face of a child to the tickling of its ribs. They can cry and laugh and exhibit all kinds of emotion, and by exhibiting communicate and deepen it, until the power of the orator is multiplied a hundredfold by their sympathy. This is not vulgar.

Now we protest against the application of these absurd notions of refinement to the worship of God and the conduct of religion We will not agree that Michael shall control David. Order we would have everywhere; and more than anywhere we would have order in the house of God. But it should be order founded upon a deep sense of the truth of worship; order that displays a realization of the presence and power of God, order worthy of man and of the Being he adores. Such order as this will differ from the etiquette of formal life. It will suffer us to be something more than polite to our Maker.

None can reprobate more than we extravagance, confusion, or any other kind of indecency in religious meetings. Such conduct is not only offensive to all right minded people, it is exceedingly injurious to the Church and to the cause. We have no more patience with the mechanical and indecent shouting of certain Shaker-like performers than Mr. Wesley had; and that was little enough. But we would have the Church regulated by the Spirit, and not by the flesh. We do not wish to be taught decorum by gentlemen reeling from the waltz, nor becoming postures by ladies warm from the polka. Baltimore Christian Advocate.

Emory College Commencement.

The commencement, July 16-17, was a success. This is the general verdict. The boys did themselves and their teachers honor. They made their friends happy. But I will not fill your precious columns with detailed accounts of these fine young men and their performances.

Nearly all of the graduating class are truly religious. Most of them were converted after coming to college. And yet there are some professed Christians who pretend to think that the church has no educational function. How narrow, how blind!

Bishop Pierce preached the commencement sermon. Text: Psalm, lviii 1 8 verses. The theme suited the man and the hour. The good bishop laid out his whole strength in setting forth the relations of education and religion. Those of us who are used to him never heard him speak with more power of thought and expression. His plea for sanctified learning was grand; his denunciation of that purely secular theory of education which banishes the Bible and the name of Jesus, prayers and holy songs from the school room was fearful. And nearly all the people said "Amen!" The question so ably argued by Bishop Pierce on this occasion cannot be much longer adjourned. It is a question of exigent and vital importance. Let the church take position—by and upon "the Word of the Lord which endureth forever."

The dear "Old Doctor"—as we call him, the bishop's venerable father—preached a searching sermon at 4 p m. on "Holiness." He had a fine audience, and preached with marked effect about one hour and ten minutes. In spite of commencement state and finery, there was weeping and shouting when the saintly old man sat down. What a rebuke he is to able-bodied but slow-hearted preachers who dodge when they can the sacred duties of their vocation!

Sunday night, Dr. Alpheus W. Wilson, of the Baltimore Conference, and pastor of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church, South, Washington City, D C, preached on St Paul's thorn in the flesh and the all-sufficient grace. It was a most stimulating and invigorating sermon. It did us good by making us wiser and better.

The Rev. John W. Hiedt, A. M., delivered the Alumni address Tuesday, 4 p. m. It was really admirable for its sense and spirit, strength and beauty.

The annual literary address before the two societies by Dr. Wilson was a most masterly presentation of the truth of reason and of God against the modern materialists. His refutation of Tyndalism, which is Atheism, was absolutely crushing. His grand argument had learning, logic, wit, pathos, power. It had also what Arnold calls "sweetness and light." It is hoped that it will be published.—You will rarely hear a man of better training, finer expression, or nobler spirit. Our people, young and old, fell in love with the Doctor, his preaching, his speaking: above all, the admirable man and gentleman.

The college is moving forward; the outlook is very bright. Emory has had God's blessing upon her in the past: we expect it for the future.—Many contributions she has made to the church and the state. Our richer people should endow Emory. Some day they will, if the poor do not do it first. And, Mr. Editor, the poor have far greater interest in our colleges than many suppose. In the present graduating class only a few—three or four—are rich men's sons. Several of them are poor boys. They have fought their way through. Toil and self denial was the price they paid for their education. But they have made a great bargain. Nothing is so cheap as education, except religion.

Our young men in the South, for the most part, have brains and poverty. Have they also virtue and courage? Then they will win. They can do wonders if they will. But Mr. Wilkins Micawber is not the man to imitate. "Waiting for something to turn up" is not the method that wins. Let young men turn something up. Let them go to work and do their best. They know not how much they can do till they try. Many of the noblest voyagers of history have worked their way across stormy seas. So can our boys; so must they if they succeed.

But what is to be done for those who with a little help could go through college? It is very sad when the gifted poor come knocking at our college doors to turn them away.—Emory has not done this: the last college year she gave tuition to thirty young men. But if Georgia and Florida Methodists would do their duty and endow the college as they might, tenfold more could be done. In a college like Emory tuition should be free to all who need help.

The degree of D. D. was conferred on the following ministers.

Rev. C W Miller, Kentucky Conference; Rev J B Bobbitt, North Carolina Conference, and editor of the Christian Advocate, published at Raleigh, N C.

The Board of Trustees made arrangements for thorough instruction in Hebrew and vocal music. To the chair of vocal music, Prof. R. M. McIntosh, well known as author and teacher in this department, was elected.

This new departure gives great satisfaction to the students and the patrons.

THE GOSPEL.

The gospel gloomy! It is an anthem from the harps of heaven, the music of the river of life washing its shore on high and pouring in cascades upon the earth. Not so cheerful was the song of the morning stars, nor the shouts of the sons of God so joyful. Gushing from the fountains of eternal harmony, it was first heard on earth, in a low tone of solemn gladness uttered in Eden by the Lord God himself This gave the keynote of the gospel song. Patriarchs caught it up and taught it to the generations following. It breathed from the heart of the psalmist, and rang like a clarion from tower to mountain top as prophets proclaimed the year of jubilee. Fresh notes from heaven have enriched the harmony, as the Lord of hosts and His angels have revealed promises, and called on the suffering children of Zion to be joyful in their King. From bondage and exile, from dens and caves, from bloody fields and fiery stakes and peaceful death-beds have they answered, in voices which cheered the disconsolate and made oppressors shake upon their thrones, while sun and moon, and all the stars of light, stormy wind fulfilling His word, the roaring sea and the fulness thereof, mountains and hills, fruitful fields and all the trees of the wood have rejoiced before the Lord, and the coming of His anointed, for the redemption of His people and the glory of His holy name.—Dr. Hodge.

Running in Debt.

I dwell on this point, for I would deter others from entering that place of torment. Half the young men in this country, with many old enough to know better, would go into business—that is in debt—to-morrow if they could. Most poor men are so ignorant as to envy the merchant of manufacturer, whose life is an incessant struggle with pecuniary difficulties, who is driven to constant "[illegible]," and who, from month to month, barely evades the insolvency which sooner or later overtakes most men in business; so that it has been computed that but one in twenty of them achieves a pecuniary success. For my own part I would rather be a convict in the State prison, a slave in a rice swamp, than to pass through life under the harrow of debt. Let no man misjudge himself unfortunate, or truly poor, so long as he has the full use of his limbs and faculties, and is substantially free from debt. Hunger, cold, rags, hard work, contempt, suspicion, unjust reproach, are disagreeable, but debt is infinitely worse than them all. And if it had pleased God to spare either or all my sons to be the support of my declining years, the lesson which I should most earnestly seek to impress upon them is, "Never run in debt." Avoid pecuniary obligations as you would pestilence or famine. If you have but fifty cents, and can get no more for a week, buy a peck of corn, parch it, and live on it, rather than owe a dollar! Of course, I know that some men must do business that involves a risk and must give notes or other obligations: and I do not consider him in debt who can lay his hands directly on the means of paying, at some little sacrifice, all he owes I speak of real debt—that which involves risk or sacrifice on one side, obligation and dependence on the other—and I say, from all such, let every youth humbly pray God to preserve him evermore.—Horace Greely.

Pray Without Ceasing.

To present a petition is one thing; to prosecute a suit is another. Most prayers answer to the former. But successful prayer corresponds to the latter. God's people frequently lodge their petition in the court of heaven, and there they let it lie. They do not press their suit. They do not employ other means of furthering it beyond the presenting of it. The whole of prayer does not consist in taking hold of God. The main matter is holding on. How many are induced by the slightest appearance of repulse to let go, as Jacob did not! I have often been struck with the matter in which the petitions to the Legislature are usually concluded—'And your petitioners will ever pray.' So men ought always to pray to God and never faint. Payson says, "The promise of God is not to the act, but the habit of prayer."—Nevins.

SCIENCE.

Another small planet (No. 164) was discovered by M Paul Henry at the Paris Observatory on the night of July 12th.

Herr F. Siemens, the Dresden glass manufacturer, has drawn attention to a process of hardening and tempering glass by pressure in moulds. It is said that this process produces glass which is quite as unbreakable as that obtained by M. Royer de la Bastie's process, and free from some of the objections which appear to attach to the process of tempering in oil.

A new grape fungus, which first appears on the leaves of the grape-vine in the form of a minute yellow spot, was described by Dr. Engelmann at a recent meeting of the St. Louis Academy of Science. It makes its appearance just before and during the flowering period, as far as known attacking only the leaves, or rarely the petioles and peduncles. It kills the leaves and thus cripples the plant, and attacks all varieties indiscriminately.

The French Society for the Encouragement of National Industry had to bestow this year, the great Prony prize for the most useful invention in mechanics discovered during a certain number of years. The award was made to M. Henry Giffard, the Paris aeronaut, for the invention of his injector for locomotives. The invention is fifteen years old, and the patentee has acquired by it a fortune falling very little short of $2,500,000.

The Challenger Expedition returned to England May 23d, after an absence of three years and five months. During that time the vessel sailed 61,840 miles. The number of soundings made was 370, of dredgings, 360.—Some hundreds of specimens were sent home during the voyage. The mortality was not above the mean, and when it is remembered that the average time at sea was 220 days per year, it is surprising that the health of those on board (259 in number) was as good as it was.

The Moniteur Industriel Belge states that a locomotive without furnace, has commenced running in Paris on one of the railways. It has a reservoir of super-heated water which furnishes a constant supply of steam for moving the vehicle. On another line of railways an ordinary steam locomotive is at work. It is like a small omnibus in shape and size, containing a boiler. The furnace is out of sight, and fed with coke and charcoal. The draught of the furnace is kept up by a supply of compressed air.

The Scientific American gives the relative strength of woodand metals as follows: A rod one fourth inch in diameter, of the best steel, will sustain, before breaking, 9000 lbs; soft steel, 7,000 lbs.; iron wire, 6,000 lbs.; good iron, 4,000 lbs.; inferior, bar iron, 2,000 lbs.; cast iron, 1,000 to 2,000 lbs. copper wire, 3,000 lbs.; silver, 2,000 lbs.; gold, 2,500 lbs.; tin, 300 lbs.; cast zinc, 160 lbs.; cast lead, 50 lbs.; milled lead, 200 lbs.; box or locust wood, 1,200 lbs.; toughest ash, 1,000 lbs.; elm, 800 lbs., beech, cedar, white oak, pitch pine, 600 lbs.; chestnut and maple, 650 lbs., poplar, 400 lbs.

Charlotte District Conference.

We lay before our readers on our first page an interesting account of the Hillsboro District Conference, furnished by the very efficient Secretary, H. T. Jordan, Esq. Thus far we have no tidings from the Charlotte and Fayetteville District Conferences.—It was our privilege to be present Friday of the Charlotte Conference, and it was really a pleasure to meet with the brethren of the "future London" District, as it is sometimes called, and to participate in the exercises of the occasion. We heard an able centennial address from Rev. P. J. Carraway and an admirable sermon from Rev. W. D. Lee. Also an eloquent discourse from Rev. Dr. Pharr, who recently came to us from the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Craven was just ahead of us with his address, and Bro. Yates was to repeat his centennial Sunday-school address on Saturday. Of these we shall doubtless hear through the most excellent Secretary, C. G. Montgomery, Esq. The Presiding Elder, Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, was at home in presiding over the Conference. He is a capital presiding officer. No interest of the church is permitted by him to pass unnoticed. The reports from the various charges on the District were, in the main, good. They indicated life in the church—spiritual and financial life. The citizens of Concord entertained the Conference most elegantly, and our brief stay was rendered very pleasant, indeed, by Maj. Blair and his excellent lady, of the American Hotel. We felt at home with them. We learned to esteem them highly during their connection with the Yarboro House of this city. They deserve success—they ought to be patronized.

Bro. Sharpe, the indefatigable worker and college agent, was on hand adding interest to the Conference, as he always does. Bro. Robey, the popular president of Davenport Female College, was also in attendance. The future with him is bright. He is expecting a full school next session. The addition to the faculty of an accomplished professor of music, is attracting much attention. He will add greatly to the success of the institution. We simply had time to shake hands with Bro. Hudson and then bid him adieu. He came on the train which brought us away. So much did we wish to hear his address on Methodism—but we were denied this pleasure. We found the Conference fully alive to the interests of the Advocate. The Secretary will furnish us a full account of the Conference and it doings in time for our next issue.

A H. Winston.—The death of Mr A H. Winston, which occurred last week, cast a gloom upon the community. Few young men give such promise of usefulness to the business and social interests of a place as Mr. Winston showed forth in his life. He was an energetic, industrious and upright man in business, had been very successful for one of his years, and was on the high road to fortune. He was generous and charitable in his feelings and conduct, affable in business relations and a pious and God-fearing christian. He was a member of the Baptist Church and had been recently elected Superintendent of one of the Sunday schools of the city. He left behind him a wife, and an infant born but a few days before his death.

Bro Black writes from Morganton where his family are at present. He is watching by the bedside of his child which is dangerously ill. We trust that the precious one may be spared to the anxious and devoted parents. He speaks kindly of the affection and kind attentions which the Morganton people show towards him and his family, and will ever hold them in grateful remembrance.

Rev. V A Sharpe has accepted the general agency in this Conference for Dr. Haygood's new Book, "Our Children." Every preacher and every family should secure a copy. Send your orders in future to Bro. Sharpe at Thomasville, instead of to this office. We don't know, but suppose Brother Sharpe will and think he ought to have on sale Bishop Marvin's new book of Sermons.

Rev. Dr. Burkhead, of Edenton Street Church, preached two excellent sermons last Sabbath. Great seriousness prevailed throughout the entire congregation, and at the close of the evening service penitents were invited, and one person presented himself at the altar for prayer.

The War in the East.

We are much interested in the final issue of the war now in progress between Turkey and some of her European provinces. The sultan has absolute power, unshackled by constitutions and laws, and makes despotic use of his supreme authority. In Herzegovinia and Roumania there have been insurrections which had not been entirely quelled when last month Servia, a province of considerable strength, also rebelled and fired her first gun against the cruel Turk. Montenegro, whose people are brave and warlike and hate the Turks with implacable and undying hatred, is also engaged with Servia in her struggle for the independence which she partly achieved by an insurrection in 1815. The dispatches from the East have been conflicting as to the issue of various battles that have been fought. In a majority of the contests, however, the Turks, by reason of their superior numbers and organization, have been victorious, and have used their victories in a shamefully cruel manner, torturing the wounded, mutilating the bodies of the slain, and wreaking their fiendish instincts in slaying innocent women and children.

While civil freedom is one object of the struggle on the part of the insurgent provinces, their desire for religious independence forms no small part of their motives. The provinces are nominally Christian, while the Turks are of the Mohamedan faith and have persistently persecuted the christians until the latter have suffered beyond the point of endurance. Sympathizing, therefore, with their desire for religious and civil freedom, we regard the struggle with no little anxiety for their final success. Russia sympathizes with the insurgents, has protested against the inhuman warfare of the Turks and may intervene in behalf of the provinces. In that case Austria will probably take part, and then Prussia, France and England may possibly follow ranging themselves on whatever side may insure most to their interests. The "balance of power" in Europe lies in the East and time will only determine whether it will be disturbed or remain adjusted. If, by its present control, civil and religious liberty are destined to remain in jeopardy, the world would prefer that the balance should be upset.

Prof. Midyette, writing on business adds a few words about his recent trip North. He is now at Buffalo Lithia Springs in Virginia. After some kind expressions to the Senior Editor of the Advocate, he says 'Mrs M., and myself have been visiting Philadelphia, New York, Long Branch, Ocean Grove, Sea Girt, etc. I will not trouble you with an account of what I saw at the Exposition. I will only say that it fully met my expectation.

The exposition must be seen, to be appreciated. I only met two familiar faces, that of the Raleigh Advocate, and of George Aller, Esq, of Newberne. New York is a bustling, noisy place. Long Branch is a beautiful place, but is said to be mortgaged to the Prince of Darkness. Parties declared to me that in their opinion Sodom was never half so wicked.

Ocean Grove is a charming place under the control of the Methodists. No liquor, tobacco or snuff can be sold within the corporation. In the center is a large pavilion which is used daily for preaching or lecturing.

We are here for a few days, and drink as much water in one day as we would in ten at home. I find the water beneficial.

About one hundred guests present. The most of them claim to be in bad health, but they do not make that impression at the table."

Important to Medical Students.

We understand that in accordance with a privilege conferred by the State of Kentucky and duly incorporated in the charter granted to the Louisville Medical College, the Trustees and Faculty of that Institution have created a number of Beneficiary Scholarships in behalf of those young men who, seeking to obtain a medical education, are pecuniarily unable to pay the fees usually necessary for this purpose. Any young man can obtain the facts, however, by addressing a letter to the Louisville Medical College, Louisville, Ky.

The Southern Christian Advocate of August 8th, reports the death of Rev. C. C. Andrews, which sad event occurred suddenly in Belton, Ga.—Bro. Andrews was a graduate of Trinity College, and was well and favorably known in North Carolina. We sympathize with his bereaved family, and pray that a kind and gracious Heavenly Father may enable them to bear their great loss with christian resignation. We have received an obituary notice which will be printed next week.

The fall session of our institutions of learning will soon begin. Times are hard, it is true, but it will be much harder for our children to grow up in ignorance. We should educate if we can do nothing more for them.

Bro. Norman, in charge of Person Street Station, received seven members into his church, by certificate, last Sabbath.

We hear of many interesting revivals in various portions of the Conference.

Sermons by Bishop Marvin.

We have received from the Publishing House at Nashville a lately published volume of sermons by that godly man, our beloved Bishop Marvin. It contains eighteen sermons, all of which, except four, were preached substantially as they appear in the volume, and the matter of those four was also preached though not in the form in which it now appears.

It is needless to commend the sermons further than to say that they came from the heart and mind of Bishop Marvin. His visit to North Carolina and the effect produced by his sermons are too fresh in the recollection of our people, to make it necessary to the rapid sale of the book that we should speak in its praise.

In the preface the Bishop says: "When I say that they have been delivered from the pulpit, I do not mean that they were delivered verbatim as they are given here; for they were properly extemporaneous, only the analysis having been made beforehand, and that without the use of the pen; for I have never made even the briefest notes for twenty five years past, except in a very few instances, when accuracy of reference and quotation was necessary."

The far reaching thought, the deep reasoning, close analysis, expressive language, short but pregnant sentences which distinguish the Bishop are all here; but there is a great deal in Bishop Marvin's preaching that the types can't catch or the pen describe. His look and manner, his voice and gesture, all full of magnetic power, can be seen and felt but cannot be put on paper. Notwithstanding that is absent from the book, the volume shall occupy the highest place "among our books."

The dedication of the volume is a model of beauty, and is thoroughly characteristic of the Bishop. Here it is:

"TO MY WIFE
MRS. HARRIET BROTHERTON MARVIN.

To whose cheerful self denial and devotion to my work; to whose rigid economy in administering domestic expenditures; to whose ready adjustment of her wants to the exigences of a meager support, in our earlier life; to whose careful and godly training of our children in my protracted absences from home; and to the example of whose faith and piety of heart I am more deeply indebted, as a Methodist preacher, than any one except our Maker can know—this volume is affectionately inscribed."

The Fish That Swallowed Jonah.

"Now the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights." Jonah i. 17

Upon the question as to what was the fish that swallowed Jonah, Dr. Raleigh remarks: "The Bible does not say that a whale was the prophet's jailor. The infidel has said that, and then has enjoyed the easy triumph of proving the natural impossibility of it. Jonah says 'a great fish swallowed him. Our Lord uses a phrase exactly similar. He uses a generic term, which includes the whale, but is never applied to the whale particularly. The dolphin, the seal, the whale, the shark, are all included in the term that is used; and there is strong probability, in the supposition that the white shark is the creature designated as the 'great fish.' Sharks abounded in the Mediterranean at that time. They have been found there ever since, and are found there still. In length some of them have attained to thirty feet and upwards, of capacity in other ways sufficient to incarcerate Samson of Zorah, or Goliath of Gath, as well as the probably attenuated prophet of Gathhepher. It is related that a horse was found in the stomach of a shark, and there are many instances of men being swallowed alive—not fabulous and doubtful stories, but instances thoroughly well authenticated. One, of a soldier, in full armor. One, of a sailor who fell overboard, and was swallowed in the very sight of his comrades. The captain seized a gun, shot the fish in a sensitive part, which then cast out the sailor into the sea, who was taken up, amazed and terrified, but little hurt. Every one knows that the shark is a most voracious creature. Its teeth are only incisive. It has no power of holding. It can snap and sever limbs, or trunk, or head, sheer and certainly as though its jaws were a guillotine. But in that case it secures only what is within the jaws. The rest is apt to be lost. Its habit, therefore, is to swallow the prey alive, that it may lose nothing. Thus God made the voracity of the fish the means of protection and safety to His servant."

Wit From the Pulpit.

It is related of a certain New England divine, who flourished not many years ago, and whose matrimonial relations are supposed not to have been of the most agreeable kind, that one Sabbath morning, while reading to his congregation the parable of the supper, in which occurs the passage: "And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them; I pray thee have me excused. And another said: I have married a wife, and therefore cannot come,"—he suddenly paused at the end of this verse, drew off his spectacles, and looking around on his hearers, said, with emphasis: "The fact is, my brethren, one woman can draw a man farther away from the kingdom of heaven than five yoke of oxen."

"Revivals."

Messrs Editors: In a recent number of the Advocate, appeared an article with the above caption. The writer desired to learn from the expegodly man, our beloved Bishop Marrience of his brethren the best way of securing revivals. The subject is of vital importance, and with your permission I will endeavor to present a few thoughts which added to what others will probably give, may be of benefit, not only to the inquiring brother alone, but to others.

Every true revival has in it two elements, the divine and the human. I suppose the inquirer had special reference to the latter. But I cannot proceed to consider that without pausing to emphasize the necessity of the former,—the divine element. In many revivals, or attempted revivals, there seems to be an idea that the work is all of man and everything depends on him. But let it never be forgotten that man is the agent, (frequently styled, though less properly the instrument) yet the power is entirely of God. Secure the presence and operation of the Holy Spirit, and work together with him, and there will infallibly be a revival. I believe our labors oftener fail here than anywhere else. All our thoughts and efforts are directed to the human element, while the divine, if not ignored, is at least made quite secondary.—God will not yield his glory to another, and where we attempt to take it to ourselves, or give it to any other agency, he leaves us to fail. If therefore I were to state in brief where the secret of success in revivals lies, I would say, first, last, and all the time, in laying the work upon him that is "mighty to save." Let any church do this earnestly, openly, persistently, and they cannot fail.

But I have said that God works through human agency; and though the Holy Spirit, as above indicated, can, and often does work through very feeble and imperfect agents, provided they fully depend on him, yet the more perfect the work of these, the more sweeping will be the results. I will therefore add a few hints, drawn from my own observation and experience—both in failures and successes.

The first condition is that minister and members make the meeting a subject of earnest, believing prayer.—'According to your faith be it unto you, was not only the measure of Christ's work upon the blind men, but it is the measure of God's working upon and through his church. "The effectual, fervent prayer (better translated simply the fervent, or the inwrought prayer) of the righteous availeth much. How much it avails in any particular case we can never know till we have tried it; but we may be assured that it will work wonders beyond imagination.

Again, let special prayer be persistently offered for particular persons. Don't stop to inquire how bad they are, or what are the probabilities of their rejecting. The converting them is God's work; your business is to pray and believe and use the appointed means. A preacher once told me that when a celebrated revivalist came to labor with him, he inquired and wrote down the names of the twelve hardest men in the place. They too, and perhaps others, made these men the subjects of daily prayer. Before the revival closed, eleven were converted and the twelfth had been at the altar for prayer. The work of the Holy Spirit is determined largely by the prayers of faith that are offered.

I would suggest that the sermon at revival meetings be short, and that at its close the preacher himself, or more rarely, some brother who is especially gifted in brief exhortation, immediately invite sinners to the altar for prayer. The christians will then be fresh for work, and there will be abundance of time. It is well, I think, to have the members of the church frequently invited around the altar, bringing their unconverted friends with them. It does them good to get into the hottest of the fire, and it encourages the unconverted.

Let the prayers at the altar be short and to the point, for the deeper conviction, and enlightenment and conversion of the penitents. If the prayers are not too long, two or three or more can be offered before rising from the knees.

Point the penitents to Jesus alone, and encourage them to believe in a present and ready Savior, whose only condition is "believe in the merits of my blood and be saved."

I might present other suggestions; but I deem it unnecessary. If the ministers and church come together in the name of the Lord, not to have a pleasant social time, but to secure a fresh baptism for themselves, and to save souls from eternal death, the Spirit will guide them in their labors, and will give to them the fulfillment of the blessed promise that "he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

NOTICE.

The Wilmington District Conference will be held at Bethany Church, Cokesbury circuit, commencing on Wednesday, the 20th September, at 10 o'clock, A M., and will embrace the 4th Sabbath. Rev J B Bailey will preach the opening sermon.

W. S. Black, P. E.

Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce preached a grand sermon, July 16th, at the Commencement of Emory College.

From Mt. Airy.

Editors of Raleigh Christian Advocate—Dear Brethren: The Lord has been pleased to visit us in the power of his Spirit at New Hope, on the Surry circuit. The meeting was commenced on Saturday July 22nd, and continued eleven days. Our Sunday school at that place which is a very large one for the country, (about 130 scholars,) had a very interesting celebration on the first day of the meeting. Bro. James Willson, of Mt. Airy Station, gave us a very interesting and instructive address on that occasion. There were twenty two precious souls converted during the meeting and of those twenty two, there were but two or three who were not Sunday school scholars, a very encouraging fact for Sunday school workers. Let us pay sufficient attention to our Sunday schools and revivals are certain to follow.

Twenty two were added to the church and others will join us soon. The membership was abundantly revived and built up. We had a glorious Love Feast on Sunday morning last, many soldiers of the Cross testified their love for the Master, old and young, while tears stole down every face, until this changed into the loud shout of glory throughout the house. The feeling was so powerful that it could not be kept within the house, but some of the sisters caught the Spirit through the window, and shouted the praises of the Most High. After the morning service the Holy Sacrament was administered to a large number, and we were delighted to see the young converts for the first time making this public acknowledgment of their Divine Master. This meeting will be long remembered by the church of New Hope. The brethren at this place have greatly improved their house of worship by enlarging, making comfortable seats etc., and God is blessing them for it. May He continue so to do. Bro Willson preached for us three times with great acceptability and earnestness. Father Needham, a local elder, preached for us twice with great force and clearness for one of his age. Bro. Wm. F. Needham also preached once for us. The circuit is in an improving condition. We have had forty conversions this year and forty four accessions to the church. To God be all the glory now and forever! Brethren pray for us.

Yours in Christ.

Walter S Creasy.

Responses of the Children.

The sweet little children are responding to my call in the papers for ten cents contributions. Up to date I have recieved 102 letters, as follows: 82 from N. C., 9 from S. C., 4 from Va., 2 from Ga., and 5 from Ala. These letters come from children whose ages range from 2 to 9 years. One boy 18 years old, son of a travelling preacher writes that he is under deep conviction and desires the prayers of all. I ask the Church to pray for this poor son of the Church that God may powerfully convert him. He is an intelligent young man, as his letter shows. He wishes me to write to him. Let this be the letter. God will convert him, if he is faithful to the grace already given.

If you could read some of these little missives and see the love and sympathy they breathe, your great heart would throb with heavenly emotions.

Some of the little children want me to write them another letter. I will do so at some future time, if the good Dr. Editor will let me. I love God and children, and my soul would rejoice to mingle in love and childish simplicity with them through the Advocate.

I hope the Editors will permit me to write them a letter occasionally.

Yours truly,
R. L. Abernethy

W. F. Stubbs, and old and valuable layman from Anson county, delivered the following speech in the Charlotte District Conference, while the value of the Advocate was being discussed. "I have been taking the Advocate 40 years. Began, when the North and South divided, to take the Southern Christian Advocate, and then when I became attached to the N. C. Conference, I began to take its Organ, have always taken it, and expect to continue to take it till I die. Although I am as well satisfied with my Pastor as I suppose I would be with any, I would about as soon do without him as the Advocate. I have held family-prayers for 40 years, have raised 9 children, who have all professed religion, a result of these things and of always having gladly entertained preachers.

This is about the best speech we have heard for the Advocate.

The three great Presbyterian Churches of Scotland raised last year for all purposes $6,525,180. Of this sum the Established Church contributed $1,750,000, the United Presbyterian, $2,099,825, and the Free Church, $2,672,250.

Miss Anna Oliver, of New York city, recently graduated at the Boston Methodist Divinity School; she being, it is said, the first woman to graduate in theology in the United States. It is rather late to debate the propriety of shutting woman out of any American institutions of learning.

From Bro. Blake.

Dear Brethren: Brother Holden, our preacher on Rolesville circuit, has appointed a protracted meeting at Oaky Grove church, to begin on Saturday 26th of August, being the fourth Saturday.

We would be glad to have a visit from your house to help us at that time. We have plenty of room in our hearts and houses for you and any of your families, whom you may bring with you.

Oaky Grove is not a very inviting field for ministerial labor. We have here but a small membership, and not large congregations; but still we ought not to be neglected in our day of small things. We have an interesting Sabbath school at Mr. Fray's Academy, convenient to which we are preparing to build a neat Church.

The classical and mathematical school, taught by Mr. and Mrs Fray, adds greatly to the advantages of his neighborhood. It will soon enter upon its nineteenth session. It is a mixed school for boys and girls; and as the natural result, the school has turned out a class of young men and young ladies whose manners and morals have been improved by their daily association. There is not a dissipated young man in the neighborhood. Those who have come from a distance to the school have returned home advanced in intellectual attainments and improved in manners and morals, and in better health than when they first came to school.

The building and completion of our new church is an event I have long desired to see. I pray that I may not die without the sight.

When our present church building was erected there were only two Methodist families in the neighborhood. The cost of the house was borne by Needham Price, Esq., and another Methodist. Times are great ly changed since; and it is not unlikely, after we have shown a willingness to help others as well as ourselves in order to put up such a house for the worship of God as we contemplate, we may have to present our claims to our friends at a distance.

Truly Yours,
B. T Blake

Oaky Grove, 3rd Aug., 1876.

A Fancy Picture.

The Southern Churchman says: "The report of the Committee on the 'State of the Church' in Tennessee is not encouraging, and is not in keeping with the bright hopes of Bishop Doane, who preached on the occasion of Bishop Otey's consecration in Christ Church, Philadelphia, January 4,1834. The preacher, as he concluded his sermon, turned to Dr. Otey and said: 'I follow you along your distant way. I lift, as man may lift, the curtain of the future. I see those fair and fertile fields rejoicing in prosperity and peace. I hear from the green shades of those deep forests, from the cliffs of those dark mountains, and the gentle winding of those broad, still streams, one choral song of gratitude and love. Religion, pure and undefiled, has cleansed the fountains of the public morals. A sound and Christian philosophy has given its healthful vigor to the public mind. The institutions of Christ are established. The worship which the saints rejoiced in is restored. Everywhere I see the Church. Everywhere the cross of the Lord Jesus Carist. Thy children are all taught of the Lord, and great is the peace of thy children.' Though the high hopes of the preacher have not been realized, no one can tell what this diocese may yet accomplish if earnest prayers accompany wise and earnest work on the part of all concerned.'

True, indeed, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, no one can tell. It is over forty years since Bishop Doane drew that picture. But would he say if he were now in Tennessee, 'Everywhere I see the Church!' Mind you, by the Church he does not mean any of the sects—O, no—Bishop Doane never made that mistake! But, alas! three or four thousand communicants, a few small churches and a Romanizing clergy, make a poor showing alongside of Bishop Doane's beautiful picture. We are quite sure that the evangelical editor of The Southern Churchman rejoices that there are myriads of members belonging to the different sects in Tennessee, if the Church is such a little flock.

The Reformed Episcopal Church—which met in Ottawa, Canada—adjourned July 18th to meet in Philadelphia next year. The Committee on the State of the Church reported that the Church was organized in December 1873, and that at the present date upward of sixty ministers and fifty congregations are in union with the General Council, besides those already formed or in process of formation. There were reports from only thirty-four congregations, which contain 2,311 families, 3.549 communicants, and 4,695 Sunday School children. The collections for the year were $151,000.

The Hillsboro Recorder learns that an attempt at mutual suicide took place in Alamance county, last week, under the following circumstances; A Dr. Hooper, a young man living in the northern part of the county, went to the breakfast table previous to his wife, for what reasons are not learned. They were seated at the table. After pouring out the tea Mrs. Hooper was dispatched out of the room on some pretext, and in her absence Dr. Hooper poured into her cup a quantity of arsenic. She returned, and it is said that the Doctor himself was absent from the room for a moment. In due time she fully felt into his cup, and Mrs. Hooper, wife like, exchanged cups, drank Dr. Hooper returned and drank his coffee almost at one swallow. He at once realized the singular taste of the beverage, and questioned his wife if she had changed cups. She replied that she had, giving the reason for it, when he exclaimed, "Then I am a dead man," and in a few minutes was a corpse. This we learn from a gentleman who has just returned from a visit to Graham.

Died in Sampson county, N. C. June the 25th, 1876 Lavenia A, McLamb a daughter of Levi and Eliz. G McLamb, aged 11 years 6 months and 24 days.

Lavenia knew but few of the sorrows of earth, while just entering upon the great arena of life, she was a devoted Sunday school scholar, prompt and obedient. Her loss is much lamented not only by the family, but the Sabbath school at which she was a member. Her voice is heard no more in the school room, her seat is vacant at the call of the Master she readily left earth with its troubles and sorrows, and went to swell the anthem of the redeemed forever.

May the parents not weep as those that have no hope, but while we cannot come to them may they prepare to meet her in heaven. Though young she said that she loved the Lord, and until too feeble she knelt at her bed and there offered up her little prayer to God.

May all the little girls who read this follow the example of Lavinia, and may they be impressed with the truth that they too must die.

"While pity prompts the rising sigh
I may this truth, impressed
With awful power—I too must die,
Sink deep in every breast
Let this vain world delude us more,
Behold the gaping tomb:
It bids us seize the present hour,
To-morrow death may come.
The voice of this alarming scene,
Let every heart obey,
Nor be the heavenly warning vain,
While calls to watch and pray."

M W. Bowles.

Died in the city on 12 ult, William Wood ard, aged 64 years.

Bro Woodard was a good man. During the last 30 years of his life he was a member of the Methodist Church in whose communion he died. His death was very sudden and unexpected to his friends.

The Sabbath before his death he attended church morning and evening and seemed to be unusually interested in the services at the sanctuary, but before another Sabbath came on earth, he went.

"Where congregations ne'er break up
And Sabbaths have no end."

The leaves a large family to mourn his loss. May God bless them and at last restore them with the loved one gone.

Died in Thomasville N. C, April 1st 1876 John Carmalt, in the 77th year of his age Bro. C was a native of Swansboro was converted and joined the Methodist Church in his nineteenth year. Soon after this he removed to Newberne, where he began his work in the Master's cause, as a Sunday school teacher, in which he was eminently successful for many of his first class became leaders of the cross. When a harness he with reapers from their same class now fill places of importance. In 1855 Bro. Carmalt removed to Thomasville the place was then just beginning to spring up, no church had been built Bro Carmalt took in the situation of things and at once organized a Sunday school under the friendly shade of the oak tree. The enterprise grew rapidly, and to boost on the subject of religion was soon encouraged. Precious revivals followed a house one long was erected and a large membership gathered into its hallowed precincts. How much can be done by one faithful man fully devoted to God! From a small beginning he saw the town grow up, and grow up as noted for piety and a noble type of methodism. Many of these instructed by him have gone over and are with him in heaven's eternal splendor. "Uncle Carmalt," as we called him, was one of my first S C appointments. I knew him well and always found him a true man. If he had his faults he had noble virtues, and where he knew duty called he was on the ground to strike for God and good. The subject of this memoir deserves more than a passing notice for he was a servant of God—worked hard, suffered long and keenly physically and mentally, but the fine gold was not dimmed the precious ore burnt the dross. Bro. Carmalt was well read and fully posted in our theology, and was one of the best judges of preaching I ever knew. If it was my lot to preach in the church in Thomasville and I saw Bro Carmalt in the congregation, I knew that if I made a single mistake. John Carmalt would detect it but he was no carping critic, was fully in sympathy with the preacher and loved good preaching. How I love to see his face glow, rolling under the fervent administration of Drs. Reid and Wilson. He loved to talk of Bishop Hezekiah Leigh and Moses Brock. Could we would say, "there were giants in those days" and for that he would often add, "we have them now." Faithful old man, he has gone up to be with the white robed orders and with the blood washed. Dear in these times, (as a love task), to the memory of my old friend. While my pen moves my heart glows as I realize the fact, that the long at number of my friends are getting to be on the other side of Jordan. Our Bro, lived, and of course died a good man and rose from his long warfare. God bless his wife and children. May they all meet on the glorified shore."

C. C. Dobson.

Died in Cumberland co, on the 24th inst, Mrs Elizabeth E Pollard, infant daughter of William and Sarah Ballard, aged 2 months and 15 days.

Thus in quick succession do we return to dust. Death comes one to one and behold them not far off. Is the Kingdom of God."

Bro. Carmalt was well read and fully posted in our theology, and was one of the best judges of preaching I ever knew. If it was my lot to preach in the church in Thomasville and I saw Bro Carmalt in the congregation, I knew that if I made a single mistake. John Carmalt would detect it but he was no carping critic, was fully in sympathy with the preacher and loved good preaching. How I love to see his face glow, rolling under the fervent administration of Drs. Reid and Wilson. He loved to talk of Bishop Hezekiah Leigh and Moses Brock. Could we would say, "there were giants in those days" and for that he would often add, "we have them now." Faithful old man, he has gone up to be with the white robed orders and with the blood washed. Dear in these times, (as a love task), to the memory of my old friend. While my pen moves my heart glows as I realize the fact, that the long at number of my friends are getting to be on the other side of Jordan. Our Bro, lived, and of course died a good man and rose from his long warfare. God bless his wife and children. May they all meet on the glorified shore."

C. C. Dobson.

Dyspepsia Cured.

If all the ills that afflict our common humanity, Dyspepsia rises into painful prominence. Its ravages not only destroy the body, but it preys upon the mind, rendering its victims utterly wretched. The numbers that suffer from this disease are computed by tens of thousands. It is the prevailing malady of civilized life Many remedies have been adopted but no permanent cures no positive removal of the distressing symptoms has been effected until Dr. Tutt, of New York, after twenty five years of study, succeeded in compounding a pill that meets all the difficulties of the case. Its success was beyond his most sanguine expectations We know of cases that it has cured in cases that baffled medical science in both hemispheres, and while it is our desire to see the good Doctor well rewarded for his patient research, our interest in the welfare of the sick and dying far transcends a call for their benefit we thus give publicity to the virtues of this great remedy for human woe. adv.

THE BUFFALO

LITHIA WATERS

— IN —

Protracted Intermittent and Remittent Fevers.

—:o:—

Extract from Letter of Dr. O. F. Manson, Professor of General Pathology and Physiology to the Medical College, Richmond, Va., July 5th, 1875.

"These waters have been found especially curative in cases of chronic intermittent fever, many intractable cases having been thereby restored to perfect health in a brief space of time."

Extract from Pamphlet of Dr. S. Harris on these Waters, published in 1859:

"PROTRACTED INTERMITTENT AND REMITTENT FEVERS.

"In the chronic forms of these troublesome cases, the Buffalo water acts most happily, and, if persevered in, often effects a permanent cure. Those enlargements of the liver and spleen, concomitants of these affections, are simultaneously relieved with the chills and fever."

Case of E. K. Harris, Esq., of the Virginia Bar, now Elector for the State upon the Democratic Presidential ticket:

Extract from Letter, dated Buffalo Springs, August 20th, 1873.

"Some years ago my system was completely worn down and prostrated by a protracted case of chills and fever. After using all the remedies indicated in such cases in vain, I visited the most noted watering places of the mountains of Virginia, without deriving any benefit; almost in despair of obtaining relief from any source, I left the mountains and came to these Springs, where, in a few weeks, I was entirely restored to health."

Evidences of the great powers of these Waters in Chronic Intermittent and Remittent Fever might be multiplied to almost any extent, both from professional and unprofessional sources.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE.

STAUNTON, VA.,

W ll begin its twenty-seventh Annual Session, September 21st, 1876, Rev W. A. HARRIS, D. D., President, with an able corps of twenty-three Teachers and Officers.

Modern Languages, Classical and Sacred in the College by a European Teacher. Music by able Professors and Teachers, among whom are some of the most cultivated teachers of vocal music in the South.

This is one of the healthiest climates in the Union. Unusual interest in the rapid promotion of the health of the pupils. Those who come here from a distance with feeble constitutions, and climatic disorders generally restored.

Its buildings elegant—fanned by purest breezes, commanding the most magnificent scenery, and combining such varied attractions as to make it one of the most delightful college homes in the Union.

This school is usually attended by pupils from fifteen to seventeen different States

Great economy and simplicity in dress are required. A single uniform is worn. No unnecessary expense allowed. Strict economy practiced to limit expenses of pupils.

From Bishop D. S. Doggett, D D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, located in Staunton, Va., under the Presidency of Rev. W. A. Harris, is, in my judgement, one of the best institutions, for young ladies, in the South. I have occasion to know and appreciate its value by the advantages enjoyed by one of my daughters there. Its course of study is ample, its Faculty accomplished, and its instruction both solid and elegant. Its present accommodations are all that can be desired for health and comfort, or taste. No location could be more eligible; no scenery more magnificent; no atmosphere more salubrious. Not the least of its merits is, its just regard for religious training, without which no Female College especially, would be a blessing.

D. S. DOGGETT.

From Bishop E. M. Marvin, D. D.

The Wesleyan Female Institute is an honor to the Church. Instruction is thorough. In music, advantages are offered of the very highest order. The most talented Professors are employed, and neither pains nor expenses are spared to make this department excellent,

From Prof P H Saats, M. A. L. L. D., University of Virginia.

The Wesleyan Female Institute, at Staunton, deserves the brilliant success it enjoys. Having had a daughter under Mr. Saats' care, my observations leads me to believe, unreserved to it, one of the best of Female Seminaries in many states." The Halls of the Wesleyan Female Institute would be filled to overflowing with pupils from all our Southern States

Children's Column.

A Child's Evening Prayer.

"Jesus, tender shepherd, hear me;
Bless thy little lamb to night;
Through the darkness be thou near me,
Watch my sleep till morning light.

"All this day thy hand has led me,
And I thank thee for thy care;
Thou hast clothed me, warmed, and fed me,
Listen to my evening prayer.

"Let my sins be all forgiven,
Bless the friends I love so well;
Take me when I die to heaven,
Happy there with thee to dwell."

The Branch and the Stream.

A branch broken from the tree by the tempest, rode on the rapid current of the swollen stream.

"See how I lead the waters!" he cried to the banks. "See how I command and carry the stream with me!" he cried again.

A jutting rocky ridge, over which the torrent dashed, caught the branch and kept it, shattered and imprisoned, while the waters flowed on and on.

"Alas!" cried the branch, "how can you hold me thus? Who will govern the stream? How will it prosper without my guidance?"

"Ask the banks," said the rock ledge. And the banks answered:

"Many, like you, have been carried by the stream, fancying that they carried it. And as to the loss you will be to the waters—don't be uneasy. You are already forgotten, as those are who came before you, and as those will soon be who may follow."—Selected.

Going to God's House.

On the parlor wall, where the first sunbeam lights it up in the morning, hangs a pictured face in its wreath of immortelles. The merry brown eyes and the smiling mouth have nothing of death in their look; but the unfading wreath speaks of the crown they wore beyond the river. So you do not wonder when loving lips tell you that the little maiden lived twelve beautiful years on earth, and then went home in one swift moment to "the Father's house in the sky."

We have many beautiful memories of her left with us; but none sweeter than of the little prattling child of three years, whose words and ways were full of strange wisdom.

Once an old friend of the family called to spend an hour; and as he said goodbye, he lifted the gentle one in his arms, asking lightly: "Well, little Mary, when shall I see you again?"

"Oh, when we get to God's house!" was her instant reply, her beautiful eyes smiling in his face. The old man went away; but the words haunted him, and when, a few years afterward, he lay dying, he said to those about him:

"Tell little Mary C I. have gone to God's house, and I shall wait to meet her there."

Mary lived for twelve years, full of life and merriment, fairly overflowing with frolic, yet he who knew her best knew how much of deep thoughtfulness was hidden under it all.

"We were none of us so ready for sudden death as Mary," yet no one was more full of hopes and dreams of life.

She had no long sickness—only a slight cold, that no one thought worth noticing. At midnight she had a smile and jest for her brother, in an hour she was gasping for breath, and longing for the morning.

"Oh, if the morning would only come! I can't breathe in the darkness," was her constant cry. But just at morning, with the awful look of death setting on her eyes wide in a flood of light, she exclaimed rapturously: "The perfect day! The perfect day!"

With that glad cry she went home to God's house. The gates opened wide to let her in, and we doubt not there were welcoming hands stretched out to meet her. It was not going away alone to some strange region. It was a home familiar from childhood—God's house, where our dear Lord went to prepare a place for us.—Christian Neighbor.

HEAVEN.—A peculiar season for the duty of heavenly contemplations is when thou art in a suffering, distressed, or tempted state. When should we take our cordials but in times of fainting? When is it more seasonable to walk to heaven than when we know not in what corner of earth to live with comfort? or when should our thoughts converse more above than when they have nothing but grief below? Where should Noah's dove be but in the ark when the waters cover all the earth, and she cannot find rest for the sole of her foot? What should we think on but our Father's house when we have not even the husks of the world to feed upon? Surely God sends thy afflictions for this very purpose. Happy art thou, poor man, if thou make this use of thy poverty, and thou that art sick, if thou so improve thy sickness —Baxter.

Rural and Domestic.

Sweet Potatoes.

Keep these clear of grass, and see that the vines do not take root in the middle. When this occurs numerous small tubers are formed at the expense of the main crop. If the ground is wet a fair crop may be made by throwing up a bed, opening a furrow on top of it, and laying vines in it, say three or four side by side, and covering them at intervals, leaving spaces some six inches wide uncovered—eighteen inches apart. This may be done, with the early varieties, as late as the twentieth of the month; with ordinary varieties not later than the first week of July.

Turnips.

Have land ready to sow rutabagas toward the latter part of this month. Remember that very fine tilth is essential to a turnip crop. The rutabaga is greatly preferable to all other turnips as stock feed, being hardier and more nutritious than other varieties. In this connection we would suggest a trial of the old-fashioned long collards as a crop for stock feed, especially milk cows. Plants may be set out as late as the first of August, and on good land will make an immense amount of nutritious food. A similar plant, called cow cabbage, is largely used as cattle food in the Jersey Islands and in Portugal.—Southern Cultivator.

Watering Poultry.

It is the belief of the writer that many of the diseases incident to poultry are due to neglect in providing them with pure water; particularly do I believe such to be the case in the majority of instances where chicken cholera prevails. The omission to furnish fowls with suitable drinking water is one of the worst features of cruelty to animals. It is a neglect that is decidely adverse to success, hence tends to diminish individual fancy for fowls, and works detriment to poultry interests. Those whom we occasionally hear say that "there is no profit in poultry," are not qualified to have the management of the same, and in their attention may be classed with the thriftless and negligent parties who keep fowls that get drink when it rains. Fancier's Journal.

ORANGE MARMALADE.—Cut Florida oranges into quarters, and then take out the seeds, and cut the pieces into thin slices with a sharp knife. To every pound add one quart of cold water, and let the whole stand in a large bowl for twenty-four hours. Boil until the slips of peel are very tender, which will take about three hours of slow cooking. Let it stand in the porcelain kettle until next day; then weigh it, and to every pound of peel and juice add one and a half pounds of lump sugar. Boil the whole until the sirup jellies, and the bits of peel are transparent, which will take an hour's slow boiling. Turn out into jars or tumblers. This marmalade will last for years, and is delicious for breakfast as well as tea.—Daisy Eyebright, in Country Gentleman.

CABBAGE.—Many persons complain that they cannot have any luck with cabbage—it will not head for them. The cabbage is just as easily grown as any other plant if its natural wants are met in the surrounding conditions. These, although not many nor difficult to meet, are imperative, and must be met if success is to be secured. A little study of its nature will give some insight into the character of these wants.

The cabbage is a biennial plant, and all efforts during its first year's growth are directed toward laying up its stalk and thick stems and leaves, as large an amount of plant food as possible, to be drawn upon for the production of seed during the second year. As the formation of good heads requires a rapid growth, the first necessary condition is a very rich soil. It is very difficult, if not impossible, to have soil too rich for cabbage, provided it is thoroughly rotted. And it is next to impossible to secure satisfactory results without a rich soil.

This plant is a native of the sea coast of Europe, and grows in a moist soil and atmosphere. From this it would seem that the nearer these conditions can be met the better. Where it can be secured a moist but not wet soil should be selected But one of the most essential conditions of the success in cabbage-raising is frequent and thorough cultivation Without this success can seldom be achieved; with it, fair success may be had even when other things are not very propitious. It is hard to overdo in this matter. Cabbage should be thoroughly cultivated with plow or hoe at least twice each week. This frequent stirring of the soil keeps it constantly in a porous and moist condition, that the demands of this succulent growing plant are fully met. No one should attempt to raise this plant for profit who is not willing to give thorough culture.—L. J. T., in Southern Agriculturist.

Consumptives and sufferers from Throat and Lung diseases, Scrofula, Debility, etc., will find speedy relief in using Baker's Cod Liver Oil and Phosphate of Lime. It is decidedly pleasant in taste, and highly commended by physicians. The objectionable features in the Oil are removed. See that you get that prepared by Jno. C. Baker & Co., Philadelphia.

A Double Danger Averted

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe miasma, but to swallow it, since it infects not only the atmosphere, but the water. The aerial poison threatens his system through the lungs and pores, the liquid through the stomach. Against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originated by malaria are of a far more malignant type those originated by the same cause in the temperate zone, it enjoys immense and constantly increasing sales, and there is no portion of this continent where it is not the reigning specific for miasmatic fevers and disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, proceeding from malaria and other causes.

VALUABLE
Real Estate for Sale
—AT—
PUBLIC AUCTION.

The largest amount of valuable land ever offered in North-western North Carolina! To all wishing Homes now is your time.

On Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876,

I will offer for sale, at public auction, the valuable tract of land situated on Little Fish River, and containing 5,000 acres. This tract of land will be divided into lots to suit purchasers. It is one of the best farms in North-western N. C., under a high state of cultivating; the cotton lands, with uplands, lying well; fruits, grain, tobacco and the grasses grow luxuriantly on these lands. Splendid grist, flour and circular saw mills are situated on this farm; the best of water-power, lying ready to be improved.—The land is well timbered, watered, and an abundance of good cool springs. In fact it is the best section in the country.

Also another tract, known as the "Saw-Mill" tract, containing 1,500 acres, 400 acres of which has just been cleared and cultivated in tobacco. Wheat, corn, oats, rye, tobacco, fruits, and the grasses grow luxuriantly upon this plantation; it is well watered, well wooded, and is well adapted for dairy stock raising, fruit growing and farming generally; also good water-power and a circular saw mill.

Also another tract of land lying in the suburbs of Mount Airy, containing 456 acres lying on Lovell's Creek, 100 acres of which is as fine bottom land as there is in the State.

Also another tract of land lying on the Ararat River, known as the Buck Shoals tract, on which there are good grist, flouring and saw-mills; good residence and one large brick building 36 by 70 feet, and four stories in height, erected for a cotton factory. All the buildings and the dam are new, and the water is sufficient for 200 horse power, or even more.

Also another tract containing 350 acres, lying on Rutledge and Reed Cane Creeks, on which are fine bottoms, plenty of timber, and an abundance of good water.

Also several other tracts of fine farming and mineral lands, all of which are well watered and timbered, and on which are good buildings, and the lands are in high state of cultivation, a rare chance seldom offered to a small colony. This is the best body of lands to be found in the County, being situated near Mount Airy, the terminus of the proposed Mount Airy Narrow Gauge Railroad, and in one of the healthiest and most thriving sections of the State, ten miles from the Blue Ridge, and is one of the most prosperous inland towns in the State.

I will also sell, at the above mentioned time, my Residence, Store House, Tobacco Factory, Foundry, and a number of town lots in Mount Airy.

The sale will commence at the Mill known as the Hay-tuck, at 12 o'clock, M., on Monday, the 21st day of August, 1876, and continue from day to day until all is sold.

Persons coming from a distance to look at these valuable lands, will come via Greensboro to Salem, where they will find a tri weekly line of four-horse stages to Mt. Airy, distance 40 miles.

Poetry.

Solitude.

[illegible]
[illegible] of the world!
[illegible]
[illegible] ear in glimpse awhile
[illegible]
[illegible] sense, its strife and sin,
[illegible]
[illegible] heartless blue—
[illegible] Thy spirit's ear [illegible] the tone
[illegible] by, that wakes through
[illegible] summer promises. In the [illegible]
[illegible] waves, blent with the winds,
[illegible] old oak branches to and fro,
[illegible] horns of the winged birds,
[illegible] out the world!

[illegible] and [illegible] thou free,
[illegible] of heart, and all its scenes
[illegible] deep on the tranquil breast,
[illegible] the heart of nature comes to learn.
[illegible] draw the curtains of the soul around it,
[illegible] with rest, and hear his sweet replies,
[illegible] harmony of nature's sound,
[illegible] beauty that around us lies,
[illegible] to him in earnest, in our prayers
[illegible] and solitude,
[illegible] we seek Him through the tumult and [illegible] strife
[illegible] out the world!

[illegible] as the sun shall sunshine falls,
[illegible] casts [illegible] the sheltering trees,
[illegible] voice that from the spirit calls,
[illegible] murmur of the summer breeze,
[illegible] commune with self, and learn
[illegible] to know what noble possibilities
[illegible] own world involved—
[illegible] that we might soar afar
[illegible] the [illegible] of these cares and pain,
[illegible] to find our own calm home and rest,
[illegible] to live with earth subdued,
[illegible] [illegible] love in thy breast,
Shut out the world!

Fayetteville District Conference.

This body met in Rockingham on 24 August and was presided over by Rev L S Nelson, P E, with entire stability. Every charge was represented but two. Ten traveling and six local preachers were present, and nineteen lay delegates. All the interests of the church in the District were closely inquired into by the President.

1st. Sunday schools.—Much interest taken in this cause on most of the District. Fayetteville has a school which has been kept up continuously for fifty seven years. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved 1st, That we have heard with pleasure the reports of Sunday schools from the various charges and are happy to believe that the present status is a general advance on this very interesting and important subject.

2. That we pledge ourselves to renewed efforts and increased diligence to advance the Sunday school cause in our District.

3d. That it is our conviction that members of our church cannot discharge their whole duty to the cause of Christ without contributing whatever means they may have to promote this important interest of the Church.

4th. That we approve of, and recommend the adoption of the Union Lessen System by all our Sunday schools.

5th. That we recommend the organization of Sunday school Missionary Societies in all our Sunday-schools.

The next subject taken up was the Support of the Ministry. The various charges had paid from one sixth to less than half, Fayetteville itself not having paid half.

After considerable discussion on the subject the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved 1st, That from the reports of the pastoral charges in the District we are sorry so little money has been collected for the support of the pastors. We suppose this is due mainly to the stringency of the times, but are glad to be assured that on most of the pastoral charges the whole amounts will be ultimately paid. We recommend to the stewards the importance of beginning, in the early part of the year, the raising of the amounts agreed upon for their respective pastors.

2nd. That it is the duty of every member of the church to contribute to the support of the ministry, and the benevolent enterprises of the church, in proportion to ability; made so by the word of God, the true principles of religion, and the organic law of the church, and that no person having the ability is guiltless who neglects or refuses to perform his duty in this matter.

3d. That it is a necessary part of religious life in the soul that a man should cultivate a liberal spirit and hold himself in readiness to respond to the pecuniary claims that God and the church have upon him, as God shall give him ability.

4th. That it is our deliberate judgment that the Church is honestly and justly bound to liquidate the whole amount of the debt which they agree to pay their pastors for their services, and that nothing but poverty can release them from this obligation.

5th. That it is the duty of pastors and church leaders in the church to educate the people into a higher standard of liberality, and until this is effectually done the church must fail to accomplish in its fullness the end for which she is ordained by her great Head.

6th. That it is the duty of the Board of Stewards on each pastoral charge to provide a liberal support for their pastor and then to raise it by whatever plan they may choose, but we recommend the assessment plan as in our judgment the best,—thereby relieving the pastor's mind of care, and making him more efficient and useful in the church.

On motion the pastors in the District were requested to read the above to all their congregations.

The next subject called up was Missions in the District.

After inquiry and discussion the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved 1st, That it is the sense of this Conference that Montgomery circuit should be a self sustaining circuit.

2d. That a Mission should be formed to embrace part of Cumberland, Moore, Montgomery and Richmond counties to be called Drowning Creek and Little River.

The committee appointed at last District Conference on the subject of a District School presented their report as follows:

The committee appointed at the last District Conference on the subject of the District School, report that a proposition has been made to them by the citizens of Jonesboro which we submit with this report and as a part of it. The people of Jonesboro, as will be seen in the proposition itself, donate to us, as a church, property therein specified free of all encumbrance.

In view of the proposition itself and the desirableness of the location, we recommend that the offer of the good people of Jonesboro and vicinity be accepted, and that we appoint the following persons to receive and hold the property donated for the purpose specified, viz: George S. Cole, Dr. J. M Campbell, Elisha Watson, John Vaughan, E. J Lilly, K. A. Worthy and E R Partridge.

Resolved, That so soon as the preliminaries and arrangements have been made and the school shall have gone into operation we recommend its [illegible] to our people.

Resolved, That the character of the District School be left in the hands of the Trustees named above.

The proposition from Jonesboro relative to the District Conference School embraces the following items:

1. A lot of land from two to four acres just as may be thought desirable.

2nd On this lot there are two buildings already erected at proper distance—each having a good chimney—and together are sufficient to accommodate seventy students.

3d. Two thirds of this property is offered as a donation by the owners, and the remaining one third can be secured without trouble and at a cost of $75.00, perhaps less.

4th. The title to the property in fee simple to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the next North Carolina Annual Conference to be held in Greensboro in November, viz: Rev R S Ledbetter, Dr. F. E Asbury, K. A. Worthy and E. J. Lilly—and W. T. Jones and Wm B. Blake were elected alternates.

The next District Conference is to be held in Lumberton.

The following was presented in reference to our beloved and worthy departed brother,

COL. JOHN WALL LEAK.

We recognize the Scripture doctrine that God is the head of the Church, and that as such he controls and governs all things for the good of his people, and the glory of his name upon earth. Every event of his Providence is a part of the grand system which he has ordained and established, and contributes its influence in solving the great problem of human redemption. In all his ways God makes no mistakes—he commits no blunder. He fits men for their place in his church and in the world, and endows them for the work committed to their hands. When their work is done and his will is accomplished in them and by them, he takes them to their reward Yet their names and the influence of their lives, live in the world after they have gone to their home in heaven. Truly this may be said of Col. John Wall Leak who departed this life the 6th of May, 1876. Col. Leak had been identified with the church from his youth. He consecrated his all to God through Jesus Christ. When such a man dies this world is poorer, but heaven is richer. As a steward in the church, as a member of District, Annual and General Conferences, as the Treasurer of the Conference Missionary Society, he was eminently faithful and true. Now therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Col. John W Leak the church in N. C. and the whole Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has sustained a great loss.

Resolved, That in the wisdom of his counsel, the clearness of his judgment, his devoted love for the cause of Christ and to Methodism—the nobleness of his character, the consistency of his christian walk, the piety evinced in his example, together with the liberality of his spirit and life the church possesses a treasure of great value, and worthy to be had in remembrance.

Resolved, That in his triumphant death is not only furnished a demonstration of the power of the grace of God to save in that trying hour, but is, also, the crowning glory which God places upon the ending of a life dedicated to him and his service.

Resolved, That this preamble and these resolutions be spread upon our Journal and a copy be furnished the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

Several brethren spoke on the subject expressing their high appreciation of the pure and lofty character of our departed brother.

Revs. Dr. Craven, J. A. Cunninggim and O J. Beent added to the pleasure and interest of the Conference by their attendance.

A vote of thanks to the Carolina Central Railway, the officers of the Presbyterian Church, and the citizens of Rockingham was given unanimously.

The Lord crowned the occasion by quickening the church, convicting sinners and commencing a glorious work which we trust will result in the conversion of many souls

Charlotte District Conference.

The exercises of this unusually interesting occasion were opened with a short capital, sermon by Rev. P. J. Carraway of Tryon St. Church, Charlotte, text: "Ask and ye shall receive," in the Methodist Church at Concord, Wednesday morning August 2nd, at 10 o'clock.

At its conclusion our P. E., Rev. W. H. Bobbitt, called the Conference to order and requested C G. Montgomery to call the roll of delegates elected to this Conference. Most of those living on the R. R. from Statesville to Charlotte were absent because the trains failed to connect in Charlotte that morning, and forced them to remain during that day in Charlotte, but they came over Wednesday night, and after this the delegation was large, every charge being well represented except one. The roll being called, on motion of Rev. C. M. Pepper, C. G. Montgomery was elected Secretary.

It was agreed unanimously that no committees be appointed except for special purposes, and that we meet each morning during the session at 9 A. M., adjourn for religious services at eleven, and re-assemble at 3 P. M. for the evening sessions, and adjourn at will. Rev. C. M. Pepper then announced to the Conference that Mathias Winecoff, a member elected to this Conference from the Mt Pleasant circuit, had died the morning before and requested that a committee of three be appointed to draft suitable resolutions for the action of the Conference. The chair appointed Revs. A. D. Betts, J. C. Thomas, and M. Dove, a layman from said circuit. The Conference then adjourned for the evening session.

As Secretary of the Conference I was requested to furnish you with a brief account of the proceedings of the Conference from day to day.

It was an occasion of so much interest and so much business of importance was transacted, all of which I have written in detail, that I wish you could spare the space to publish my entire minutes just as they are in regular order; but as I cannot ask this I shall furnish you some of the most important items. This is a very large District, embracing 17 pastoral charges with about 75 churches, with a total membership of about 5000. Some 50 Sabbath schools with about 2500 pupils. There are 12 parsonages, provided the charge not represented has one.

You can see at a glance, that there was a great deal of work to be done by the Conference, and had we not had an excellent and efficient Presiding Officer, we could not have gotten through in several days.

Although Bro. Bobbitt has been our P. E. only this year, he is familiar with the condition of the churches, parsonages, and everything pertaining to each, in every part of the District, and if either needs repairs, the church is without a stove or the parsonage without a well, he was sure to make the layman from said circuit or station tell it, though some times he was forced to lead the witness. He was so earnest in his desire that the comfort of both the churches and parsonages should be more carefully looked after by the laymen, that during the session, T. J. Watkins a layman from Wadesboro circuit, introduced the following resolution which was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we the lay members of Charlotte District Conference, claiming to honor God and to desire to advance His cause, hereby pledge ourselves to use our utmost efforts among our brethren at home, to put all our churches and parsonages in more comfortable condition for all seasons of the year.

Reports of the pastors showed the condition of our churches throughout the District to be in a very encouraging condition. There were many things reported that were peculiarly gratifying. In most of the charges prayer-meetings are held regularly by laymen. In several charges, these have been very interesting and profitable; several happy conversions were reported to have been witnessed in these prayer meetings. Young men in many places had taken active and zealous part in conducting them. There were some revivals reported and a good many accessions to the church.

The most extensive and fruitful of these was reported by Rev. P. J. Carraway, of Tryon St. Charlotte, where he had about 75 conversions and upwards of 50 accessions to his church.

Some charges have paid half their assessments, most of them about one third.

I believe without an exception our pastors expressed themselves as having reasons to hope to receive all during the year. They looked well, were well dressed, seemed in good spirits and looked happy.

We were much pleased to see almost continually during the sessions of the Conference, Revs L McKinnon, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in town and J. H. Thornwell at Poplar Tent, and Rev. L A. Bikle, D. D. pastor of Concord Lutheran, and D Caldwell of the Associate Reformed Church. These gentlemen together with Rev. Anthony T. Heilig, were introduced and invited to sit in the Conference. We were also glad to have Revs. L. W. Crawford, J. A. Cunninggim and J. B. Bobbitt, D D. to spend a day with us. Dr. Bobbitt presented the claims of the Advocate, which were discussed and with such just tributes to its past usefulness and present value, as to [illegible] the adoption of the following resolution in regard to it offered by Rev. A. D. Betts and W. E Ardrey, Esqr. viz: "We, the Charlotte District Conference, are glad to see the editor of the Advocate with us and hereby renew our pledges to use suitable efforts to extend its circulation. We think every christian family ought to take and read their Church Organ." The following Centennial addresses were delivered, first by Rev. B. Craven, D. D. President of Trinity College, on the Future of Methodism: then Rev P. J. Carraway, on Methodism in its relations to Missionaries, Foreign and Domestic. A sermon on Justification by Rev. W. D. Lee, and one by J. H. Guinn on the Divinity of the Spirit and its Mission; Methodism in its relations to Sabbath Schools, by Rev E. A. Yates. Our Colleges and their claims by Revs. W. M Roby and V. A Sharpe. Introduction and growth of Methodism in N C. and the Characteristics of the Pioneer preachers, by Rev H. T. Hudson. These were delivered by appointment and showed a great deal of research and pains taking in their preparation and contained some of the sublimest eloquence and most beautiful imagery we have ever heard or read.

It is due N. C. Methodism that they be published. Many sermons of rich gospel truth and pathetic eloquence were preached and we trust great good will be the result.

The following resolutions were offered and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Conference, returns its thanks to Dr. B. Craven for his visit and address. We will ever be glad to see him at our Conference.

Resolved, That we highly appreciate and have greatly enjoyed the visits of Bros. E. A. Yates W. M. Roby, V. A Sharpe and H T. Hudson, and will ever welcome them in future.

Resolved, That we point with pride to Trinity, Greensboro, and Davenport Colleges as great Institutions of learning worthy our Conference.

Resolved 2nd, That we pledge them our zealous support and influence.

Resolved, That the sincere thanks of this Conference are hereby tendered the citizens of Concord for their kindness and liberal hospitality which we have greatly enjoyed.

Resolved, That we appreciate the christian courtesy of the Pastors of the several churches, tendered us for Divine worship during the session of our District Conference.

The following resolutions were passed concerning a deceased brother:

Mathias Winecoff lived all his days in Cabarrus county N. C., and died Aug. 1st 1876 aged 69.

He served God from his youth. His religion was spiritual. "Being justified by faith," he had, "peace with God" and "rejoiced in hope of the glory of God." His neighbors had confidence in his religion.

Resolved 1st, The Charlotte District has suffered a great loss in the death of Bro. Winecoff 2nd, We tender our heartfelt sympathies to his sorely bereaved family.

2nd, This report be published in the Concord papers and Raleigh Christian Advocate.

4th, We praise God for that grace which enabled him so to live, that he "being dead yet speaketh."

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are due and are hereby tendered Bro. C. G. Montgomery for the faithful and efficient manner in which he has performed his duties as Secretary of this District Conference.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are due and hereby tendered our chairman Rev. W. H. Bobbitt for his uniform'--here Bro. Bobbitt interrupted Rev. J. M. Shaver who thus began to read, and insisted that no resolution in reference to himself should be offered and acted upon by the Conference. But he was too late. Every one knew what the resolution contained and with a spontaneous out burst of approval carried it unanimously and irresistably.

Rev. C. M. Pepper offered the following which were adopted.

Resolved, That we condemn the use of spirituous liquors by members as a beverage and hereby pledge our efforts to correct the evil.

2nd, That we bid the Good Templars and other Temperance organizations God speed in their noble work, believing that they are accomplishing great good in the land.

3rd, That we are convinced that the strong arm of the Law should interpose a barrier to the progress of the great evil of intemperance by prohibiting its sale as a beverage.

4th, That it is the sense of this District Conference, that are our ministers should be careful to enforce the law of the church against drunkenness and as for as possible banish dram drinking from the church.

The following memorial to the General Conference, was presented by Rev. A. D. Betts and adopted:

To the General Conference, M E Church South, to meet in May 1878—Greeting. We, the Charlotte District Conference of the N C. Annual Conference, beg you to strike the following words from our Discipline, page 201, viz: If the consecrated bread or wine, be all spent before all have communicated the elder may consecrate more by repeating the prayer of consecration.

We praise God for the Reformation of the 16th Century.

We rejoice that our own Church has purified her Ritual by eliminating some expressions, tainted with Romanism. "Sanctify this water for this holy sacrament" has very properly been omitted. The priestly manipulation of the bread and the wine in the prayer of consecration has been very wisely left out. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth."

Much other important and interesting business was transacted, and many other subjects discussed. Such as the importance of family prayer. The Sabbath school, etc.

The exercises from the first were attended by large crowds and every one seemed to feel that "it was good to be there.

I herewith send a speech delivered in Conference by W. F. Stubbs, an old and valuable layman from Anson, when the value of the Advocate was being discussed.

The next District Conference will be held in Monroe. T. C. Smith, C. G. Montgomery, J. B. Squires and T. J. Watkins were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and T. D. Winchester and Rev. J. M Shaver alternates.

At 10, o'clock Saturday night, Conference adjourned sine die.

C. G. Montgomery, Sectry.

How "Greenback" Paper is Made—All the paper for the money issued by the government is manufactured on a sixty two inch Fourdrinie machine, at the Glen Mills, near West Chester, Pennsylvania. Short pieces of red silk are mixed with the pulp in the engine, and the finished stuff is conducted to the wire without passing through any screens, which retain the silk threads. By an arrangement above the wire cloth, a shower of short pieces of fine blue silk is dropped in streaks upon the paper while it is forming. The upper side, on which the blue silk is dropped, is the one used for the face of the notes, and, from the manner in which the threads are applied, must show them more distinctly than the lower or reverse side, although they are embedded deeply enough to remain fixed. The mill is guarded by officers night and day to prevent the abstraction of paper.—Ex.

May two people be said to be half-witted when they have an understanding between them?

A Timely Word.

One cold, sleety, gloomy November evening, when I had settled comfortably down before my bright fire, with the pleasant jingle of the tea things in my ear, and an entertaining book in my hand a furious ring was heard at my surgery bell.

"Dear me!' I thought, putting my slippered feet snugly on the fender, "surely nobody wants the poor doctor to night."

'Wanted please sir,' said my servant, as he slipped a note into my hand. I looked at in dismay. Yes, I was really wanted, and that without delay. Only a distance of several miles, and that right across the dreariest part of the forest. There was no help for it; I must put on my dreadnaught, and start immediately. The moon was nearly at her full; that was one good thing.

'Who brought the note, Giles?' I inquired eagerly, with a vague hope that the messenger might bear me company.

'Old Peter Cox, sir.'

'Is he going back, then?'

'O no sir! He'll sleep at his daughter's, sir.'

'Well, get Jerry saddled, Giles; I must start in five minutes.'

Jerry came around at the appointed time—a fine, stoutly built, brindly cob, capable of doing a vast amount of work, with a splendid head and a pair of large lustrous eyes. Jerry and I had been fast friends for several years. He knew the forest almost as well as I did. I always selected him for difficult journeys. I think he knew it was rather unpleasant now, so he gave a snort of determined acquiescence.

We cantered pleasantly along the straggling village road, catching glimpses of snug firesides and busy farmsteads, then out into the lonely, dreary forest.

Not one single wayfarer did we meet, though we had passed over five or six weary miles Suddenly Jerry pricked up his ears and gave a snort of intensified delight. I listened, and by and by saw something looming in the far distance; then the creak of the wheels was heard breaking on the silence. What could it be? A small higgler's cart, drawn by a wretched, half-starved horse, dragging his weary load painfully along. But where was the huckster himself? Not with his cart; oh, no. The patient and diligent creature was fulfilling his task more faithfully than his master. Where could he be? Jerry seemed concerned, and cast a pitying glance on the lank, lean, much-enduring animal; but he went on, and so did we. For a full mile nothing was to be seen; then a small dark speck was discernible in the stream of light—a man careering along, legs apart like a pair of compasses, making vain endeavors to steady his reeling steps. The man, though evidently under the influence of strong drink, apparently knew me, or guessed at my profession.

'I say, doctor,' he stammered ont, 'is that you? Stop, if ye plase; I want to ax you a question.'

'Well, my friend,' I replied, gently drawin Jerry to a stand, 'what is it?'

'Why, I want you to give me a prescription. You've a great name, doctor, in these parts, and you're a good friend to the poor; maybe ye'll give it to me for naught.'

'What for, my friend? What ails you?'

'Well, sir, I want a prescription for keeping my legs from turning into the public house. If I could only get that, I should be all right, you know, doctor.'

'You set me fast, my man,' I replied, quite puzzled for the moment; 'you set me fast. I really cannot give you such a prescription. But now I think of it, there is a very great Physician, a friend of mine, who both can and will give you what you want, if you apply to Him.'

'Where is he, doctor? Does he charge high?'

'He is not far off, and He gives His advice quite freely, without money and without price. He is a very great Physician, as I said. Your only plan is to go to Him.'

'That will I. Only tell me his name, and where he lives.'

I hesitated, looking steadfastly at the poor, reeling staggering figure of the drunken higgler, and wondering if indeed he might be able to understand me. The man thought I was undecided about giving the Great Physician's address, so he cried out imploringly;

'O doctor, let me know where he lives. Now do, doctor; for indeed I'll take it, whatever it may be; I will indeed and in truth, doctor.' And the man fixed his keen gray eyes earnestly upon me. He really meant what he was saying 'I be a poor, weak, frail body, doctor, an' I be feared of losing body and soul, I be indeed. Now tell me his name, doctor.'

'Well, my man,' I said, touching the tip of his shoulder with my whip, 'listen to me, and mark my words. The Great Physician is the Lord Jesus Christ. Go to Him straight. Go to Him, and He alone can give you what you want.'

The poor fellow seemed suddenly sobered. He gathered his feet together, and stood erect; he neither spoke nor stirred; His thoughts were powerfully, irresistibly engrossed; he seemed riveted to the spot. I wished him good night, and passed on my lonely track. I looked back; there stood the small dark figure, transfixed. I looked again; there it was, scarcely discernible in the great distance. There was a turn in the road, so I saw the coalhiggler no more

Some few weeks passed, and again I beheld the small wiry figure; not drunk now, but alert and brisk about his small traffic. He avoided me, however; so I took no notice.

Another day, some few months after, when the dull Winter had passed away, and the Spring flowers were peeping, and the birds building among the trees or in the thatch and all nature wore a smile, I espied the little coal higgler sitting on his cart. He, too, wore a smile. He caught my eye, bounded towards me, took hold of the rein of my horse, of my hand, of both hands, shook them warmly, pressed them between both of his own, quite unmindful of their state. Tears rolled softly down his thin cheeks—blessed tears, such as angels love to see. 'God bless you, dear, good doctor, God bless you!' That was all, and enough; we understood each other entirely. I returned the grateful pressure. I fancy my own eyes grew dim; I know that tears were in my voice when I returned his benediction.

That coal cart was never seen standing before a public house again. The old horse grew sleek and trim. He, too, may have felt, as I did, the truth of the words, 'A word, in season, how good it is!"—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

Concerning Will-Making.

The failure so far of the contestants of A. T. Stewart's will to break that instrument, is very suggestive of the importance which attaches to the making of wills. Not only should a will always be made, if possible, so that the testator's wishes may be carried out in the event of death, which often comes suddenly and without a moment's warning, but it should be so carefully drawn as to render it secure against the efforts of lawyers in the interests of contestants bearing no rightful claim to the property. Of course, a man so thorough in all his business methods as Mr. Stewart was, would be careful to insure the carrying out of his wishes. And yet, had the witness to his signature been a relative, one interested in its provisions, had the date been wanting, had any one of the requirements of the law been omitted, Mr. Stewart's great wealth might have been distributed in innumerable fragments among countless Turneys; for when a man dies, leaving wealth behind and the remote possibility of a successful contest of his will, the number of relatives who suddenly spring to the surface is as great for multitude as the wonders of Alladin's lamp.

There are to-day, the world over, thousands of unprincipled, dishonest men, revelling in wealth not rightly theirs, yet which the law is compelled to allow them because of the imperfect execution of the instrument called a "last will and testament," but which has proved not to be worth the paper on which it was written. And there are thousands upon thousands more in penury and want, because of the neglect of the head of the family or some relative or friend to make his will disposing of his property. The duty of will making is a most urgent and imperative one, which should not be neglected by any one having property to bequeath.

The Best Time.

A very dear, only daughter lay dying. She had been a very thoughtful, praying child, having professed religion at twelve years of age, and lived a devoted and useful life. Now she was only waiting a few hours to go home. Severe pain at times almost took away the power of thought. Between these attacks of suffering she looked back on her childhood's experiences and forward into the blessed future, with equal clearness and joy as she said, 'There's a delightful clearness now.' As I sat by her bed, we talked as her strength would permit. Among the many things never to be forgotten, she said: 'Father, you know I professed religion when I was young, very young—some thought too young—but oh, how I wish I could tell everybody what a comfort it is to me now to think of it.' Reaching out her hand—the fingers already cold—and grasping mine, she said with great earnestness: 'Father, you are at work for the young. Do all you can for them while they are young. It is the best time—the best time. Oh, I see it now as I never did before It is the best time while they are young—the younger the better. Do all you can for them—while they are very young.—Presbyterian.

The Character of Washington.

I think I knew General Washington thoroughly and intimately; and were I called on to delineate his character, it should be in terms like these:

His mind was great and powerful, without being of the very first order; his penetration strong, though not so acute as that of Newton, Bacon, or Locke; and as far as he saw, no judgment was ever sounder. He was slow in operation, being little aided by invention of imagination, but sure in conclusion. Hence the common remark of his officers, of the advantage he derived from councils of war, when, hearing all suggestions, he selected what was best; and certainly no general ever planned his battles more judiciously. But if deranged from the course of the action, he was slow in a readjustment The consequence was that he often failed in the field, but rarely against an enemy in station, as at York and Boston. He was incapable of fear, meeting personal dangers with the calmest unconcern. Perhaps the strongest feature in his character was prudence, never acting till every circumstance, every consideration was maturely weighed, refraining if he saw a doubt; but, when once decided, going through with his purpose, whatever obstacle opposed.—His integrity was the most pure, his justice the most inflexible I have ever known: no motives of interest or consanguinity, of friendship or hatred, being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in every sense of the word, a wise, a good, and a great man. —Correspondence of Thomas Jefferson.

Sparks and Splinters.

An eclipse of the son—Cut off without a penny.

A real teetotal curiosity—A pair of water-tight boots.

A man whom we can put up with—A good hotel-keeper.

The most approved way to raise beets is to take hold of the tops and pull.

It is hard to respect old age when one gets sold on a venerable pair of chickens.

An old wine-bibber says that an empty champagne bottle is like an orphan, because it has lost its pop.

Softening Hard Water.—This is usually done with sal soda, the effect is to hurt the clothes that are washed in the water thus prepared, and the hands also. It is because there is an excess of the soda, more than unites with the acid of the water, which makes it hard. The remedy is easy: Use enough of the salt to take up the acid, and no more. In this way both acid and soda disappear, leaving a neutral salt which is harmless. The water will be soft. Test a certain amount of water, beginning with a very little soda, and adding more if you find you need it. With one own spring water, which is hard, a lump of soda the size of a large pea to a pint of water is about the right proportion. Of course the amount of the salt should be according to the degree of hardness of the water.

Length of Roots—The soil has to do with the length and number of roots. In light, poor soil, I find roots of June grass four feet below the surface. People are apt to underestimate the length, amount, and importance of the finer grasses, wheat, oats, etc. Some roots of clover and Indian corn are large enough to be seen by every one on slight examination. A young wheat plant, when pulled up, only shows a small part of its roots. They go down often four to six feet. It needs very careful examination to show that clover and Indian corn have any more weight of roots than June grass. They probably do not contain more.

The roots grow best where the best food is to be found. They grow in greater or less quantity in every direction. If one finds good food, it flourishes and sends out numerous branches. Many of the smaller roots of trees die every autumn when the leaves die, and others grow in the spring. Near a cherry tree in my yard was a rustic basket without a bottom, filled with rich soil. On removing the basket and earth, cherry roots were found in large numbers near the top of the soil. They had grown full of small branches where the soil was good. Roots in soil will grow up just as well as down, and do this.—Prof. Beale.

The German Reform Church reports the following progress for the century: Ministers, from 23 to 650; congregations, from 65 to 1,350; members, from 13,000 to 145,000; communicants, from 8,000 to 123,000; Sunday-schools, none to 75,000. This is the Calvinistic Church of Germany.

The Pastor's Work.

The feeding of the flock, the perpetuation of the Christian ministry, the administration of the sacraments and the exercise of discipline are prominent among the obligations of the pastoral office. To meet them aright requires devotion to Christ, wisdom, holy independence, constancy, great love of souls, gentleness and meekness.—It is Dr. Johnson, we believe, who calls prudence wisdom applied to practice. It implies circumspection, looking around, foresight of probable consequences, and guarding against such as may be evil. In a pastor this is a virtue of eminent rank. A thousand occasions are calling for its exercise The want of it has often thrown mildew and blight over the fairest early promise, and marred the best prospects of ministerial success and usefulness. There can be no doubt but that some preachers are imprudent in conversation. Frivolous, egotistical, or, worse still, mischief making, their talk undoes all the good their preaching may have done. In a position to hear many things confidentially, to be consulted by persons in trouble, to be referred to in disputes, a prudent minister knows how to keep his own counsel. In cases where it is important that his lips should be sealed the grave itself were not more silent. His influence, prudently wielded, may heal many a breach between alienated friends, or imprudently exerted, may embitter and render perpetual a feud. Imprudent conduct, where there has been no criminal intention, but only a heedless want of ordinary circumspection, has rendered many a minister liable to the most injurious suspicions. In short, the management of difficulties, times of great spiritual declension, critical seasons and important opportunities ... demand in an eminent degree, discretion and prudence on the part of him to whom is entrusted the care of souls.

It has been said, and well said, that a pastor should cultivate a courageous and cheerful temper. "God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power." There will occur in the pastor's official life many an occasion, which will test and tax his power of endurance. "He that is an hireling and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming and leaveth the sheep and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep." But the good shepherd faces threatened danger, meets the difficulty and protects the flock at all hazards. In the discharge of his duties, sometimes the pastor is exposed to coldness, bitterness, even hatred and scorn. He cannot but feel keenly the ingratitude and apathy which now and then, even on the part of his own brother, may be manifested towards him. He needs courage to bear with equanimity and constancy, trials like these, and to overcome them by an unutterable love of souls. Then how often is he tempted to discouragement by little or no apparent success in his ministry. He has the greatest work, the noblest aims of all men—he needs the firmest principles If he is properly enlightened, if he is a man of devout spiritual and holy life, he will seek to do his duty and leave all results to God. This will effectually preserve him from discouragement. It is true he will often, in the discharge of his ministerial duties, be the subject of harsh and sinful remarks, but trusting in the grace afforded, he stands firmly amidst the fever and selfishness of the world, as one whom the tainted atmosphere cannot harm.

Rev. L J. Holden, in charge of Rolesville circuit, closed a meeting at Andrew Chapel on Saturday last which resulted in 52 conversions and 36 accessions to the church. This was a very powerful work, of only seven days continuance. At Sidney Church another appointment on his charge, near this city, a promising revival is now in progress. We were present at the commencement of the meeting on Sabbath, and took part in the exercises. The congregation was very large, and several persons presented themselves for prayer—three came forward to the altar and six or eight knelt in the congregation. Surely the Lord is doing great things for the church in many portions of our work.

Rev. Norval Wilson, of the Baltimore Conference, and father of Rev. Alphens W. Wilson, D. D. of Washington, died on the 9th inst., in the 74th year of his age. He was a minister of high endowments.

The Indian Question.

The Sioux Indians, with their allies, are causing great trouble to the government and have baffled the soldiers that have been sent against them.—Gen Custer and three hundred of his followers, though fighting with unexampled bravery, were surrounded by the savages and the entire command was destroyed, not one remaining to tell the story of the horrifying massacre. And now Generals Crook and Terry are facing the Indians, anxious to avenge the death of their late comrades, but hesitating to advance too far into the hostile country lest they also fall into the snare which the wily Indian is apt to set for them Congress, aware of the inadequacy of the force in the Indian country, has ordered an increase of the cavalry and infantry regiments for the war against the red men, and Generals Sherman and Sheridan are fixed in their purpose to bring the war to a speedy close by a vigorous campaign and, if it be necessary, to exterminate the Indian tribes. The Indians seem to be led by brave, experienced and wily chiefs, and it will take much blood and treasure to overcome them. There have been but few skillful Indian fighters in our history,—Washington being, perhaps, the only General who showed a thorough knowledge of the Indian character and his mode of fighting. The Sioux are strong in numbers and are constantly being reinforced by allies and young warriors from other tribes.

The Indian question is one which has perplexed our government for many years. How to deal with them so as to make them satisfied with the wrongs which have been heaped upon them, and keep them quiet and submissive while being robbed and driven from their hunting grounds, has been a matter of great moment and anxiety to the pale faces. The treatment that the Indians have received since the discovery and first settlement of America has been a disgrace to the civilization and humanity of Americans. In the first place they, have been cheated out of their lands and hunting-grounds and made to recede before the ever encroaching foot of the white man. It has been assumed that the tribal condition, is the only one suited to the Indian character and habits, and no attempt has been made to bring them under the subjection of good civilized government and wholesome laws so as to change their rude character and habits and make good citizens of them. Instead, they have been put on reservations and removed time and again as the whites have wanted their lands and valuable mines: they have been deceived by the promises of the government and defrauded by its agents until, in their estimation, pale face is synonymous with perfidy. It is no wonder, then, that they continue wild and savage and resist the advance of the white men upon the rich gold bearing Black Hills.

Instead of being driven still further across the continent, settled upon rugged mountains and made the prey of government agents, they ought to be put under civilizing influences, taught the arts of agriculture and other useful pursuits, and endowed in time with the privileges of citizenship. If they were subject to and received the benefits of the laws which regulate and benefit other peoples; if schools and churches were established in their midst, their tribal relations, savage feelings, and rude habits would soon disappear, and they would become as good citizens as any the country holds. While they are treated as savages, separate and distinct from citizens of the government and as entitled to no rights or consideration except such as are given to dangerous wild-beasts, they may be expected to hate the whites and to give the Government continual trouble.

We learn from Rev. J. P. Moore, that Tar River circuit, of which Rev. R S. Webb is the pastor, is enjoying a gracious revival season. At Trinity the church has recently been greatly blessed, and many members added, and the past week the church at Banks' Chapel has been greatly blessed. Rev. W. C. Norman of Person Street Church, this city, has been assisting Bro. Webb at the latter place. He informs us that twenty-five professed faith in Christ and twenty-two joined the church up to Friday evening.

A note from Bro. A. D. Betts informs us that his little daughter, Tempie, six years of age, arose from her bed while asleep, walked across the room, climbed ont at a window and fell fifteen feet upon the hardest ground. Her right thigh was broken. We trust that the little sufferer may be speedily restored to health and strength, and that no serious consequences will follow the accident. It was a kind Providence that averted a fatal result from the fall.

Rev. Dr. Blackwell, who was elected President of Randolph Macon College to succeed Dr. Duncan, has declined the position on account of the state of his health. Dr. Duncan will continue to act as President until the meeting of the Virginia Conference in November.

A private note from Bro. Yates, informs us that the Sabbath School Conference at Snow Hill, on his District, was a fine success. Bro. Kornegay's address, he says, was extraordinarily good. We shall likely have an account of the occasion for our next issue.

Trinity College.

We are gratified to learn that the outlook for the approaching session is good. An unusual number of applications have been made, and with the ordinary percentage of former students, the number next term must be considerably increased. The College is prepared to meet all reasonable demands, and it is hoped every part of the Conference may be well represented. Our influences ought to stir the whole people with a desire of higher education, and bring all within Methodist influence to a higher literary status. It is certainly a legitimate part of ministerial work to promote in every way the education of our sons and daughters; to see that the mental and moral culture within and about the church not only equal the world's production, but surpasses all that can be offered from any external source. Trinity, Greensboro and Davenport offer every necessary facility; our church and friends can fill them all with students, and all our interests would thereby be greatly promoted. We can educate and we must. The denomination that educates will be preeminent. Let us bring forward our resources, sustain our institutions and take care of ourselves.

The Wonderful Preacher.

The venerable preacher of righteousness, Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce, who is almost as old as American Methodism and whose labors have contributed much to its history and success, still holds on to life and preaches with unabated powers A correspondent of the Nashville Advocate, writing an account of the commencement at Emory College, says:

"At 4 o'clock P. M, the venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce preached. A wonderful sermon from a wonderful man! His voice is feeble, and part of the congregation could not hear well, but to those of us who were situated so as to hear, it was a rich feast indeed. He preached more than an hour, and his sermon was one of the most satisfactory expositions of some of the most important doctrines of the Bible that I have ever heard or read. The scene at the conclusion of the sermon was more like a camp-meeting than a Commencement occasion—some were rejoicing aloud, and many preachers and laymen lingered around the altar and in the aisles, singing, talking, and rejoicing together as in the midst of a gracious revival. It was indeed good to be there. None were more filled with joy than the dear old Dr. himself. What a man! When shall we see his like again? Wonderful by the grace of God! grand in the experiences and achievements of a long life, and in hope of that immortal crown almost in reach! What are empires of thorns to such a life, such a hope!"

News from the Vineyard.

CHAPEL HILL.

Bro. Renn, writing from Durham, under date of Aug. 17th, says:

"We have enjoyed a gracious revival in the church at this place since the District Conference. Six were added to the membership and others are expected to join. Bro. Hendren was with me and labored faithfully most of the time."

YANCEYVILLE CIRCUIT.

Bro. Jenkins, writing from Yanceyville says:

"You may say to the friends of Zion that we had a great time at New Hope on the Yanceyville circuit. The Lord was with us. Some days looked like the olden times. God's people, Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians rejoiced together in hope of the glory of God Between 15 and 20 were converted. We are in the midst of a promising work at Prospect; 1 conversion and several penitents yesterday. We had a good time. Pray for us. The outlook is good."

NEW PORT.

Bro. Jas. Mahoney, writing from Newport, Aug. 9th, says:

"I commenced a meeting at New Port Sunday night a week ago—and continued till, and embraced last Tuesday night. We had no ministerial aid until last Sunday. During the first week of the meeting, Bros. D. McCain, H. C. Jones and others of our lay ministry, worked faithfully with the mourners, rendering very efficient service and to great profit—Sunday morning before we closed, Bro Jno. Jones came to our help, and labored with the zeal, energy and power, that have for many years characterized the man. Dr E L Perkins was with us very little owing to affliction. What he did do was greatly to our aid. The meeting was owned and blessed of God; 25 persons professed conversion, 29 joined the church; 17 were baptised, and, what is very remarkable for that people, at that place, they were all baptised by pouring. The most of the converts had been reared under the influence of Primitive Baptist preachers and parents. The church received during the meeting a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost. Thank the Lord!"

Copies of the Bible in one hundred different languages are offered for sale on the Centennial grounds. The sales thus far have been very large, especially in French and Spanish. As at the day of Pentecost each man was enabled to hear the Gospel in his own tongue, so he may again at this later gathering of the nations.

Pain, like a trusty sentinel, guards every avenue leading to the citadel of life, and we are admonished whenever danger aproaches.

Hillsboro District Conference.

The tenth Annual session of the Hillsboro District Conference, M. E. Church South, met in the Methodist Church in Chapel Hill, Aug 2nd 1876, and continued four days.

The president. Rev. L. L. Hendren, P. E., of the District, ruled the Conference with ease and affability, and won general esteem by his amiability with the duties of the chair. H. T. Jordan was elected Secretary, and Jas. Southgate assistant. These brethren performed their duties faithfully and to the entire satisfaction of all. They merited and have the thanks of the Conference.

The attendance of members was unusually large; there being forty four present at the opening of the morning session of the second day, and a number of others reported afterwards. All the charges were represented by their respective pastors except one; and that had three lay delegates present. All the charges were well represented by lay delegates except one, which was represented by its pastor There was a good attendance of the local ministry So all the District was well represented, and the Spiritual and financial condition of the several charges fully brought to light. The financial condition of the District is healthy and promising Notwithstanding the stringency of the times most of the charges expect to pay up their assessments.

Spiritnally the Church is in fine condition As shown in their reports the great desire of the preachers is to save sonls The people are feeling their influence. Some good revivals were reported, and doubtless we shall hear of many more.

The Presiding Elder called on each preacher, travelling and local, to give a statement of his personal experience and enjoyment in the work. Their responses were promptly given eliciting interest and sympathy, and no donbt resulted in much good both to preachers and people.

This may become an element of great spiritual power in the District Conference.

On Thursday Rev. W. H Moore delivered his address on "The Rise and Progress of the M. E Church, South" It was a fine effort; accurate in historical detail. displaying the facts that occasioned the separation to the complete vindication of the South; while his description of the progress of Southern Methodism glowed with striking passages of eloquence and power.

There was no Centennial speaker present for Friday (Drs. Craven and Jones having failed to come) and Rev. [illegible] made a fine impression upon all who heard it

On Saturday Dr. Bu khead delivered his address on "Methodism—the grounds of its success." It was a masterly production, and must take rank with the very best efforts of this Centennial of North Carolina Methodism. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, By the Hillsboro District Conference, that we tender Rev. L. S. Burkhead, D.D., our hearty thanks for the address this day delivered before us on "Methodism—the grounds of its success;" and also to Rev. W. H. Moore for his very interesting address on the M E. Church, South—Its Rise and Progress," and respectfully request them to furnish the same for publication in pamphlet form, for general circulation, at as early a period as will suit them."

There was preaching every night during the Conference and on Sunday, to large and appreciative congregation that was "good to the use of edifying," by members of the Conference, and by Rev. W. C. Norman and Dr Burkhead of Raleigh.

The following resolution was adopted.

"Resolved, That we heartily recommend the Raleigh CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to the patronage of our people, and that we will endeavor to increase its patronage" Also the following:

"Resolved, That it is the earnest desire and request of this District Conference that the Committee appointed for the purpose publish in book form as soon as practicable the proceedings of our late Centennial meeting held in Raleigh, N. C."

2nd, That we will bring this book before our people and do what we can to circulate it through our respective charges."

A committee was appointed to prepare for publication in the ADVOCATE a circular letter on infant baptism, which I suppose will be ready at an early day.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That we heartily endorse the plan adopted by the late Annual Conference for liquidating the indebtedness of our literary institutions, and cordially recommend the agents to the people throughout our district.

Resolved, That we recommend the Nashville Christian Advocate, the organ of the General Conference, and the entire literature of the Church to the patronage of all our people." Delegates to the Annual Conference: T. N. Jordan, A. Walker, I. N. Mann, A. G. Headen.

Altogether the Hillsboro District Conference was pleasant, harmonious and profitable, and we trust its influence will be felt and seen in its results throughout the entire District.

J. J. RENN.

Salisbury District Conference.

The Salisbury District Conference met at Mocksville August 10th, Rev. D. R. Bruton P. E. in the chair. All the preachers reported and the attendance of lay delegates was fair. Much interest was manifested both by members and visitors.

The spiritual state of the church in the District is good. There are many pions and devoted members who take great interest in the church. There have been revivals in different sections, some of them attended with gratifying results. Congregations are generally large and the people give attention to the preaching of the gospel. While there have not been a large number of accessions, but four have been dropped. Reports from the missions show that the gospel is being planted and that it is taking root.

There are a large number of Sunday Schools, generally in a prosperous condition. Much good is being done, and many are learning the lessons Christ taught. A lack of efficient teachers is much felt. The Conference passed a resolution urging ministers and laymen to establish Sunday schools wherever the children can be gathered together and to keep the schools open winter and summer.

The following resolution was proposed: Whereas, we regard family worship and social prayer essential to growth in grace and religious enjoyment And whereas, many of our people seem disposed to neglect these important means of grace.

Resolved, That we as lay members pledge our hearty co operation with our ministers in trying to establish prayer meetings wherever practicable, and pledge ourselves to keep up family altars in our respective homes.

The finances are right well up, considering the closeness of money at this time

Our church literature is well circulated in some parts and in others to a very limited extent. The Conference passed resolutions urging ministers and laymen to circulate the books and periodicals of the Nashville Publishing House; also, endorsing the Nashville Christian Advocate, the Raleigh Christian Advocate and the Southern Quarterly Review.

There is a general interest in education, though many are not educating their children according to their means. The annual report of Jonesville Male and Female School was read, and the Conference resolved as follows, to wit: That we are gratified to learn of the prosperity of this school and that its prospects are bright; and also that we cheerfully recommend it to the patronage and to the friends of education generally.

Revs. J. A. Cunninggim and V. A. Sharpe, our efficient College Agts, presented the claims of Trinity, Greensboro Female and Davenport Female Colleges in their own peculiar, forcible style. Rev. W. M. Roby, Pres., of Davenport Female College, made a speech for the Institution over which he presides, and in the interest of education generally.

Rev. M. L. Wood read a Historical sketch of Methodism in the Valley of Yadkin, reflecting great credit on the author for its abundant research.

The preaching during the Conference and on Sunday was of a good type, earnest and impressive. The people were not only edified and spiritually benefited, but the tone of Methodism was elevated and strengthened.

It was especially pleasing to note the progress in the District in the way of Church improvements. Sixteen churches have either been completed or are in process of building during the year. Most of these churches in their style and furnishing reflect great credit upon the builders and on Methodism.

The Conference recommended the establishing of two missions—one on Hunting Creek and the other in Alexander county.

Wilkesboro was selected as the place for the next District Conference.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, to wit: W. G Woods, D F. Holcomb, Perry Tomlin and R. R. Crawford, with John W. Mauney, B. F. Sumrow, J A. Hudson and J. A. Hawkins, alternates.

A resolution of thanks to the Pastors and members of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches for the tender of their churches to our use, during the Conference, was adopted.

Also a resolution of thanks to the citizens of Mocksville and vicinity for the kindness and hospitality shown the members of this Conference, was passed.

Conference adjourned 12th Aug.

JOHN W. MAUNEY, Sc'ty.

Dr. Bennett, of the Richmond Advocate, is more than half right when he remarks upon the connection between singing well, praying well, and paying well. Describing his visit to the Lynchburg District Conference, he says: "The reports showed the finances to be too far behind on most of the charges.—One brother sent a message that on his work money matters were lagging badly and "the singing is intolerable." There was point in this:—People that sing and pray well generally pay well. We recall a church on one of our earlier Circuits where they had poor singing, and where two of us got six dollars from that class for a year's work."

Home Again.

DEARLY BELOVED EDITORS: On the morning of the 4th of July, after making S. T. Nicholson, and Annie E. Lucas happy, by uniting them in marriage, I left Washington for Warrenton, where our District Conference was held—embracing the second Sunday. The Conference being held at the extreme end of our District, only a few of our lay delegates attended, but most of the preachers were on hand—especially our zealons, P. E, Dr. Closs, who never fails to be on hand, when and where the interest of the Church calls him. I take pleasure in saying that the interest of our Conference was greatly increased by the presence of a delegation from the Raleigh District—consisting of Rev. J. P. Moore, P. E, L S. Burkhead, W C. Norman, F. L. Reid and A A. Bostiamer We were all glad to have them there, and if they and others will come down to Washington next May, they can get some fit efuse shad that sport in the waters of Eastern Carolina The people in Warrenton are known to be clever, and they know how to entertain their friends.

I was honored with a home at Norwood's Hotel—one of the best in the State Bro F. L. Reid was my roommate and he can testify that they feed well. The most interesting thing to me, was the pleasure of calling the attention of the people to the condition of our Church in Washington, and asking them to respond to my proposition—"for a thousand persons to give me one dollar each," and, thank God! many of them responded cheerfully. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Leaving Warrenton I took a flying trip through Mt. Olive, Clinton, and Cokesbury circuits—visiting my friends, and at the same time—asking and obtaining funds for my Church. The most liberal enjoy being asked to give. After spending a week at Blockersville with kindred and friends, I passed on to Fayetteville, and spent one night with my good brother, W. W. Cole The people complained of the hard times, and I did not ask many to help me—and of course raised only a few dollars. Some promised to send me a donation—which they will do soon. Taking the train at Fayetteville, I soon found myself at Jonesboro—a village of clever people on the Western Rail Road.

I had scarcely stepped from the cars when a friend gave me a hearty greeting—and in the same breath asked me "if I were after money?" I suppose that he thought I was still Agent for Trinity College! His question so unnerved me that I never rallied from it, and left Jonesboro without a dollar. Beloved friends—send me [illegible] entertained at Bro. G. S Cole's. As I am fond of the Cole people, I will here state that Bro. H. P. Cole sent me a money order the other day—which amount he raised for me at his District Conference. From Jonesboro I made my way direct to Louisburg to attend the Raleigh District Conference. I reached there on Wednesday and found nearly all of the preachers and delegates there The people on the Raleigh District are perfectly enthused with the idea of a District Conference—hence it was a grand success at Louisburg. The Conference, and especially the visitors were superbly entertained. It was a glorious time for me—both temporal and spiritual. The Lord was there to bless—and he helped me. Thank God! The people responded to my appeal for help like they felt it. On my return I spent a day in Raleigh—with my people, but did not try to get money—as I had seen some of the Raleigh people at Louisburg, and they all responded or will soon Here is my plan for Raleigh—and surrounding country. I hereby appoint my good friend, S.C. White, of the State National Bank, my agent to solicit aid for our Church, in Washington, N C I spent one night in Goldsboro—and next morning while waiting for the train, I went out and secured a neat little sum in a few minutes. During my trip, I raised in cash and pledges about $150. I heartily thank all who helped us. It is proper to state that I attended Bro. Yates District Conference in June at Kinston, and met with success. 241 have responded up to date.

Yours truly,
B. B. CULBRETH.

Greensboro District Conference School.

Allow me to say through the Advocate to those, who have applied for a situation as Music toacher in the District Conference school, and to the public generally, that I have secured for that position Miss E. F. Hester, a most accomplished young lady, well skilled in the science of Music, a very successful teacher and, as a performer, equalled by few and excelled by none. Young ladies and others desiring to be well instructed in this beautiful accomplishment can find here the very best advantages, and all young persons of both sexes desiring thorough instruction in all the branches of academic study, and to lay the foundation for a thorough collegiate education, will find the District Conference school located at this place possessing facilities inferior to none in the State.

Death of Rev. C. C. Andrews.

Rev. C. C. Andrews, was born in Liberty co Ga. June 21st, 1829, and died in Belton, Hall county, Ga. July 26th, 1876.

Being an old acquaintace of Bro. Andrews, and of his father and family, I have been requested to write this obituary notice. Bro. Andrews was blessed with pious parents, and was taught from childhood, the way of salvation. When about twelve years old, he professed religion and joined the Methodist Church, and henceforth, to the day of his death, his religious course was unwavering. Nothing moved him from his settled purpose to glorify God on earth and to gain heaven. To use his own oft repeated language, the constant desire of his heart, and effort of his life, was to leave the world better than he found it. And hence he sought by diligent study and earnest prayer to God, to prepare himself in mind and heart, for the important duties of a christian life, in all its relations, He graduated with the first honor, at Trinity College, N C. June 24th 1858, and was married to Miss Mary S Robstean, of Fayetteville, N. C July 11th, 1859. He had been impressed from his youth, that he must preach the gospel, but he had such humble views of himself as a follower of Christ, that his timid heart shrunk from the idea of taking upon himself such weighty responsibilities, and this hesitation and delay in responding to the call of God, often filled his mind with gloom and his heart with anxiety and trouble. But during the second year after his happy marriage, after much conveil with his pious wife, and many entreaties on her part, urging him to go forward, and after many hours of earnest prayer, and serious thought, he gave his consent to receive of the church, license to preach, and then all gloom passed away, and he was bright and happy He was ordained Deacon by Bishop McTyeire, Dec. 1st 1866, at the Georgia Annual Conference at Americus Ga, and was subsequently ordained Elder.
